ROYAL ALBERT HALL.—On Wednesday evening a grand miscellaneous concert, under the patronage of the Duke and Duchess of Teck, in aid of a benevolent institution, was given by Nurden and Peacock, Indian and Colonial contractors, at the Royal Albert Hall, when Mesdames Lemmens-Sherrington, Patey, and Miss Sinclair, and Messrs. E. Lloyd and George Fox appeared in a succession of vocal music. The grand organ was presided over by Mr. Willing, and the band of the Royal Artillery performed some admirable selections of march, valse, and other music. The Royal Albert Hall Choral Society was also present. The conductor was Mr. Barnby. The concert proved a complete success.

LORD SALISBURY'S INDIAN POLICY.—At a meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce on April 19, the following letter was read from the India-office :—"India-office, March 31, 1876. Sir,—I am directed by Lord Salisbury to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 29th inst., and to express the gratification with which he has received a copy of the resolution of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce passed on Wednesday last. Lord Salisbury is fully convinced that the fiscal policy which he has earnestly pressed upon the Government of India, and which has met with your support, is calculated to promote the best interests of the people of India.—I am, &c., HORACE WALPOLE.—Thomas Browning, Esq."

DEATH OF COLONEL J. P. H. CROWE, V.C., LATE 10TH FOOT.—The death of this officer is announced. He entered the army in 1846, and served in the Persian war of 1856, and in the Indian mutiny campaign with Havelock's column, from its first taking the field in 1857. He was present at the relief of Lucknow, where he was wounded, at the defence of Alumbagh under Sir James Outram, at the siege and capture of Lucknow, and various other operations. He received the Victoria Cross for being the first to enter a redoubt at Bourze-kee-Chowkee, and entrenched village in front of the Busherut-gunge, on Aug. 12, 1857, during Havelock's advance on Lucknow. Colonel Crowe died suddenly at Norwood on April 12, from disease of the heart.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—The annual general meeting of the Oriental Bank Corporation was held on April 20, at the offices, Threadneedle-street ; Mr. G. Arbuthnot, the chairman, presiding. Mr. Campbell, the chief manager, read the report, which stated that the net profit for 1875, including £6,000 brought forward from the last account, had been £174,070, after defraying current expenses and providing for all bad and doubtful debts. A dividend was declared of 5 per cent. for the half-year ended the 31st of December, making 11 per cent. for the year, leaving £9,070 to be carried to next year's account.

NERBUDDA COAL AND IRON COMPANY.—The directors of the Nerbudda Coal and Iron Company, in their report for the past year, state that they sent out to India a representative of their board, who, after visiting their different estates, has returned to England, and his report on the colliery works, &c., has now been published. It is proposed to consolidate and reduce the present share capital by the conversion of every five shares of £1 each, with 8s. per share paid up, into one share of £3 with £2 paid, thus reducing the liability by two-fifths. The net profit amounts to £7,794. 0s. 4d., out of which it is proposed to pay a dividend of 5 per cent., making, with the interim distribution of 2$\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. last July, 7$\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for the year ending Dec. 31 last, and carrying forward a balance of £266. 8s. 2d. to the new account.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO THE CITY.—At a meeting held on Thursday last, of the Reception Committee appointed by the Court of Common Council, to make the following arrangements for the visit which the Prince of Wales will pay to the City on his return from India, it was stated that a telegram had been received from Sir William Knollys, announcing that the Prince of Wales had fixed May 19 next as the day on which he would attend the banquet and ball to be given at the Guildhall. It was also stated that probably the Princess of Wales would accompany his Royal Highness, and that he would enter the City by way of the Holborn-viaduct, and pass along Newgate-street, Cheapside, and King-street, to the Guildhall.—The fête, which is in course of preparation at the Crystal Palace, and which will have the national character of a welcome to the Prince of Wales, will be honoured by the presence of his Royal Highness and the Princess, who have been graciously pleased to accept the invitation of the directors.

ATTEMPT TO SEND DANGEROUS GOODS BY A P. AND O. STEAMER.—A mitigated fine of £70, with £10 costs, was inflicted at the Bow-street Police-court, on Saturday, the 15th inst., on Henry William Johnson, a merchant, charged with attempting to send in one of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's ships certain dangerous goods, without distinctly marking their nature on the outside of the packages, and without giving written notice of the character of such goods to the owner of the said ship. The goods illegally sent consisted of photographic chemicals of a highly dangerous description, some of which exploded and led to the discovery of the concealment which had been made in regard to them. In reference to the above prosecution we are asked to state that Mr. Johnson ordered his agents to ship the goods in the ordinary course, but that a clerk omitted to send an invoice with them ; the consequence being that the agents sent the case containing the dangerous articles to the Peninsular and Oriental Company, thinking it was personal luggage.

NEW INDIAN COUNCIL ACT.—An Act has just been printed to amend the law relating to certain appointments to the Council of India. After referring to the statutes passed in 1858 and 1869 on the subject, the present Act empowers the Secretary of State for India to appoint any person having professional or other peculiar qualifications to be a member of the Council with the same salary, pension, and other rights and privileges, &c., as if he had been elected or appointed before the Act of 1869. Where any person appointed under this Act is, at his appointment, a member of the Council, his period for the purposes of the present statute is to be reckoned from the time of his first appointment or election to the Council. "The special reasons for every appointment under this Act shall be stated in a minute of the Secretary of State for India, and shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament. Not more than three persons appointed under this Act shall be members of the Council at the same time, nor shall the provisions of sections 7 and 10 of the Act of 1858, with reference to the number of the be Council and the qualification of the major part of the members, affected by this Act."

INVENTION BY AN INDIAN CIVILIAN.—Mr. R. H. W. Dunlop, C.B., of the Bengal Civil Service, has invented a series of plates for the hands and feet as aids to human natation, which were practically exhibited last week at the Marylebone Swimming Baths, in the presence of a large number of swimming amateurs. The plates are made of wood. Those for the hands resemble in shape a beaver's tail, and have a superficial area of sixty to seventy square inches. The plates for the feet are cordate in form, and resemble an artist's palate, the facility with which they are used being increased by the exclusion of the heel, for which a gap is made. After Mr. Dunlop had delivered a lecture on swimming, and descriptive of the plates, two expert swimmers went into the water, and showed that a very powerful stroke may be attained by their means. One of the swimmers swam with a forty-two pound weight suspended from his neck, and another traversed the length of the bath dressed and equipped as a soldier, and with a half-stone weight on his shako. A third went the same distance along the bottom of the bath with inflated belts. Mr. Dunlop asserts that the use of his plates raises the specific gravity of the body to that of the surrounding element, and that a swimmer who has adopted them may with perfect safety go to sleep in the water.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—The annual meeting of this Bank was held on April 19. The Chairman (Mr. William Paterson), moved the adoption of the report (an abstract of which has appeared in our columns), and congratulated the shareholders upon the statements contained therein, especially considering that the past year had been a most trying one for banks as well as merchants. Taking into account the numerous failures which had taken place—many of which were in the Eastern trade—it was saisfactory that the bank had only been interested to a very small extent, and that any loss thereby had been written off. The dividend for the past half-year would be as before, viz., 5 per cent. per annum (free of income-tax). It had been the intention of the board to add a larger sum to the reserve fund, but since the close of last year, owing to the decreased value of silver, there had been much discussion as to the future of exchanges, and whether or not the depreciation in silver should be permanent, the directors had thought it best to take the worst view and to make some provision for such a contingency with reference to that portion of their capital which remained at the branches or elsewhere for local employment. He then spoke of the labours of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, sitting to inquire into the question of the depreciated value of silver, and also said that it might be that the mines of California, instead of over-supplying the world with silver, might shrink, as other mines in that quarter had done, and of which a good deal had been heard lately. The bank was doing a fair and steady business—more might be done, but the directors, under the present state of things, had thought it well to pursue a conservative policy. The report was seconded for adoption by Mr. Jones, and was carried after some discussion.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The annual general meeting of this bank was held on April 18, at the Bank, Old Broad-street, Mr. G. G. Nicol, the chairman, presiding. The report announces a profit of £109,615. Out of this sum a dividend of 4 per cent., absorbing £30,000, has been paid for the half-year ended 30th June last, and it is now proposed to pay a further dividend of like amount. In addition, £49,614 is added to reserve, making it £100,714. The Chairman, in moving its adoption, said they had had a year of anxiety, and under the circumstances he thought the profits were satisfactory, amounting, after providing for bad and doubtful debts, to about 16 per cent. The year had been one of declining exchanges, which had also increased their difficulties. The accounts indicated an increasing volume of business, which was very satisfactory. Their Government securities amounted to £420,891, and they would naturally conclude that this was almost entirely rupee paper. There had been a great fall in this paper since the beginning of the year, and they might, therefore, have had some little loss, but, on the other hand, they some time ago purchased very largely of the paper at panic prices, which had been remitted to India and sold very satisfactorily. Referring to exchanges, he said since the bank was established, twenty years ago, the par of exchange had been invariably fixed at 2s. per rupee. He held a statement of exchange for the past twenty-two years, and for fifteen years the exchange had been over 2s., and for seven years below 2s. They had found the system work very well, and they saw no reason to alter it. It would be unwise for them to adapt any change where there was a probability of the exchange recovering its former value, and the present state of exchange they regarded as only temporary. The depreciation of silver was not the cause of the low exchange, but the effect. The cause was simply the balance of trade being adverse to India. He had frequently condemned the system of the lavish abuse of credit, under which the exports from India had been immensely swollen of late years. The report was adopted unanimously.

INDIA OFFICE, 10th April, 1876.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL GIVES NOTICE, That he will be PREPARED to RECEIVE on FRIDAY, the 28th of April instant, at or before Twelve o'clock, TENDERS for a LOAN of £4,000,000, on Security of Stock to be created under the provisions of the Act 37 Vict. ch. 3, and to bear Interest at the rate of Four Pounds per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly at the Bank of England, on the 5th April and the 5th October in each year.

The Stock not to be redeemable until the 10th October, 1888, but to be redeemable at par on or after that day, upon one year's previous notice having been given in the London Gazette by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

The Books of the Stock will be kept at the Bank of England, where all Assignments and Transfers will be made. No Stamp Duties whatsoever will be charged on the Transfers.

The Tenders to be for the whole or any part of such Loan, but not for sums of less than £500 Stock, and to state what amount of money will be given for every £100 of the said Stock. Tenders at a price including fractions of a shilling other than sixpence will not be accepted. Tenders by the same person at various prices must be made out and delivered separately. Each separate Tender is to be delivered in, sealed, at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England, and the amount of Stock subscribed for to be written on the outside of the Tender.

A deposit of £5 per cent. upon the amount of Stock tendered for must, at the same time, be paid at the same Office, to be returned in the event of the Tenders not being accepted, and parties tendering must be careful not to enclose the Deposit in the sealed Tender.

So much of the amount tendered and accepted, to be paid at the Bank of England on account of the Secretary of State for India in Council, on Friday, the 5th May, 1876, as, when added to the Deposit paid on the Tenders being delivered, will leave Eighty Pounds for every One Hundred Pounds of Stock, to be paid as under, viz.:—

£30 per cent. on Tuesday, the 30th May, 1876;
£30 per cent. on Tuesday, the 27th June, 1876;
£20 per cent. on Tuesday, the 1st August, 1876;

but parties who so desire may pay up in full, and will be allowed a discount at the rate of Four Pounds per cent. per annum upon the anticipated payments.

The Dividend payable on the 5th October, 1876, to be a six months' dividend upon the Capital Amount of Stock contracted for on the said 28th April.

In the event of the receipt of Tenders (at or above the minimum price to be fixed by the Secretary of State for India in Council on the 28th April) for a larger amount than that proposed to be raised, the Tenders, at the lowest price accepted, will be subject to a pro rata diminution. No allotment will be made of a less amount than £50.

Due notice will be given when the Scrip Certificates are ready, and these will be delivered only to the parties entitled, or to their order, at the Chief Cashier's Office at the Bank of England.

For each instalment after the payment of the first, which is due on the 5th of May, 1876, a proportional amount of Stock will be created for the contributors. The Stock for the first instalment, including the Deposit, to be created at the same time with that which will be due on the last.

No Tender will be received after Twelve o'clock on the said 28th day of April, nor unless upon a printed Form, which must not be enclosed in an Envelope.

Forms of Tender may be obtained at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England, or of Mr. HUBERT SCOTT, the Broker to the Secretary of State for India in Council, 16, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

ADVERTISEMENTS	6

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, April 10; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, April 8; Calcutta, April 7.

THE event of the previous week in Bombay was the arrival of various great personages, from different quarters, bound on different errands. On Thursday, April 6, it was Sir Frederick Haines, the new Commander-in-Chief, who landed from the Overland steamer. On the same day Lord Napier reached the Western Capital on his way home—too ill, we regret to hear, to be received with the usual honours. A day earlier Sir W. Merewether appeared in Bombay, whither he had come from Sind. Friday, the 7th, saw the arrival of the Nawáb Sir Sálar Jung from Haidarabad, in good time to take part in the reception of the new Viceroy, Lord Lytton, who, landing from the Orontes that same evening, was formally welcomed by Lord Napier, Sir F. Haines, and all the leading officials in Bombay. Among Lord Lytton's followers was Colonel Sir L. Pelly, who joined him in Egypt.

THE meeting of these personages was quickly followed by their dispersion. Sir Sálar Jung started on the 8th in one of the Rubattino steamers for Naples and England. After one busy day of sightseeing and interviewing, Lord Lytton set off for Calcutta on the morning of April 9; followed thither the next day by Sir F. Haines, while Lord Napier on that same Monday set off for England in the Austrian Lloyds' steamer Ettore.

IN the course of his interview with the Bombay Chamber of Commerce Lord Lytton appears to have spoken fully and freely on nearly all the topics brought to his notice, the while he carefully avoided anything in the nature of a promise or a declaration of policy. As a matter of course the condition of the exchange market was one subject of discussion, with special regard to the action of the Government in advertising for tenders for India Office Bills with a reserved price which was carefully concealed. His lordship merely thanked the speakers for their suggestion that bills on India should be sold at the market rate or else should not be advertised for sale. Touching the cotton duties, the new Viceroy seems to have agreed that the duty on the finer fabrics which are not turned out by the Indian mills could not be considered a protective duty, since it enlarged the revenue without benefiting the Bombay mills, which only produce the coarser fabrics. The £40,000 a year which the coarse goods imported added to the revenue might be deemed more or less protective, but it was not easy to see how the much larger amount of £800,000 a year levied on the finer goods could be in any sense regarded as protective. The duty on coarse goods ought therefore to go, while the duty on fine goods might, so far as the principles of Free Trade were concerned, be very well retained.

THE reply of the India Office to the Indian Government on the Uncovenanted Service Leave Rules has just appeared in the Gazette. The late Viceroy had wished to know how his Government were to interpret the instructions embodied in the Duke of Argyll's despatches of 1870 and 1871. Lord Salisbury in his answer virtually re affirms the principle enounced by his predecessor that "the Uncovenanted Service should be principally reserved for the natives of the country, and that superior appointments, which require English training and experience, should be made in England." He wishes it to be clearly understood that speaking in reference to the future, the less favourable Leave Rules will be applicable to all Uncovenanted Servants appointed after the year 1871, unless such servants have been appointed in England or else nominated in India with the sanction of her Majesty's Secretary. The benefit of the "more favourable Leave Rules" is to be extended to the 304 officers under the Government of India, the 20 officers under the Government of Madras, the 19 officers and 4 forest officers under the Government of Bombay, the 10 officers employed in Mysor, the educational officers, the officers of the Marine Department who have served in the Indian Navy or Bengal Marine, and the Medical officers specified in the lists transmitted by the Indian Government. Of certain other officers named by the late Viceroy, Lord Salisbury will concede the same privilege to those who now draw salaries of Rs. 6,000 a year and upwards.

COLONEL LOCH, Military Commandant of the Sind Frontier, appears to have incurred the displeasure of the Government by ignoring the superior authority in political matters of Colonel Munro. He has, therefore, been removed from Sind, and sent off to Haidarabad to officiate for General Wright, Commandant of the Haidarabad Contingent, who was about to take six months' furlough. His place in Sind has been filled up for the present by Colonel Nuttall, of the 22nd Bombay N.I.

THE meeting held on April 8, in the Town-hall, to consider the form of a memorial to Lord Northbrook, is said to have been well attended. Sir R. Temple took the chair. A few members of the Indian League wished to propose an amendment to the first resolution, but the meeting refused to hear them, and they were hissed out. It was finally decided to erect a statue, and a large committee was appointed to collect subscriptions, and to communicate with Madras and Bombay.

THE rising in Bastar was growing more serious, and fresh troops had been ordered to the scene. Forty thousand rounds of ammunition were despatched from the Madras Arsenal, in case the 30,000 peasants who were "up" should show fight.

Digitized by Google

The Madras Athenæum understands that the rising is not against the Rajah, but against the Rajah's Prime Minister, who "has been practising extortion on the poor agriculturists to such an extent as to cause them to revolt."

MR. BRODHURST, the Judge of Benares, was going on a special mission to Singapore to see about the final abandonment of the Indian penal station at that place. Singapore, it will be remembered, preceded the Andamans as a place of penal exile, but the old convict establishment is now to be broken up, and Mr. Brodhurst, says the Pioneer, "will determine whether it may not now be possible, without imperiling public interests, to allow some of its hoariest offenders to return to India."

THE Gazette of India of the 31st March gives full details of the Indian Budget for 1876-77, as well as the regular Estimates for 1875-76, and the "actual" returns for 1874-75. These last are so far satisfactory that they show a surplus of £2,556,990, or £667,990 above the regular estimate. If, however, we deduct the exceptional outlay incurred on account of the famine in Bengal, amounting to £2,237,860, the surplus for the year 1874-75 stands at £319,130. The outlay on reproductive works, which is not included in the above estimate, was £4,249,566, so that the borrowed money spent came to £4,000,000. The regular estimates for the year 1875-76, which are made up of actual figures for at least ten months, show also satisfactory results. The income, which was estimated in the Budget at £49,820,000, will probably exceed that amount by £1,171,000, while the charges which were estimated at £49,314,000, are now expected to show a decrease of £226,000. The surplus will therefore be £1,903,000, instead of £506,000, as first estimated; or, after deducting the famine charges for the year, it will stand at £1,247,000. The bulk of this gain is due to the opium revenue, which will yield an increase over the Budget Estimate of £483,000. Owing to the drought in Madras, the land revenue will probably show a small decrease, but all the other main sources of income exhibit a steady and general improvement. Notwithstanding the changes effected by the new Tariff Act, the Customs' revenue has been very productive, while the receipts from excise, salt, stamps, Post-office, and telegraphs show an important increase over those of the previous year. Under the head of reduced expenditure special reference is made to the large reduction of £581,000 in the amount of guaranteed interest paid to the railway companies; a result partly due to the visit of the Prince of Wales. The amount of loss by exchange is stated at £1,410,000, or £35,000 beyond the Budget estimate, which was calculated on the average rate of 1s. 9⅞d. per rupee. It is added that the loss would have been much greater if the Home Government had not ceased to sell their bills during the last two months of the financial year. The outlay on reproductive public works, estimated at £4,300,000, is now expected to be £4,143,000.

IN the statement accompanying the Budget Estmates for 1876-77 much stress is laid upon the great difficulties which attend Indian finance at the present time, in consequence of the depreciation in the value of silver, and the fall in the Eastern exchanges. But for this cause, the estimated growth in the revenue would have enabled the Government to show a surplus of one million sterling. The aggregate receipts from all branches of the revenue are estimated at £50,480,000, to which land contributes £21,381,000; opium, £8,200,000; salt, £6,300,000; Customs, £2,620,000; stamps, £2,837,000; Post-office, £778,000; and Excise, £2,525,000. The estimate thus shows an increase over the previous year of £660,000. The Budget estimates of expenditure for the current year, including army and public works, and excluding "loss by exchange," amount to £48,004,000, or only £341,000 above the regular estimate for the previous year. The principal heads of expenditure are as follow:—Interest on debt, £5,360,000; land revenue charges, £2,473,000; opium £2,200,000; administration, £1,595,000; law and justice, £2,367,000; army, £15,979,000; public works ordinary, £2,532,000; ditto, extraordinary, £3,759,000; guaranteed interest, less traffic receipts, £1,260,000.

WE note that the drawings of the Secretary of State for the current year are reduced from £15,000,000 to £13,660,000. The loss by exchange on this sum is estimated at £2,232,000, being at the average rate of 1s. 8½d. per rupee. We can only hope that the amount thus estimated will suffice to meet the actual deficiency on this account. According to Sir W. Muir's own statement, "the variation of even ¼d. involves a gain or loss of nearly £200,000." Granting that the above estimates will be verified by the result, the Budget of 1876-77 will show a surplus of £144,000. The outlay on reproductive works has been reduced to £3,759,000, and to meet this a loan of £2,640,000 was to be raised in the London market. The amount of this loan was afterwards increased to £4,000,000, which has been since offered to the public for subscription. There is no doubt that in the present plethora of money and the scarcity of good securities, the whole of this sum will be readily taken. But there are many who still argue that the Indian Government ought to raise what money they require for developing the resources of the country by loans in India, in which case both principal and interest would be payable in rupees.

WHAT the Karen women on the Pegu frontier may lack in the length of their skirts is more than compensated by the quantity and weight of their ornaments. One lady, seen by the correspondent of a London paper, as she left her native village with axe on shoulder for the purpose of cutting wood, "had twenty-three coils of solid brass wire, half an inch in diameter, between her chin and shoulders, and her legs from ankle to knee were entirely covered with coils of the same material. The "necklace" weighed nine and a half pounds, and the "leg mail" thirteen pounds; need I say that her carriage was somewhat affected by these monstrosities?" A silver band encircled her temples, on her shoulders were silver beads strung on a chain, whence a large thin disc of silver hung on her breast. Brass pin wire, twisted into small circles, was used for anklets and bracelets. Besides all this, she had "ear drops, made of six brass chains, four inches in length. Silver ear tubes, buttons, and bangles, and in addition to these a quantity of small silver coins, with the Queen's effigy, filled up the unoccupied spaces on her dusky skin."

IN noticing the honours spread broadcast in the Allahabad Investiture, the Pioneer demurs to some honourable names having been missed on the day of reckoning. "General Sam Browne, General Probyn and Dr. Fayrer have been knighted, almost everybody who was anybody and "handy" has been made a companion of the Star of India, and yet men who deserved honours better have been either forgotten or misjudged. Cunningham and Thuillier, who have laid the cause of science in India under obligation, are nowhere; Watson, by far the best Cavalry officer in India, nobody excepted, is left out in the cold regions of neglect; and hardly more honourable has been the lot of the "Political Agents," of whom we are so justly proud. That the rebellion of 1857 was forgotten when honour was lavished at Allahabad cannot be doubted; if it were otherwise, why were Spankie and Ricketts not remembered, and why, above all, was the late Foreign Secretary of India treated as if his connection with the Baroda business did not reflect the greatest honour on him? Names crowd in our memory, but we have said enough to account for a screw loose somewhere, but as loyal subjects we agree with Dr. Duff that it is not the Prince who is to blame, but his advisers."

IT appears from the Indian papers that upwards of five hundred men of the 34th Regiment, lately arrived from England, go home again next year, as their six years' engagement will then expire. This statement speaks for itself. Here are five hundred soldiers—in themselves almost a regiment—who will come back to this country after less than two years' service in India. Could any mode of recruiting the Indian garrisons be more needlessly extravagant than the present system of short-service, as applied equally to regiments at home and regiments serving in India? It is possible that some of these five hundred may volunteer for a further term of service; but it is equally possible that they will all accept their discharge. In that case the Indian Government will have paid dearly indeed for the use of these men during at the utmost a couple of years. Just as they were becoming fit for the work required of them, they will go away, and their places will be filled by new men going out perhaps for as short a period. Under such a system how can India be expected to pay her way and yet maintain a really efficient army? Short service may be a good thing for an army serving at home and in Europe; but for Indian requirements it is the very worst system that could have been devised. When will the English Government open its eyes to the stupid wastefulness of maintaining one army for all the varied and conflicting wants of an empire spreading over the world? The only way that still lies open to us of fairly meeting all those wants is to repair the blunders committed in 1860, and give India back her local British Army, recruited for ten or twelve years' service in India and the East.

IN one of his interesting letters to the Times of India Captain Burton describes a visit he paid to the tomb of M. Raymond, outside Haidarabad, in the Dakhan. Monsieur Raymond, as he reminds his readers, appertained to the epoch following the heroic age of Dupleix, Bussy and Lally Tollendal; when the idea of a French Empire in India had not wholly died out of the Gallic brain. He was to the Nizam what M. de Boigne was to Sindhia, Commander-in-Chief of some 15,000 troops, le corps Francois de Raymond, officered by his compatriots, and devoted to himself. He was a red-hot Revolutionist, a true believer in the Age of Reason and the Rights of Man—especially French Man—and not the less a Gaul to the backbone; he introduced the idea of Citizenship to the native mind till it culminated in le Citoyen Tippoo, and, after his death, in 1798, the heir-apparent of the Nizam used to swear "by the head of M. Raymond."

Raymond and his fellow-worthies are still remembered, it seems, with affection, and even with a reverence akin to that which made our own John Nicholson a kind of demigod among his Afghan admirers. The descendants of Raymond's sepoys, Moslem as well as Hindu, "who fought under the stout old Frenchman at a time when the Maratha Pindaris (free lances) were making war support war, still burn incense and hold religious meetings at the tomb; and the ignorant have sanctified the tenant under the title of Shah Rahman." Of the monument itself Captain Burton has little to say, beyond describing it as a truncated, built-up obelisk of stone, inscribed J. R. on the four faces; as many slabs of black marble, apparently greased, are wholly ignorant of the epitaph, but have not yet been stolen, as the Indian fashion is, to serve for curry-grinders. It is pointed westward by a little open pavilion which commands a suggestive view northward; beyond the foreground tombs of other French officers, lies the sun-burnt and now barren plain, the shore of the sea of verdure which appears to overwhelm Sikandarabad.

THE cantonment of Sikandarabad is to the Nizam's capital what Seerole is to Benares, or Mianmir to Lahor, or the native Lashkar is to Gwalior. From Raymond's Grave Captain Burton could "easily distinguish the well-known forms of the ancient square fort with its round bastions; the mud-redoubts, old and new; the huge parade-ground cut up by its intrusive cemetery; the rococo heads of half a dozen 'temples,' belonging to as many different 'persuasions,' and the clock-towered St. James' Police-office and Court-house." Sikandarabad was once equal to Lahor in dignity as the largest station in British India, but now—says Captain Burton—"the glory is gone from it, as we see by the long empty lines of officers' bungalows and the deserted palazzi standing out from the southern bazaar; the fever and the engineer have prevailed against it, and 'the spider spins her web in the halls of Afrasyáb.'" Yet further off "run long, jagged rock ridges, capped, as usual, by sparkling white walls: this is Trimalgadi (Trimulgherry), the head-quarters of the Artillery, where, unlike Karkhi (Kirkee), the guns are defended from a coup de main, as they always should be, by an entrenched camp. The granite pile intercepts Bolárum, Head-quarters of the Haidarabád Contingent, where strawberries grow and where Sikandarábád has gone out of town. 'Ichabod' may now be written upon the old cantonment."

IN our last number we gave some specimens of native Indian feeling about the Royal Titles Bill. The following extract from another paper, the Gujarat Mitra for March 26, is not less significant than those already quoted—

The new title is an utterly useless one. This title is a relic of barbarism. In Russia the ruling power is called an Emperor, in France Napoleon III. called himself an Emperor. But Emperors and Imperial authority have ere now tumbled down to the ground. Where are now the Emperors of Rome? Where are now the Emperors of Constantinople; Queen Victoria can never be an empress. The King of England can never be an emperor. The constitution of England is opposed to the assumption of any such authority. Where is then the need for empty titles. These titles can do no good; they are odious relics of barbarism, as hateful as slavery itself, and hateful to God and man alike. It is a great disgrace to the Tory Ministry that such an Act should be passed under their administration. The word emperor suggests an authority, an imperial authority, a power over the freedom of individuals, an absolute authority over persons, which is absolutely fatal to good government, and altogether opposed to the wisdom and the statemanship of our times. The Queen has no such authority, and yet the title has been conferred upon her. She has an equal reason to be called an Empress of England, and why has not that been done?

A London correspondent of long Indian experience writes to us as follows:—

I have carefully scanned the Indian papers received by the two or three last mails, and can nowhere find traces of that enthusiasm with which we were assured the Royal Titles Bill was to be received. It is true that those who were said to be most enthusiastic, namely, the princes and chiefs, are not newspaper correspondents, but we might suppose that some sign, some utterance of satisfaction, would have been made or given, whereas where dissent is not absolutely expressed, as is frequently the case, or dead opposition, silence is maintained. My private letters are altogether reticent on the subject.

THE new Viceroy, Lord Lytton, arrived at Simla in the afternoon of April 25.

IN a little book called "England, Palestine, Egypt, and India, Connected by a Railway System"—published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co.—Mr. S. McBean unfolds his daring project for bringing Bombay within eight days' journey from London at an estimated cost of £61,000,000. Of the European section of this grand railway line their remain only about 260 miles to complete the connection between Calais and Constantinople, and this gap he would leave the Turkish Government to fill up without delay. The remaining section of 3,330 miles from Scutari to Karáchi might easily, he thinks, be made for about £48,000,000, while for another three millions a line might be carried from Kotri to Ahmadabad, so as to complete the junction of England with Bombay. The remaining nine millions would be employed on a branch line from Antioch to Ismailia. From Basrah to Karáchi, a length of 1,743 miles, the line would pass along the coast of the Persian Gulf and Biluchistán. The section from Aleppo to Basrah, 787 miles long, would cross the Euphrates to Bagdad, and thence skirt the right bank of the Tigris. For the making of the whole line from Scutari to Karachi all that is needed, argues Mr. McBean, is a due supply of British capital aided by the grant of land from the several Governments whom the line would directly benefit. The engineering difficulties are few, and the money needed would, he thinks, be better spent than on most of the schemes which have lately attracted our speculative countrymen. For the details of his scheme, and the arguments adduced in its favour, the inquiring reader should do well to consult the book itself, making due allowance for a few pet crotchets about the Jews and our supposed descent from that interesting people, which have no practical bearing on the main question under review. If the hindrances in the way of carrying out the entire project are perhaps underrated by its present advocate, there is surely no good reason against an early attempt to realise that part of it which deals with the Euphrates Valley. A line once completed from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf, whether by Mr. Andrew's or Mr. McBean's route, would at least shorten the journey to India by a week, and supplement the advantages, political and commercial, already secured to us by the Egyptian route. The two ends of the line would remain in our hands so long as England retained her old naval mastery, and in time of danger our means of promptly reinforcing the Indian garrisons would be doubled. A capital of eight or nine millions would be obviously easier to raise than one of sixty; and the practical results of such an enterprise might in due time bring about the adoption of that larger scheme, of which it would anyhow prove the most useful instalment.

THE Pall Mall Gazette, commenting on the reported occupation of Socotra, denies that the island has been annexed to this country. What has really happened, says our contemporary, is "that the Political Resident of Aden went to Keshin and Socotra last January on board her Majesty's ship Briton, and concluded a treaty with the Sultan by which that chief undertook never to cede the island to any foreign Power, nor to allow any settlement to be made on it without the consent of the British Government. He received a grant of a thousand dollars, and a small annual payment will also be made. The Sultan of Keshin has thus become one of our feudatories, but he retains his sovereign rights over Socotra, and his nephew and heir is the resident governor of the island." The last sentence is rather enigmatic. Why has the Sultan of Keshin "thus become one of our feudatories" if we have agreed to pay him something for the lease of an island over which he retains his sovereign rights? If the Gazette would only tell us plainly what arrangement has been made touching the island of Socotra, we should be better able to comprehend the drift of the foregoing statement.

UNDER the new system, by which selected candidates for the Indian Civil Service will be free to pass their term of probation at one of the Universities, it is inevitable that some changes will have to be made in the subjects taken up for the first examination. As Professor Max Müller has pointed out in his recent letter to the Times, the lowering of the age for competitive candidates will involve the omission of Sanskrit and Arabic from the list of those subjects. From a youth of seventeen to nineteen it would be absurd to demand a competent knowledge of languages which form no part of an English schoolboy's ordinary equipment. But we agree with the Professor that the study of Sanskrit should be made all the more imperative in the after stages of the candidate's career. Nearly all the spoken languages of India are derived from Sanskrit, which even enters largely into the vocabulary of Tamil, Telugu, and other non-Aryan dialects of Southern India. In the absence of any real literature in the modern vernaculars derived from Sanskrit, that ancient language is still the main vehicle of literary speech for the educated classes. It is still the classic tongue of law, religion, and philosophy. It is the key to a full understanding of Hindu character, creeds, social customs, and modes of thought. For all these reasons a certain knowledge of Sanskrit should be required of young men training for the Indian Civil Service, just as a certain knowledge of Greek and Latin is required of ordinary candidates for a University degree. Armed with that knowledge the future Civilian will soon master the spoken languages of India, while the places and people among whom his work will be carried on will have for him an interest all the greater for his previous studies.

MR. JAMES HOLLOWELL, now deceased, but formerly a private soldier in the British Army, must have been a very remarkable person, if the stories told of him in the United Service Gazette could only be regarded as true. It appears from the Chronicle of the Victoria Cross that "On the 26th September, 1857, a party was shut up and besieged in a house in Lucknow by the rebel Sepoys. Private James Hollowell, one of the party, behaved throughout the day in the most admirable manner. He directed, encouraged, and led the others, exposing himself fearlessly, and by his talent in persuading and cheering, prevailed on nine dispirited men to make a successful defence in a burning house, with the enemy firing through four windows." But our contemporary, not satisfied with so meagre an outline of the hero's deeds, fills up the canvas with some very curious and wonderful details, too many to quote here. After fighting at Lucknow like twenty Paladins, he volunteered, it seems, to go and look for the wounded Nicholson, who, by that time, was lying, we thought, in his grave at Delhi. Having found him, however, somewhere outside Lucknow, Private Hollowell bore him back "in the face of 20,000 rebels." A hero who not only saved the day for us at Lucknow, but rescued the wounded Nicholson from a whole army, several days after his death, in a place two hundred miles off, really deserved something better than a Victoria Cross and a pension of £10 a year. The least that a sorrowing nation can do for his memory is to raise a monument to him in the grounds of the Crystal Palace, with an epitaph written by the editor of the United Service Gazette. It would be interesting to know, by the way, whether the late Mr. Hollowell, "Hollowell of the deadly rifle," was descended in any way from the famous Baron Munchausen. Perhaps Sir John Kaye will kindly throw some light on this and other matters of like importance in the next volume of his History.

THE tenders for £4,000,000 India Four per Cent. Stock were opened at the Bank of England yesterday. The total applied for was about £8,600,000. Tenders at and above £102. 8s. 6d. will be allotted in full, those at £102. 8s. will receive about £73 per cent. The tenders were rather lower than was expected in the market.

KASHMIR SHAWLS.

AN interesting treatise on "Kashmir and its Shawls"—lately published by Messrs. Wyman—throws much useful light on many matters connected with the origin and manufacture of those elegant and costly tissues. The author, who modestly conceals his name, shows himself thoroughly acquainted with the subject handled by him; and much of the information so pleasantly imparted has certainly not been derived at second hand. It may be doubted whether the world at large is even now aware of the true source whence comes the raw material worked up in the looms of Kashmir for the delight of European ladies. Certain it is that so late as 1846, when Kashmir was made over to Gulâb Singh by Lord Hardinge, shawl wool was regarded as the staple produce of that country, and the tribute exacted by us from the new-made sovereign included three pair of shawls and twelve shawl goats a year. When it was found that the goats could not live even at the hill-station of Dharmsâla, 6,000 feet above the sea, this part of the tribute was commuted for an equivalent in money; the shawls being still remitted as a speciality of Kashmir.

If the knowledge that Kashmir did not grow the wool it converted into shawls was a late discovery, we need hardly be surprised to learn that down to the early years of this century it was still a question what sort of animals produced the wool. In the eighteenth century the traveller Tavernier fancied it was grown on a kind of sheep which shed its fleece in the spring. Another traveller, Bernier, who accompanied Aurangzib to Kashmir, believed in two sorts of wool, one grown in Kashmir, the other on the breast of a wild goat in Great Tibet. Other travellers mistook the fine down or tus of which shawls are woven, for camel's hair from Kirmân. Even Bogle, whose mission to Kashmir we lately noticed, is credited by a French author with mistaking the wool for that of sheep; but it seems clear from his published journal that the mistake was not his, but the Frenchman's. In spite of the shawl-goats sent home in this century by Turner and Moorcroft, a good deal of ignorance continued to prevail in this country as to the animal and the country which furnished the wool. The plain truth of the matter is that the tus of which Kashmir shawls are made is the fine soft down of the Tibetan goat, which down grows in winter beneath its outer hair, and is either shed in the beginning of summer, or scraped off betimes by those who collect it for the Kashmir traders. For this purpose the outer hair is first cut off with a knife, which leaves the down untouched, and then the latter is scraped off by a rude comb of willow-twigs passed in the reverse direction. Only in the very dry cold climate of the vast Tibetan highlands can this down be obtained; for every attempt to naturalise the shawl goat in other countries has hitherto failed. Either the imported animals have died off, or the down which formed their great value has failed under changed conditions to grow again. One Frenchman embarked 1,200 of these goats for Marseilles. Eight hundred died on the way. The rest lived on, but when the time came to search for the precious wool, none could be found. The soft winter covering with which Nature had yearly furnished them in their native pastures refused to grow in the mild damp air of Europe.

There seems little reason to doubt that the looms of Kashmir have been employed for many centuries, perhaps for two or three thousand years, in weaving this fine down into articles of clothing. Coming down to the time of Akbar, we find that great monarch's fondness for "woollen stuffs, especially shawls," recorded in the Ain-i-Akbari of Abul Fazl. At that time—the days of our own Queen Bess—shawls were manufactured in Lahor as well as Kashmir. Akbar used, it seems, to wear two shawls, "one under the other." Nadir Shah in the last century sent a large number of fine shawls, probably carried off from Delhi, as a present to the Grand Turk. In England the duty on shawls was once as high as 80 per cent., and the finest kinds were sold for £500. For many years before the disastrous war of 1870-71 France was a large and steady purchaser of Kashmir shawls, in spite of an almost prohibitive duty. Even now four or five French agents yearly visit the Valley, and purchase the beautiful tissues, often made from French designs, to the amount of forty and even sixty thousand pounds.

Of the way in which the Tus is prepared for the loom, woven into pashmina, and wrought up with those graceful broideries for which the artisans of Kashmir have long been famous, we have full details gathered from the best sources. So great is the labour bestowed on the process that a shawl whose raw materials spun and dyed cost £30, fetches in Kashmir as much as £300. Although that fickle goddess, Fashion, has lately set its face against shawls, the exports from India in 1874 still amounted to £300,000. For some time past colonies of Kashmiri weavers have plied their trade at Ludiana, Lahor, and other towns in the Punjab, but, as the author says, "they have never equalled the work of their brethren in the valley, because they have not the proper raw material, and because their brilliant dyes are not so delightfully subdued and harmonised as in the genuine shawl."

THE INDIAN LEGISLATION BILL.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In a previous letter I showed, by reference to Mr. H. B. Stevens's case, the great danger to which Englishmen in India would be exposed if Section II. of the above Bill were passed into law. I will now solicit the attention of your readers to Section III. (f) of that Bill, by which it is proposed to confer on the Government of India the power to repeal or alter the letters patent of the High Courts established in that country under Acts of Parliament.

The power asked for is unconstitutional; it cannot be exercised by the executive in this country, although here any abuse of it might be easily checked by the interference of Parliament and the expression of public opinion. But while it is not considered safe to trust with such power the Government at home, Parliament is asked to grant it to the executive in India, where the danger of placing the executive above the law, by enabling it to withdraw from the jurisdiction of the law courts, the conduct of its own officers must at once be apparent.

The Government have offered no explanation to justify their demand for powers so extraordinary and unprincipled; but a key to the motives by which they are influenced may be found in the anomalous situation of a Secretary of State for India, who has conflicting interests to serve, being officially bound to protect the interests of India, while he owes to his Cabinet (whose interests are often opposed to those of India) an allegiance which, in his estimate, is paramount. An administration carried on under such conditions could not but lead to financial difficulties; and over-zealous officials, in their anxiety to increase the revenue, have been led to exceed their authority and the bounds of law; occasionally at first, but so freely of late, that illegality and injustice have come to be looked upon as habitual to the Executive in India, and have been denounced as such by the highest Courts in the land. The people, goaded and oppressed, turned on all sides for relief; many emigrated to Native States, and thousands of acres of land previously cultivated, have been abandoned during the last three or four years; while other sufferers, in their despair, broke out in open insurrection, and troops had to be called in for the restoration of order. Those among the oppressed who had sufficient pecuniary means ventured sometimes to seek redress in the Courts of Law, but the Courts in which they had, in the first instance, to sue the officers of the Government are presided over not by competent and independent judges, but by officials untrained to law, and whose prospects in the service depend on the goodwill and favour of the Government. These officials cannot therefore be said to possess either the legal qualifications or the degree of independence essential to the due discharge of judicial functions; while the pleaders, who practice in their Courts, lack the independence of the English Bar, and public opinion exercises no influence over the action of the Courts, as the cases tried in them are not reported in the newspapers. These Courts fail, therefore, to inspire confidence to the people, who, as a rule, appeal from their decisions to one of the four High Courts established in India under Acts of the Parliament of Great Britain. The High Courts are presided over by English barrister judges, comparatively independent of the Government; and have almost all the advantages, for the proper administration of justice, that are possessed by English Courts of Law at home. Through the instrumentality of these High Courts, the Executive in India have on several occasions been foiled in their attempts to enforce illegal demands; and the collection of the revenue is said to have suffered from the restraint which the decisions of those Courts placed over the action of the Executive. For instance, in 1873, a rayat (or small cultivator) finding his field taxed at a rate exceeding the maximum of one-sixth of the gross produce fixed by the Government itself, sought relief in a law court against the action of the revenue officer, and ultimately obtained it, on appeal to the High Court of Bombay. The Government did not defend the suit—no justifiable defence could, in fact, be pleaded; but soon afterwards introduced in the Legislative Council of India a Bill, based upon the above case, having for its object to exempt from the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts, among other things,—

Objections to the amount or incidence of any assessment of land revenue, or to the mode of assessment, or to the principle on which such assessment has been fixed; also

All disputes regarding public rent or revenue payable to Government, or complaints of exaction of district or village officers.

Such a law is opposed to the intention of the Acts of the Imperial Parliament, under the authority of which the High Courts have been established; and the Government are aware that the validity of the said law may be questioned at present; for, upon a case submitted in 1856, an opinion was recorded by Justice A. Cockburn and Sir Richard Bethell, in which the following passage occurs:—"The Crown cannot, by virtue of the prerogative, abrogate Courts of Justice established by law. A fortiori, when a Court is established by virtue of a power conferred by Act of Parliament, which conveys no power to abrogate, the Crown, having exercised, has exhausted its power and cannot annul the Court it has created." The passing of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Bill was, therefore, delayed until the eve of Lord Northbrook's departure from India; and a declaratory Act will doubtless be passed for legalising it, as soon as the Indian Legislation Bill has been finally passed by the Imperial Parliament. Several other laws, enacted in India within the last six years, are as defective in principle and likely to prove as mischievous in their effect as the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Bill; and they will also doubtless be legalised by the same declaratory Act. The importance of the measure which Parliament is to consider on Monday cannot, therefore, be over-estimated. For a hundred years our rule has been accepted by the teeming population of India as a beneficent rule, and the best they had known; but the principles which guided our administration are now to be disowned. The reign of law, under which alone can justice be dispensed with impartiality, is to cease; and the people, already deprived of any constitutional means of making their wants and feelings known to their rulers, are now to be prevented from seeking redress for wrongs committed by officials, excepting at the hands of those who wronged them. A more effectual means of awakening the spirit of revenge and of goading a people to rebellion could scarcely have been devised.—I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

Spirit of the Indian Press.

LORD NORTHBROOK.

The Pioneer remarks that an important element in all Indian administration is the personal character of the Viceroy. So much rests on his own will; the tone of public policy so faithfully reflects his idiosyncracies, and the choice of instruments is so entirely his, that without some appreciation of the man it is impossible to understand his reign. Thus, in the high tone of much of the official life of the day, and in its strict but unostentatious performance of its duties, the manner and the method of the master can be clearly felt. The men whom Lord Northbrook has selected again are of the same type as himself. Caution, reserve, experience, rather than brilliancy or warmth have been the pasports to his favour. It is, of course, invidious to mention instances, but it will scarcely be denied that Lord Northbrook, if he has called here and there an original man to his side, has not retained him long. In his selection of men we venture to think that the Viceroy has not shown that rare gift of insight which in truth is found in but few statesmen. It has been the day of safe men; of men, that is, who are safe to do little or nothing. The Council is weak; the Secretariat is no longer strong; the only striking figure in the Government is that of the Viceroy himself. His stern conscientiousness, his love of justice and of truth, the strict impartiality, the faculty of labour, the devotion to the smallest no less than to the most important details of business, the thoroughness and hatred of sham, the great capacity of acquiring information, the unpretending and unassuming discharge of every duty which characterise Lord Northbrook, would indeed single him out in any group. But while these are qualities with which we have all grown familiar, they are not the whole man. Few can appreciate (because few see anything but the reserved and curt official) the simplicity and kindliness which lie but indifferently concealed behind the shy address; fewer still, perhaps, are aware of the impulsive and generous element which is pent up within the frozen surface. In exchanging the Viceregal throne for the privacy of English life, though Lord Northbrook's abilities may be temporarily lost to the country, his personal tastes will perhaps be better suited. We wish him heartily Godspeed, and the long enjoyment of that social and intellectual life which, however dear to the cultivated English gentleman, is forbidden, from the necessities of his position and the multitude of his labours, to the jaded Indian Viceroy.

INDIAN DIPLOMACY.

The Times of India holds that the experiences of the past year show clearly enough that a governing policy of diplomatic action is a mistake. Interference with the intrigues of Native Courts—or rather invitations from our side of the wall to come and intrigue—does not seem to pay at all. Indeed, we don't know what does pay with born intriguers, but what perplexes them—honesty. Nevertheless, it cannot be denied that every Viceroy who comes to India seems to think himself bound to show his talents as a diplomatist, as well as every thing else, and we accordingly see one after the other wilfully walking out of the straight path in order to show an acquaintance with the crooked one. We don't know that there is anything to be very proud of in possessing diplomatic skill, but every public man desires to get the credit of having it, and none more so than our Indian statesmen. The Calcutta Foreign Office is the Elysium of place-hunters, and the profession of "Political" disturber of the public peace the most noble in the country. Every man who graduates there sees the most brilliant fortune in his future, to which any number of intriguing Rajahs and Nawabs will act as the stepping-stones of greatness. It may be the case that the Political department is a great institution of our raj, but all we can say is that it has stood us in poor stead in more than one crisis of our history here. And yet we would not quarrel with it, only that it is coming to be regarded as the very sheet anchor of British power in India, eclipsing the army altogether, which stands second or third to diplomacy. A little longer, a few more years of complete reliance on the power of the portfolio as an enlightener, a pacificator, and who knows what else, and we may see India practically soldierless and, let us hope, contented. But, in truth, we hope better from Lord Lytton than a blind confidence in an institution wherein the natives are our equals, if not our masters. A man who has had experience of the Embassy at Lisbon must have had experience of the vanity of diplomacy, so far as Europe goes, and as a poet, we should think Lord Lytton must be averse to diplomatic humbug. Certainly, there is nothing in the sound sense of his published fables and verses to lead us to believe that the new Viceroy will encourage still further a policy which has already gone too far already. Still, we fear lest the Politicals may be too much for his novitiate, and drag him, with those arts and smiles they practise on Nawabs, into the deep abyss of their diplomacy.

THE CENTRE OF GOVERNMENT.

The Madras Athenæum argues that if the Secretary of State is de facto Governor-General of India, then the Viceroy is a superfluity; he might reign as representative of the Crown and dignity, but he should not attempt to govern at all. The local Governments should have more power for matters of detail than they have now, and receive all their instructions as regards their general polity direct from London. If, however, it be admitted that the Government of India should be in India, then we would be better without a Secretary of State who comes into office and leaves it again according as the vicissitudes of public opinion in England place one party or the other in power; and it is seldom, indeed, that India has anything to do with those cross currents which produce the ups and downs of party politics at home. If Government, then, is to be in India and not in England, it ought to be as much separated from and independent of English politics as it was formerly when under the control of John Company. Two such great powers as the Secretary of State and Viceroy cannot exist together, one must be a reality and the other a name, and there is no doubt that when a man with the abilities and determined will of the present Secretary of State is at the helm the Viceroy, to work well with him, must not be an original genius, or very determined to maintain his own opinions, or he will soon find the necessity of retirement. But then the Ministry may suddenly be changed. The India-office may be given to some ornamental member of the new party who must be well provided for, but who it is not thought desirable should have much to do with English politics, and who does not wish to interfere in Indian matters, for the best of reasons, that he knows nothing about them. What will be our position then? A Secretary of State who does not act and a Viceroy accustomed only to reign but not to govern. We are not discussing now whether it is best that the Imperial Government should be in England or India. There is a great deal that can be said on both sides of the case; both have, there is no doubt, their advantages and disadvantages. What we should wish to point out is the difficulties of having it in both places, and this we think the present despatch shows very plainly, and inclines us to the opinion that either of the two other alternatives would be better than the present system, which must break down some day or other, and the collapse may take place at a time when the stability of the Empire may be in danger.

THE PRINCES OF INDIA.

The Bombay Gazette admits that the Times has put into shape doubts which must have presented themselves to thousands of individuals who have questioned themselves about the real effect of the Prince of Wales's visit upon India. It will be a matter for regret if the Government of India relapses into its former colourless state; if, as hitherto, the Native Princes are allowed to go their way, while the Government of India goes its own, unsympathetically and uncaringly. At the same time, it is extremely difficult to see what can be done by the British Government to give the Native Chiefs a more living interest in the rule of India. The Times says that the time appears to have come for a real effort to make the classes who are the natural leaders of Indian life our partners in the practical work of administration. We admit that there is a ring of justice about the remark, but we cannot conceive in what way the Indian Princes could be more intimately associated with our Government of India than they have been hitherto. We cannot make them our Viceroys, our Governors of Presidencies, or our Lieutenant-Governors of Provinces. We cannot make Scindia a Commander-in-Chief, Holkar a Finance Minister, the Maharaja of Jeypore a Secretary for Public Works, nor the Maharaja of Cashmere a Controller-General. What is to be done? In what way is the problem set by the Times to be solved? How are the poetic and imaginative aspirations of the Chiefs of India to be satisfied? If it be said that they have at present no interest in the rule of India, that is scarcely correct. In the Viceregal Council the Maharaja of Jeypore, the Maharaja of Vizianagram, and the Maharaja of Puttiala have each enjoyed seats for several years; and they have undoubtedly been of considerable use in stating views which might have escaped the attention of the European members. Moreover, there is not a Chief in India who has not already a certain interest in sustaining the Government of India. An outbreak in any one of their territories might have serious effects over considerable tracts of India if it spread. Our treaties with the great Protected States stipulate clearly that the Chiefs must be responsible for the peace of the territories under their rule. As the Paramount Power, we are responsible for the general tranquillity of India; and in guaranteeing the integrity of Native States it is only just that we should stipulate that nothing be permitted to take place in any one which would endanger the peace of the others. A practical example of the relations between the British Government and the Native States of India took place last year, when Mulharrao was removed from the throne of Baroda for gross misgovernment. Thus every Chief in India is already, to a great extent, what the Times calls a partner in the practical administration of the country; and there can be no doubt that if every Chief chose to give his entire attention to the well-being of his people—that is, to settle down comfortably in the paths of peace—he would have sufficient to do to occupy all his time and attention. We are willing to admit, however, that there must be a national longing to be satisfied among the Chiefs of India. If they would go to England and take their seats in the House of Lords, we should have no objections; if even several of the more distinguished of them were to be associated with the Secretary of State in the Council of India we should hail the fact with satisfaction. But what is to be done when Native Chiefs, unless they happen to be enlightened and fearless men, defiant of the existence of caste trammels or popular prejudices—men like Sir Jung Bahadoor and Sir Salar Jung—will not go to England! Can it be possible that the Times hints at the establishment of an Indian House of Lords, where Imperial subjects would be discussed, and the results communicated to the Viceroy for his guidance? We hope that the day will come when Scindia, Holkar, Cashmere, and the other great rulers of India will become like the present representatives of the old Barons of England, staunch supporters of the constitution and possessed of hereditary titles of nobility; but we are afraid that, little as there is to do for the present native armies, it will be many a day before the Native Chiefs consent to abandon their forces, and associate themselves, heart and soul, with the "practical administration of the country."

THE INDIAN LEGISLATION BILL.

The Indian Daily News urges that the Government of India is a despotism, and though it is the wish of every educated Englishman in this country to see this despotism tempered with reason, no thoughtful person can help deploring the attitude sometimes assumed by some of our High Court judges towards the Executive government, or help feeling that so long as the reign of law does not completely set aside the despotism of the Government, the highest tribunals must exist in some kind of subordination, not merely to the Viceroy, but also perhaps to the governors of provinces. It is an unhappy accident that some of the provinces of India are at the moment governed by rulers who have forfeited all public confidence, and to subordinate the High Courts in any way to whom were to offer an unnecessary slight to the majesty of the law. But considerations of this kind should hardly blind thoughtful men to the real remedy for accidental evils of this kind. With the same unbiassed frankness with which we have admitted that there is room for improvement in the qualifications of Indian judges, we feel bound to confess that the chances of improvement have not yet been exhausted in the selection of Indian rulers. Without descending further into a phase of this subject, from which there are no outlets except through unpleasant personalities, it may be stated broadly that, if Indian rulers are what they ought to be, and might be, and that if Indian judges also are what they ought to be, and might be, there can be no reasonable doubt as to the relative positions of the two classes of officials in such a country as India. Indeed, the position of relative subordination which history would of itself assign to all law courts is so distinctly marked, that doubts might exist in some minds regarding the wisdom of those provisions of the new Bill by which High Courts are authorised to invalidate any Acts of the Indian Legislature. If we have succeeded in showing that some authority of this kind is needed to control the vagaries of ill-advised Viceroys, there is the more need for that account for insisting that the obvious precautions for preventing the repetition of judicial scandals, such as have sometimes occurred, should not be entirely neglected.

DOVETON COLLEGE.—The Doveton Protestant College annual meeting, for the distribution of prizes to those students of the College who have been successful in obtaining these gratifying rewards of their labours during the past year, was held in the Hall of the College on Thursday last, the 30th ult., presided over by the Hon. Mr. Justice Holloway, C.S.I. A large gathering of the relations and friends of the pupils of the institution assembled to do honour to the occasion. After the meeting the visitors adjourned to the large compound attached to the College premises to witness the usual display of fireworks provided on these occasions in accordance with the custom which prevails at the annual celebrations of this institution.—Madras Athenæum, April 1.

STATION TALK.

RAWALPINDI, March 25.—Not many years ago, ten or twelve at most, the present Commissioner of these parts, then but a Deputy, resolved to start a horse-fair on scientific principles. It was to be in lieu of the small one on a native scale, which we discovered shortly after annexation, happening periodically at a shrine in the neighbourhood of Rawalpindi. There was no doubt about good horses being around us in plenty if their owners could but be induced to bring them under our eyes. The Pind Dadan Khan Salt Range mares first became famous when Wood made his perilous journey up the Indus to the source of the Oxus; and the Tiwana levies during the mutiny, and before that, at annexation, convinced us of the merits of the Shahpur district for producing hardy horses as well as tough warriors. The western portions of Rawalpindi itself were not less famous for good breeds; and Major Cracroft in his settlement report, points out how well the low-lying hills near the Indus might be utilised for grazing tracts, were there but funds forthcoming wherewith to build reservoirs for storing water. So it was resolved to start a horse-fair, and all owners were bidden, after the manner of the guests in the parable of the great supper, and, I grieve to have to add, with the same lamentable result. Ugly rumours flew about as to the object of the wily sirkar in collecting so many horses. The Arms Act had lately come into force; perhaps there was to be a general seizure of horses, too; owners, therefore, thought it prudent to get themselves excused, as did Mark Twain, when wanted to edit a ferocious paper in Tennessee. It was in vain that the Tahsildars in polite language said—"Come, for all things are ready." With one consent they all began to make excuses. The usual result followed. Presently chupprasees were sent into the highways and hedges to compel them, and the success of the fair was thenceforth placed beyond a doubt. The hot-house process has been long since abandoned. Horses now flock in by hundreds, and the difficulty is to find room for all in the cramped enclosure where the fair is held. Up to this (Saturday) evening 2,300 horses and mules have been registered, as against 1,300 last year, and 2,000 the year before. The animals are not yet all classed and aged, so it is risky to form an opinion of the quality compared with that of former years; but some of the cavalry officers present on duty appear to think there is no very striking improvement, in spite of the liberal use of Government stallions, vouchsafed to breeders of late years. There will be better opportunities for arriving at accuracy on this point when the labours of the judging committee commence on Monday next. The fair will last throughout the week, and the prizes be distributed on Saturday. Many of the owners of the best horses are pursuing the old game of holding out for long prices, and business done up to the present chiefly affects the poorer class of animal. Sales amounting to Rs. 54,000 have been recorded up to this evening, representing 440 horses sold at an average of Rs. 120, which cannot be said to be large. I am informed that about fifty young fillies, yearlings, have been sold to the agents of native States, and are already on their way out of the district. This is a very serious loss, which will be felt in future years; and some restriction ought, perhaps, to be placed on the sale of such fillies, especially those of branded mares by Government stallions. I will return to this subject in a future letter after making further inquiries. Mule-breeding appears to be on the increase, if we may judge by the large number exhibited this year. They are mostly small, and do not in a hurried examination give one the idea of coming up to last year's standard in strength. One reason may be that another mule battery has lately been formed on the frontier, and the pick of the mules of this and the surrounding districts have been purchased by Government during the past cold weather for the said new battery. Another and more important reason appears to be that mules are not bred from mares of any stamp, the owners of such being prejudiced in favour of horses. The mule-breeders are almost all petty Hindoo shopkeepers or carriers, who invest in a cheap grass-cutter's tat, and make all they can out of her. We have some splendid Spanish donkeys here, recently imported by Government at a very heavy cost, about Rs. 1,500 each, and they are well worthy of a fair trial before being condemned as a useless extravagance. The present superintendent of the stud here informs me that he has lately been branding a very useful class of mare for mule purposes. The judging committee this year consists of Colonel MacFarlan, R.A., as president, the members being Majors Chaine, 4th Hussars, and Campbell, Corps of Guides; Captains Wilmot, 14th Bengal Cavalry, Clayton, 9th Lancers, and Massy, Assistant Commissioner; and Dr. Boyd, Veterinary Surgeon. They have hard work cut out for them for the next week.—Pioneer Correspondent.

ACCIDENT TO CAPTAIN NEAVE.—ALLAHABAD, March 28.—Captain Neave, of the 18th Bengal Cavalry, has had his horse killed under him when out pigsticking near Allahabad. He himself was very seriously defaced and injured, and fractured his lower jaw. —Englishman.

Miscellaneous.

MAJOR FENWICK.—We hear that Major G. R. Fenwick (Touchstone) leaves Simla and the Civil and Military Gazette, to take the editorial duties of a daily paper about to be published at Lahor. Major Fenwick formerly belonged to the 1st Royals and 93rd Highlanders, and has long been connected with Indian journalism.

COBRA POISON.—In connection with the official record of the attempts to find an antidote for snake poison, to which we recently drew attention, it may be mentioned that an analysis of cobra poison has been furnished by Mr. Pedler, of the Presidency College, Calcutta, from which it would appear that this deadly agent bears a close resemblance in its chemical constituents to albumen—the innocent substance which forms the white of an egg. "It is quite impossible," Mr. Pedler adds, "to draw any deductions as to the nature of the poison. It is more than possible that the poison is a mixture of albuminous principles with some specific poison."

AGRARIAN OUTRAGE.—There had been an incipient Agrarian riot at Allahabad on Tuesday, the 4th of April. Some thousands of cultivators, in behaviour outwardly orderly and creditable, assembled bodily last Sunday at Government House. There were present cultivators belonging to Hundia and Transgangetic Allahabad tehsils. They complained of the recent enhancement of their rents by Government, the Zemindars consequently enhancing theirs, and of the institution of suits on the higher rates. Whereupon the tenants organised an agricultural union, elected officers, collected funds, and bound themselves not to plant sugar-cane. In some cases they have destroyed sugar-cane planted by tenants who had not joined the league. Steps will be taken to discourage such deputations for the future, more or less emphatically.—Bombay Gazette.

ARRIVAL OF THE NEW COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—General Sir F. P. Haines, the new Commander-in-Chief of her Majesty's forces in India, vice the Right Hon. General Lord Napier of Magdala, arrived in Bombay, per P. and O. steamer Zambesi, on Thursday morning last. His Excellency came ashore at the Dockyard stairs, where he was received by Sir Charles Staveley, Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, and a large number of military officers of various grades, including Generals Aitcheson and Burrows; Cols. Harris, Bond, Carnegie, Blowers, and Thacker; Majors Young, Sexton, and Justice; Captains Firs and Chard; and Dr. Inglis. A salute of seventeen guns was fired from the land battery as General Haines left the steamer, and a guard of honour of the 21st Native Infantry (100 men under Lieutenant Riley) was drawn up to receive his Excellency at the landing-stairs. After landing his Excellency drove at once to Malabar Point, where he will be the guest of Sir Charles Staveley during his stay in Bombay.—Bombay Gazette, April 10.

PRESIDENCY POLICE MAGISTRATES BILL.—Among the many curious and anomalous provisions of the Presidency Police Magistrates' Bill, to which we have already called attention, may be numbered the following, which forms Section 88 of the Bill:—"The local Government may direct an appeal by the Public Prosecutor, or other officer specially or generally appointed in this behalf, from a Magistrate's order of acquittal or of dismissal, or of leave to withdraw operating as an acquittal; but in no other case shall there be an appeal from a judgment or order, &c." Why the local Government should have conferred on it so exclusive a privilege is one of those things which, perhaps, only the framers of this Bill can explain. As far as we can see, no similar privilege is accorded to private individuals, and, considering that the magistrates of the Calcutta police are the nominees of the local Government, and are removable at the pleasure of the Government, it appears to us that the provisions of this Section are most improper and quite uncalled for. It is, therefore with no surprise that we learn that the section has "attracted notice" in Parliament, and has been made the subject of a special telegram from the Secretary of State to the Viceroy. What the ultimate fate of this absurd Bill will be remains yet to be seen.—Englishman.

MR. JUSTICE PHEAR.—We (Patriot) are exceedingly sorry to learn that Mr. Justice Phear, instead of taking leave as he had originally contemplated has resigned his appointment. What could be the circumstances which have induced him to change his mind within a fortnight? This, we confess, is a mystery to us. Mr. Phear's retirement from the bench of the High Court is a matter for public regret. He has been a most independent and fearless judge; what the Chief Justice lately enunciated—that in this country the law is the same for the Government and the subject—he has, in his judicial career, followed to the letter. A zealous advocate of constitutional law and the liberty of the subject, he has, whenever occasion has arisen, shown a most intelligent and enlightened appreciation of both. In the series of articles on Personal Government, which we wrote about three years ago, we endeavoured to show that the abuses of power, which we dragged to light, were exposed chiefly through the instrumentality of his judicial mind. If the High Court is a bulwark of the liberty of the subject, it is Judges like Mr. Phear who contribute to the maintenance of this beneficient character of the Court. Without meaning any dispar-agement to the other Judges, we must confess that by the retirement of Mr. Justice Phear the High Court loses one of its strongest pillars. We are glad to learn that the Bar propose to give him a farewell dinner, and that the pleaders of the High Court also propose to honour him with a valedictory address.

THINGS NOT GENERALLY UNDERSTOOD.—Why Sir Richard Temple, who, as a member of Lord Northbrook's Government, was opposed to the famine views of Sir George Campbell, out Campbelled Campbell when he found the famine mania to be on the winning side at home. —The use of a municipal form of administration for the town of Calcutta, when all the advantages of that form of Government are denied to the rate-payers, whilst its disadvantages are carefully retained. —How it chances that, after a full and careful inquiry into the best method of re organising the Indian Army, followed by the incubation of a scheme of reform, said to have been submitted to the India Office, it has been found necessary to summon Sir Neville Chamberlain from Madras to discuss the dear little infant.—Whether the Private Secretary to the Viceroy, or the Viceroy of India, should be considered as the head of the Government.—The exact value of the "presents" carried home by H.R.H. from India.—How it is possible for a bishop, whose charge extends from Assam to Peshawur, and who does his duty, to survive nine years of such drudgery and exposure. —What will be done with all the Regimental Commanding officers in Madras over seventy years of age.—How Dr. Payne finds time to discharge a tenth part of the duties which he is paid to perform.—Whether "the dream of his life" was suggested by Sir Bartle Frere, anxious to succeed Lord Northbrook.—The Famine accounts.—Indian Daily News.

THE MALAY FIELD FORCE.—The following is a copy of the complimentary order published by Major-General Colborne. It must be remembered that this order was promulgated before the intention of retaining the 1-10 Regiment in the Straits had been made known. "On the probable conclusion of military operations in the Malay territory, and the approaching departure of the 1-10th Regiment from the command, the Major-General Commanding desires to express his thanks to officers of the General and Personal Staff, Commanding Officers, Officers, Heads of Departments, and their subordinates engaged, for the assistance he has received from them among the late operations in the Malay country. He requests Commanding Officers will convey to officers, non-commissioned officers, and men under their command, his appreciation of the gallantry they have displayed in every attack on the position of the enemy, as well as of his sense of the general good conduct of the men, the unvarying good spirit and cheerfulness with which they have encountered considerable exposures and deprivations consequent on arduous marches through a very difficult country. The Major-General has to convey his very cordial acknowledgment to Brigadier General Ross, C.B., for the support and ready co-operation on the Larut line, and of the energy with which all arrangements necessary for the movement of the troops and military operations under his command have been carried out. The Major-General has had great pleasure in reporting to his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commander-in-Chief the praiseworthy conduct of the whole force employed, and bringing to his Royal Highness's notice the names of those officers and men whose conduct has been specially reported on.

THE LATE FAMINE AND THE BLACK PAMPHLET.—We believe that the rumour current in Calcutta for the last few days, that a Commission of Inquiry in connection with the conduct of the late famine is about to be appointed, has its foundation in fact. That the appointment of such a Commission was, in the face of recent revelations, an imperative necessity cannot be doubted. We consider the Black Pamphlet at once just and impartial in its demand for a Commission of exclusively English appointment. "Indian famines," it points out, "have been a continual source of disgrace to successive administrations in this country. When they were only too real they were neglected; and when they did not, and could not, exist, they were evolved from their own nothingness. It is certain that in both cases the Supreme and the Bengal Governments have been equally concerned, and we fear we cannot trust either of them to do much towards elucidating the topics involved. At the same time, it is clear that no Indian tribunal can sit in judgment on them, and, if any impartial court of sufficient dignity is to be constituted, we must go to England for it." We have reason to believe that this very legitimate demand is about to be met in a manner which will reflect little credit either on the Home or Indian Government. It is true that we have no accurate information as to the constitution of the coming Commission, or the special points to which its scrutiny is to extend, but we are prepared for an unreality. During the many years that we have had to criticise the actions of Government, we never have had to apply the term sham so often as during the past two years. We have often had to combat high-handedness, perhaps, sometimes, even absolute injustice; but we always felt that official acts and official language meant what they seemed to convey.—Englishman.

COLONEL MACGREGOR.—We are told by the Englishman that an officer of the Indian Army, Lieutenant-Colonel C. M. MacGregor, of the Quartermaster-General's Department, has lately been causing some little uneasiness in the Foreign-office by his proceedings in Persia. It appears that he was proceeding home via Persia, and after arriving at Teheran, suddenly conceived the idea of visiting Herat, where, he imagined, he might obtain some information of importance to the British Government. Accordingly he sent off a letter to the Mustafi, Governor of Herat, announcing his visit, and asking that accommodation suitable to his rank might be provided for him. He also sent on a tent and his uniform, the latter, it can only be supposed, to establish his identity, and without waiting for a reply to his application, started also himself. Before, however, he had got far on his journey, he was met by a messenger from the Mustafi, accompanied by some sowars, who informed him that he could not be allowed to proceed, and escorted him back to Teheran. Colonel MacGregor then reported the matter to Mr. Thompson, at the British Embassy in Persia, and applied for permission to visit Herat, and the matter ultimately was referred to the Viceroy in India. Lord Northbrook at once replied that Colonel MacGregor should be immediately informed of the error under which he was labouring, and be warned against any future attempt at entering foreign territories without special permission. In his letter to the Persian Embassy, Colonel MacGregor announced that he had discovered a Russian prisoner at Merv, though the Russians pretended to be ignorant of the fact. Finally, he suggests, that, should he fall into the hands of the Turkomans, he hopes that Mrs. Aitchison and his other friends will get up a fancy bazaar towards obtaining his ransom, and after such a suggestion, the Englishman thinks that the sooner Colonel MacGregor is taken care of by his friends the better.

KURG AFFAIRS.

I am afraid that this province is not so well known as it ought to be to the numerous readers of the Pioneer. It is so small as to seem insignificant when regarded in its place on the map of India, and yet the excellence of its climate, the rugged magnificence of its scenery, the dashing character of its mountaineers, and the boldly speculative energy of its European population, require only to be known to be appreciated.

One of our greatest interests here is coffee. Twenty years ago two or three enterprising Englishmen opened a few estates near Mercara, the capital of Kurg. About ten years since the rush to Kurg commenced, and now a large part of the country consists of sheets of coffee, through which one may travel for twenty miles on end, while planters' bungalows are not more than a mile apart. The present state of the country, however, gives merely a faint outline of the position to which it will eventually attain. Every year new comers from England arrive, with capital and energy to open out new coffee estates. Men who have made fortunes on old estates are purchasing and cultivating new ones, and fifteen years hence Kurg, with its resources fully developed, will stand next to Ceylon in wealth and importance as a coffee district. The past has been a very good coffee season, and prospects look well for a bumper crop during the coming year. The planters of Kurg have found out that expensive cultivation pays best in the end. An ordinary good crop yields ten hundred weights an acre under high cultivation. Two hundred weight per acre pays all expenses, and it will sell in England for say one hundred and twenty shillings a hundredweight. So it is not to be wondered at that a coffee estate in full bearing is looked upon as a desirable piece of property.

It is a matter of regret that there is so little intercourse between the different non-official communities of India. I daresay the planters of Tirhoot, or of the Terai, are just as ignorant of Kurg affairs as we are of theirs. It is true the interests involved in coffee are not identical with those of tea or indigo, but yet there must be some main features common to all, and there cannot be a doubt that a mutual understanding and simultaneous effort ought to help on interests common to all planters. Kurg is not far removed from being geographically the centre of the coffee districts of the south-west of India. To the north of Kurg lies the importance and flourishing district of Munzerabad, and north of that again lies Nugger, a district young in planting, but from which great things are expected. Nugger adjoins on Dharwar, one of the southern districts of the Bombay Presidency. South of Kurg lies Wynaad, and below this again is Travancore, a thriving coffee district. Thus from Dharwar almost to Cape Comorin extends an unbroken line of coffee districts, with identical interests, and with a European population and an amount of accumulated and prospective wealth which deserves consideration.

There cannot be a doubt that European colonies in India require exceptional legislation. The codes admirably adapted to villages in the plains, where each ryot is the exact counterpart of his ancestor of one thousand years ago, are not suitable to a go-ahead community of planters. Government officials know this as well as planters do, and it only requires a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together to get the huge and cumbersome machine of legislation in motion, and place certain laws and regulations on a sounder footing. As a first step to this desirable result, the Planters' Associations of Kurg, Mungerabad, Wynaad, and Travancore, have united, and meetings are to be held at which delegates from the different associations are to fix on a decided and uniform course of proceeding.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. BROUGHTON.—Mr. Broughton, the Government Quinologist at Utakamand, who disappeared mysteriously about fifteen months ago, has, the Madras Times says, been heard of at last in New Zealand.

FORESTS.—Mr. Jellico, an Assistant in the Forest Department, has been deputed by the Chief Commissioner of Mysor to visit at Government expense the various sandal-wood plantations in the Madras Presidency ranging towards the Nilgiris, and directed to submit a complete report on the matter with a view to enable the Chief Commissioner to adopt such steps as may be deemed expedient in instituting experimental sandal-wood plantations in the province, as it is understood that the tentative measures adopted by the Madras Presidency in the cultivation of this valuable wood has been one of the fertile sources of swelling the forest revenue.

A HISTORY OF BURMA.—The Rangoon Gazette informs us that a gentleman, who is a ripe Burmese scholar, is at present engaged in compiling from Burmese historical works a history of Burma, from the very earliest date to the close of the second Burmese war. He also purposes publishing with this work, which will be in Burmese, an English translation. A complete history of Burma, such as the one we mention promises to be, is a want which has long been felt. It will also be extremely useful as a text book in our schools, and it is to be hoped that the local Government will liberally patronise it.

SUICIDE OF AN OFFICER.—The European who committed suicide in a railway carriage on Monday (3rd April) turns out to be Captain Mourat, officer in the Nizam's service at Shahabad, while in a state of unsound mind. He first jumped out of the train, and was picked up bruised, taken to Vellore and placed under the charge of an apothecary. Becoming violent, the station-master placed the police over him. On Sunday morning he asked for tea, which was taken to the waiting-room by the apothecary, who, finding him in a kneeling posture, did not disturb him for a few minutes. A scream was heard by some people, who rushed in and found his throat cut with a razor. Death was instantaneous.

COFFEE IN WAINAD.—We are gratified to learn that the prospects of the Wainad Coffee Planters this year are considered excellent. The weather has been favourable, and experienced planters entertain the opinion that the crops cannot fail to be large. They are, however, oppressed with the fear, judging from the heavy showers of rain which are now constantly falling on the Neilgherry Hills, that those showers may extend to the coffee planting districts of the Wainad, in which case much blossom would no doubt be destroyed and considerable damage done to the crops. It is to be hoped the rains will hold off, and thus give the planters a chance of a bumper crop this year.—Madras Athenæum.

THE WYNAD.—The Wynad planters are about to present another memorial to the Madras Government embodying their grievances. Attached to this petition are tabular returns giving the value of coffee estates, the investments made, and the yield. What the memorialists just now require we have not been informed, but it is probable that the usual cry of heavy taxes, of the difficulty experienced in detecting coffee thefts, and of the want of proper magisterial officers to deal out justice in cases where the planter is the sufferer, will be embodied in the petition. The Wynad planters have not been very lucky in all their previous representations to the Madras Government; it is to be hoped, however, that in their appeal to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham they will be successful.

THE BASTAR OUTBREAK.—The Bastar affair, to which we alluded last week, has not passed off so quietly as was believed, and the expedition has been ordered off again from Vizagapatam. One wing of the 7th Regiment proceeded on Tuesday morning, and Colonels Kees and Godfrey with Capt. Persse have also gone; while two companies of the 41st have been ordered to be in readiness. According to the report sent in by the Deputy Inspector General of Police, his small force of two constables and a number of naiks was surrounded by about 20,000 ryots, but he did not consider it probable that there would be a fight, and we have received no intimation of there having been one as yet. The rising is, it would appear, not against the Rajah, but against his Dewan, and it is therefore thought that a change of Ministry is probably all that is needed. The Police Superintendent at Bustar, however, reports on the 1st inst., that the rebels are collecting round him in large numbers, and show hostile feelings against the Police, and it is their threatening attitude which has necessitated the despatch of the small military force which proceeded on Tuesday.—Madras Times, April 8.

COURT DRESS IN MADRAS.—The Duke of Buckingham is destined to become famous in Madras history. He is teaching the natives how to dress themselves. Their "external dress" is to consist of a "long robe," over or under which "a waistband or girdle should be worn." How his Excellency is to be sure that the regulation waistband has not been forgotten altogether in cases where it is worn under the robe is a difficulty we cannot explain, unless a system of inspection is to go on in ante-chambers of Government House that guests might find disagreeable. However, it is evident that Court costume at Madras required definition, as one clause in the Duke's directions is highly suggestive. We read that when natives visit Government House they must be sure that their "lower limbs are carefully covered." It would evidently be dangerous to inquire into the experience of past receptions. "Loose shawls are inadmissible." The feet need not be covered; "but if shoes and boots are worn, they must be of black polished leather." These important regulations have tempted a contemporary into writing an essay on the sumptuary laws of nations, quoting one by Queen Elizabeth, which ordered everybody, with a few authorised exceptions, "to wear on Sundays and holidays a woollen cap of English manufacture, under a penalty of three shilling and fourpence." The idea is worth seizing; and if Indian rulers followed the example of the Duke of Buckingham, they might, in conjunction with Lord Salisbury, pass such a law on turbans and long robes, as would gladden the heart of Manchester for ever. —Pioneer.

BASTAR AND THE GHONDS.—A special telegram from Barhampur, on the 22nd March, to the Madras Times, says :—"A small party of police have been repulsed on the Mahliahs by the Ghonds, armed with war axes, and bows and arrows. A strong police has been despatched under the police superintendent." "These Ghonds are," says our contemporary, "the principal inhabitants of the many feudatory chiefships in the hill country of Chota Nagpur, to the South of the Ganges Valley, in the mountains overhanging the littoral plains of Orissa and Vizagapatam, and in the Central Provinces, and are a wild race, being Aborigines of the country, and also known by the designation of Koles. They are worshippers of the goddess who presides over the productive energies of nature, and who could only be propitiated by the blood of human victims. In 1826, the Rajah of Bastar sacrificed twenty-five men before setting out on a journey, and the meriahs or victims were bought from man-stealers at from fifty to eighty rupees, according to the sex. Crowds came to the sacrifices offered to the earth goddess in the Vizagapatam district, the victim being torn to pieces by the people. Thousands of human beings have thus been tortured to death, and it was not until 1836 that steps were taken to suppress the custom. Roads were made, fairs and markets were established, and the Ghonds were invited to hold intercourse with their civilised neighbours. When Colonel Campbell at length persuaded them to sacrifice beasts instead of men, they prayed: 'Do not be angry with us, O goddess, for giving you the blood of beasts, instead of human blood; but vent your wrath on that gentleman, who is able to bear it.' Gradually the Ghonds were induced to renounce their ancient rites, and to deliver up the surviving meriahs to the British officers. Between 1837 and 1854 there were 1,552 victims rescued, of whom 189 were girls. Of the latter many were married to Ghonds of suitable age and means, and others went to school at Calcutta. Now the practice has been rooted out. The special agency for the suppression of the meriah sacrifices was abolished in 1861, consequent on the organisation of an efficient police in Vizagapatam. In the hills bordering that district, and especially in the wild zemindary Jeypur, both suttee and human sacrifices were common practices, at least until 1855—boys and girls being bought from the poorer classes, and reared as meriahs. In 1863 an English agent, for the first time, was sent into the hill portion of Jeypur, and now there are four sub-magistrates among the wild Ghonds, and an effective police."

STATION TALK.

BARODA, March 25.—After posting my last I attended the State Durbar in honour of H.H. the Gaikwar's birthday. It was a very solemn affair, and as, perhaps, there are some of your numerous readers who have no very clear idea as to what a durbar is, I will describe this one. Our road to the palace in the city is the same along which the "bold and designing Ameena travelled on that eventful night when she was received by the persecuted prince at the top of the staircase," and the durbar is held in the same palace. We arrive at a narrow door, only wide enough to admit one at a time; this door opens on to the main street, and is, I suppose, the principal entrance. A large crowd of natives are in the street, and a guard of honour is drawn up facing the palace. The guard is formed from one of the Gaikwar's regiments, and look smart and well got-up soldiers. They "present arms" as Mr. Melvill passes them. We now enter the narrow door, and our first step is the bottom step of a staircase of the same width as the door on each side. Attached to the side walls is a long rope to hold on by in lieu of a balustrade, and the steps are so steep and high that without the aid of these ropes the ascent would be difficult and somewhat dangerous. Up we climb, and on reaching the top we find ourselves in a narrow room that leads at once into the Hall of Audience or Durbar Room. A rich carpet is spread on the floor, and on the right as you enter is seated a long row of sirdars and natives of the upper class; facing them, and on the other side of the room, sit the European officers and some civilians. All are in undress uniform, with the exception of two or three who appear in full dress. At the top of the room is a handsome sofa plated with gold and covered with cloth of gold, and upon it, side by side, are the youthful Gaikwar and Mr. Melvill, the Resident. The Prime Minister, Sir Mahadava Rao, occupies a chair on the left of the Gaikwar. Facing the sofa, and at the bottom of the room, are two dancing women, each with open mouth singing at the top of their voices, while some dissipated-looking men keep up a subdued accompaniment on some instrument of the fiddle order. The room is decorated with some handsome chandeliers suspended from the ceiling and a few pictures are hung on the walls. These pictures are of the French type, and represent European women in evening dress. It is to be hoped that the young Prince's English friends will use their influence to improve his taste in the matter of pictures; the character is much affected by such objects, The Gaikwar wore one of his splendid diamond neck ornaments. The centre stone was about the size of the bowl of a teaspoon, and said to be worth five lakhs of rupees. After we have sat looking at each other for ten minutes or so, large trays of silver and brass are brought in; on one is the "pan sooparee," which consists of green leaves with spices and sooparee nut upon them, and on the other a pile of flowers. Each guest receives one of the leaves with its contents, and immediately passes it over to an attendant, who is ready to take it, behind his chair; the flowers are then hung round the neck of each of the visitors, a little rosewater sprinkled on each, and the whole assembly rise to depart. The Durbar is over, and we escape into the fresher air of the streets and drive home. I recently had an opportunity of seeing a picture representing a durbar of a hundred years ago. The most striking difference between the durbar of the present and the one of the picture is the great change in the dress of the Europeans, as contrasted with the change that has taken place in the native costume; the latter have, I think, only one slight alteration, they almost all wear English shoes and white or silk stockings, and in the old picture all sit cross-legged on the floor, Europeans and natives alike, which in the tight knee-breeches and silk-stocking period must have been awkward; now all classes sit in English fashion on chairs. The Gaikwar has taken under his patronage a Frenchman and his wife, who exhibit various conjuring tricks; most of them are well-known but they are performed with much skill and exposition. We were all asked to see the exhibition at the City Palace; one of the bands played remarkably well during the performance, and the spectators spent a very pleasant evening, and were much astonished and amused at the various tricks. On Wednesday the staff battery of artillery was relieved; they left by the evening mail train. The scene on the platform was one of some excitement, as several ladies were leaving the station by the same train and the crowd of goers and leave-takers was great. One of the men had a pet sheep, and was seated on the platform with his arms round the warm-coated creature's neck; he declined to part with it when the guard wanted to put it into the break-van, and ended by taking it with him into the carriage. As the train moved off there was a little cheering, and the names of Colonel Thompson and Colonel Nuttall and one or two others who had made themselves friends in the battery were called out. The new half battery are in tents until the barracks are ready; it is to be hoped that they will not be kept long in tents, as the heat is now becoming rather greater than is agreeable.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ARRIVAL OF SIR WILLIAM MEREWETHER.—Sir William Merewether arrived in Bombay by steamer from Kurrachee on Thursday afternoon. On his landing at the Apollo Bunder he was received by the usual Government officials, and a salute of 13 guns was fired from the saluting battery.—Times of India, April 10.

MILITARY.—Captain Nettles, 3rd Hussars, is under orders to leave Mhow to take command of the depôt at Canterbury, Captain Napier, who was commanding the depôt, having rejoined headquarters. Lieutenant Dickson gets his troop by the retirement of Captain Starkey. Lieutenant Rogers is leaving Mhow on six months' leave to Kashmir.

THE SIND FRONTIER.—On Friday, April 7, Lieutenant-Colonel Nuttall, of the 22nd N.I., at present stationed in Baroda, received a telegram from the Viceroy announcing his appointment to take charge of the Sind frontier—a change which is due to the rather sudden removal by telegraph of Colonel Loch from Jacobabad for supposed opposition to the recent policy inaugurated towards Keelat. All who know Colonel Nuttall will agree that on the Sind frontier he will probably turn out to be the right man in the right place.

ACCIDENT TO DR. HUGHES.—We regret to say that a rather serious accident happened to Dr. Hughes, Professor of Midwifery, on Monday evening. He was driving home to Malabar Hill from the Bombay Club, and at a portion of the road the pair of Walers in his phaeton became restive. The conveyance was dashed against a lamp-post, and Dr. Hughes was thrown out violently. His face was badly cut, and he received a number of contusions. He is, however, doing well, and no serious consequences are likely to result from the mishap.—Bombay Gazette, April 10.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF SIR SALAR JUNG.—Sir Salar Jung, C.S.I., and a number of other Haidarabad noblemen who are about to accompany his Excellency to England, arrived in Bombay on Friday morning from Poona. The special train by which his Excellency travelled reached the Boree Bunder station shortly after ten o'clock. There had been some misunderstanding about the time at which he would arrive, and there were consequently not so many people present to receive his Excellency as there otherwise would have been. Besides his followers, Sir Salar Jung was accompanied by Captain G. H. Trevor, Major Nevill, and Surgeon Major Williamson. His Excellency and suite left Bombay on Saturday evening, with a retinue of fifty-nine Native gentlemen, for Naples, on board the steamer Asia, belonging to the Rubattino Company, which has been chartered for the voyage.—Bombay Gazette, April 10.

COTTON.—The first of the reports for this season has just been issued, showing the quantity of cotton sent to Bombay from the Central Provinces and Berar. It shows that up to the 18th ult. 136,336 bales had been despatched. The Assistant Commissioner in charge of Cotton Statistics makes the following remarks on these figures:—"Comparing the total trade done up to date, we are now 97,580 bales short of last year's exports. This is the extent of the decrease that I anticipated in my forecast of the season published in January last. I see no reason to alter the figures then given. The present crop was a late one. Dealers have been holding back for higher rates, and I anticipate that from this time business will be more on a par with last year's scale, and that we may have 75,000 bales more before the rains."

LITIGATION.—The report of the First Judge of the Bombay Court of Small Causes shows an increase of litigation in this Court during the past year, but this increase is much less in degree than the decrease shown at the end of the preceding year. There were 1,200 more suits instituted in 1875 than in 1874, but omitting 1874 it is six years since the number was so small as it was last year. And again, omitting 1874, it is eleven and twelve years respectively since the amount litigated and the income of the Court were as small as last year. And of suits under the extended jurisdiction the number this year, though it is substantially greater than that of last year, is still, with the exception of last year's, the smallest number ever instituted since the jurisdiction was first extended, in 1874; and the First Judge states in his report that the increase this year is due to an exceptional cause, namely, the filing of a number of suits for share by companies in liquidation.

KHELAT.—The coming year will in all probability see another State added to those under the control of the Punjab Government—Khelat, whose relations are immediately with Kabul and the Punjab frontier, will most probably be withdrawn from Bombay, with which it has no concern; and the deputation of Colonel Munro, the Commissioner of the Derajat, to Jacobabad, and of Major Sandeman, the Magistrate of Dera Ghazi Khan, to Khelat, seem to point to this severance as certain. Whether the Government of India will continue a Resident at Khelat is doubtful, but its affairs can be controlled as effectively from Jacobabad. The new Viceroy is said to be provided with a new and a spirited frontier policy, but we doubt whether he will find it possible to do much more than Lord Northbrook has done during the last months of his term of office. We may, it is true, appoint a Resident at Kabul or Herat, but the complications which might result have at all events been wisely avoided hitherto by prudent statesmen, who know that within our Indian borders we are impregnable, and that beyond them there is only doubt, danger, an financial difficulty.—Pioneer.

THE COTTON MILLS OF BOMBAY.—It seems to be necessary to correct an extraordinary misapprehension that prevails at home as to the ownership of the capital which maintains the cotton industry of Bombay. Mr. Ashworth lately informed the Secretary of State, and no one contradicted him, that most of the capital invested in our cotton mills is supplied by Englishmen. Our local readers are well aware that this is an egregious mistake. In the majority of the Bombay mills the capital is held entirely by native shareholders; and, though there are some mills in which a few English names figure on the register, the proportion of capital held by them is quite insignificant, and it may be said generally that the means of carrying on the enterprise of manufacturing cotton goods in this country have been supplied entirely by natives of Bombay. Indeed, even the management is in most cases wholly in native hands, there being few boards of directors of which Europeans are members, while the number of skilled English mechanics engaged in the mills is steadily decreasing. It is doubtful if there is any one mill in Bombay in which more than three Englishmen are employed; and the cotton industry is in all respects, except that the coal and machinery for carrying it on must at present be imported from England, a purely native industry.—Bombay Gazette.

THE WRECK OF THE S.S. "JAVAD"—MURDER OF THE CAPTAIN.—The s.s. Mula, which arrived in harbour on Thursday, brought some further particulars respecting the above vessel. It appears that before the Mula left Jeddah the crew of a native boat which had visited the wreck informed the captain that on going on board not a living soul was to be seen. They came across the body of the captain with his throat cut and his hands bound behind him. It will be recollected that on the 24th ult. a letter appeared in our columns stating that there were certain ugly rumours about, to the effect that the pilgrims, finding the ship overcrowded, seized the captain and the mate and bound them to the mast. It is easy to understand now how the accident took place. The Javad had 400 pilgrims on board, and a crew of 40 men, of whom four were Europeans, while there was really only accommodation for half of that number. Of these ten passengers and three of the crew were saved, besides the interpreter, who was picked up after tossing about for three days and nights on a plank. So far as is known, the Turkish authorities seem to have taken no steps in the matter, although the Javad was sailing under Turkish colours. The Shipping Master here has written to the Consul at Jeddah for further information on the subject. The Mula also brought in twelve men who were saved from the Hydree. There were thirteen saved in all, but one died on the voyage here.—Times of India, April 10.

THE LATE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.

No. 130.—March 16.—The Gov. gen. in Council has received with the deepest regret the intelligence of the death, at Rawalpindi, in the Punjab, on the 15th inst.. of the Right Rev. Robert Milman, D.D., Lord Bishop of Calcutta.

The Gov. gen. in Council desires to place on record the sense which he entertains of the late Bishop Milman's indefatigable energy in the discharge of the high functions of his office;—of his charity and munificence;—of his zeal in promoting all good works—especially the education of the poorer classes of Europeans in India—and of his broad benevolent sympathy with all classes of the community. The Bishop has devoted his health and strength to the conscientious fulfilment of his arduous duties in ministering to the spiritual and temporal welfare of his diocese; and he has now died in the midst of his labours, doubtless in consequence of them.

The Gov. gen. in Council is sure that Bishop Milman's untimely death will be felt as a personal loss, and that his memory will be affectionately cherished by her Majesty's subjects in India.

The flag of Fort William will be hoisted half-mast high to-day, which is the day of the funeral.

THE ROYAL TITLE.

The following Proclamation appears in last night's Gazette:—

VICTORIA, R.

Whereas an Act has been passed in the present Session of Parliament, intituled "An Act to enable her Most Gracious Majesty to make an Addition to the Royal Style and Titles appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom and its Dependencies," which Act recites that, by the Act for the Union of Great Britain and Ireland, it was provided that after such Union the Royal Style and Titles appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom and its Dependencies should be such as his Majesty by his Royal Proclamation under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom should be pleased to appoint; and which Act also recites that, by virtue of the said Act, and of a Royal Proclamation under the Great Seal, dated the 1st day of January, 1801, our present Style and Titles are "Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith;" and which Act also recites that, by the Act for the better Government of India, it was enacted that the Government of India, theretofore vested in the East India Company, in trust for us, should become vested in us, and that India should thenceforth be governed by us and in our name, and that it is expedient that there should be a recognition of the transfer of Government so made by means of an addition to be made to our Style and Titles: And which Act, after the said recitals, enacts that it shall be lawful for us, with a view to such recognition as aforesaid, of the transfer of the Government of India, by our Royal Proclamation under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to make such addition to the Style and Titles at present appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom and its Dependencies as to us may seem meet; We have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, to appoint and declare, and we do hereby, by and with the said advice, appoint and declare that henceforth, so far as conveniently may be, on all occasions and in all instruments wherein our Style and Titles are used, save and except all Charters, Commissions, Letters Patent, Grants, Writs, Appointments, and other like instruments, not extending in their operation beyond the United Kingdom, the following addition shall be made to the Style and Titles at present appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom and its Dependencies; that is to say, in the Latin tongue in these words: "Indiæ Imperatrix." And in the English tongue in these words: "Empress of India."

And our will and pleasure further is, that the said addition shall not be made in the Commissions, Charters, Letters Patent, Grants, Writs, Appointments, and other like instruments, hereinbefore specially excepted.

And our will and pleasure further is, that all gold, silver, and copper moneys, now current, and lawful moneys of the United Kingdom, and all gold, silver, and copper moneys which sha on or after this day, be coined by our authority with the like impressions, shall, notwithstanding such addition to our Style and Titles, be deemed and taken to be current and lawful moneys of the said United Kingdom; and further, that all moneys coined for and issued in any of the Dependencies of the said United Kingdom, and declared by our Proclamation to be current and lawful money of such Dependencies, respectively bearing our Style, or Titles, or any part or parts thereof, and all moneys which shall hereafter be coined and issued according to such Proclamation, shall, notwithstanding such addition, continue to be lawful and current money of such Dependencies respectively until our pleasure shall be further declared thereupon.

Given at our Court at Windsor the twenty-eighth day of April, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-Six, in the thirty-ninth year of our Reign.

God Save the Queen.

SIR BARTLE FRERE.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to confer the honour of a baronetcy upon Sir Bartle Frere, G.C.S.I., K.C.B.

BUST OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.—The bust of the Prince of Wales in the Robes of the Star of India, by Mr. Wood, which was placed upon its pedestal in the Royal Academy, on Monday, is exhibited by command of her Majesty the Queen.

THE INDIAN PRESENTS TO THE PRINCE.—The Jumna, Indian troopship, which arrived alongside Portsmouth Dockyard on the 22nd of April, with invalids and time-expired men, brings home another contingent of the gifts presented to the Prince of Wales during his Indian journey. There are large numbers of cases containing botanical specimens collected in India for the Prince by Mr. Mudd. The animals consist of four horses, chiefly hill ponies, several deer, a wild boar, four hairless dogs, a saumur, and several birds. The animals were in charge of Mr. Bartlett, son of Mr. Bartlett, of the Zoological Gardens, and will be removed direct to Sandringham.

THE IND AN DEBT IN ENGLAND.—A Parliamentary return, just issued, "of all loans raised in England under the provisions of any Act of Parliament chargeable on the revenues of India outstanding at the commencement of the half-year ending on the 31st of March, 1876," shows that the total debt in England outstanding on October 1, 1875, was £48,597,033, which had increased on March 31, 1876, to £49,797,033. The amount of debt incurred during the half-year was £1,200,000, in 4 per cent. debentures, terminating on August 16, 1878. A sum of £1,206,298 was also raised temporarily, in consequence of the low rate of exchange tendered for bills on India.

MR. PLIMSOLL AND THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.—Mr. Bethune, Secretary of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, writes to us:—In the Daily News of 26th inst. I observe a report of a speech made by Mr. Plimsoll, at a dinner of Trades Union Delegates, in which, after stating that he would not attack small shipowners merely but the highest, he goes on to say that this Company sold a ship called the Baltic which disappeared on the first voyage after she was sold, and that another ship also belonging to this Company was sold to the same man and was lost on her second voyage. I shall feel obliged if you will allow me space to say that these statements, so far as they affect this Company, are incorrect in every particular. This Company never had a vessel called the Baltic, and of the only two vessels sold by the Company to which Mr. Plimsoll's remarks can possibly apply, one which was sold in 1870 is still running. The other, which was sold in 1868, was not lost on her second voyage, but six years afterwards, in 1874, was burnt at sea through her cargo of coals igniting. This vessel was not, as Mr. Plimsoll appears to imply, unclassed or disclassed, but was of the highest class, twenty years, in the Liverpool Registry."

PROMOTION TO COLONELCIES.—Lieutenant-Colonel John M'Kay, commanding 2nd Battalion 12th Regiment, becomes a colonel in the army from the 1st proximo, on completion of the qualifying service. Colonel M'Kay, who obtained his first commission in August, 1854, from sergeant in the 19th Regiment, has been a most fortunate officer in his promotion, having risen to the command of a regiment of the line, after scarcely seventeen years' service, without purchasing any of his steps. The only other brevet-colonels on the active list of the army who have risen from the ranks are Colonel Edward Seager, Inspecting Officer of Yeomanry Cavalry, who enlisted in 1830, served throughout the Crimean war and Central India campaigns, and is now high on the list for promotion to major-general; and Colonel William Lyons, late Assistant-Adjutant-General for Recruiting in the London District, who took the shilling when a lad, in 1828, and obtained his first commission in 1841. Both officers bear excellent reputations in the service.—The selection of Lieutenant-General the Right Hon. Sir Percy Egerton Herbert, K.C.B., for the vacant colonelcy of the 74th Highlanders is due to his long and distinguished career in our army. Although the member for South Shropshire was never previously connected with the 74th Highlanders, yet he fought by its side through the Kaffir campaigns of 1851-53 as an officer in the 43rd Light Infantry. General Herbert was present as an Assistant-Quartermaster-General throughout the Crimean war, was wounded at the Alma, and again before Sebastopol, and took part in the Indian Mutiny with the 82nd Regiment. He has also filled high staff appointments at the Horse Guards and at Aldershot, and has taken an active part in all military debates from the days of his first joining the House of Commons, as member for Ludlow, in February, 1854.

THE GOSPEL IN INDIA.—The Archbishop of Canterbury presided on Thursday at the anniversary meeting of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. Amongst those present were the Bishop of Winchester, the Dean of York, Archdeacon Harrison, the Revs. A. M. Bennett, Dr. Currey, and W. Cadman, Sir Bartle Frere, Sir Thomas Gladstone, Colonel Dalton, &c. According to the report, which was read by the Rev. W. T. Bullock (secretary), the general fund never before had so large an amount of collections, &c., as last year, the gross total being £125,294. 3s. 9d. During the past year 528 missionaries had been engaged in the various fields of labour. It could not be doubted but that the gratifying visit of the Prince of Wales had had the effect of drawing the heart of India nearer to Christian England. Sir Bartle Frere, who was warmly received, wished he could convey to the meeting any portion of the great amount of encouragement which he everywhere saw during his recent tour with the Prince of Wales of the spread of Christianity throughout India. The natives appreciated the general toleration of religion, which was one of the safeguards of missionary enterprise in India. The Archbishop of Canterbury congratulated the meeting on the safe return of Sir Bartle Frere, for such a layman as he, who had given them the benefit of his observations in India, was a great help and prop to the Church of England. He alluded with pleasure to the appointment of Dr. Caldwell and Dr. Sargent as bishops, they having had assigned to them the episcopal charge of two districts comprising the province of Tinnivelly. He trusted that in course of time they would have native bishops of the Church. (Cheers.) Addresses were then delivered by a number of gentlemen, who reviewed the progress of the society, and the proceedings terminated.

THE NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA.—The annual meeting of the shareholders in the above bank was held on April 22. Mr. R. O. Campbell occupied the chair, and there was but a small attendance of shareholders. Mr. R. O. Sawers, the chief manager, read the notice calling the meeting, and presented the report of the directors, which stated that the profits of the half-year ending December last amounted to £10,582, which, with £13,790 brought over from the previous half-year, gave an available balance of £24,373. From this sum the board wrote off £3,755 for bad and doubtful debts, appropriated £11,631 to the payment of a dividend at the rate of five per cent. per annum, leaving £8,986 to be carried to new profit and loss account. The report also said, "The directors think it right to state that no losses have been sustained on the transactions of the half-year under review, but on a revision of the bad and doubtful debt account it has been deemed desirable to make the above-mentioned provision of £3,755, which they consider will practically adjust the outstandings on that account." The Chairman concluded a brief speech by moving the adoption of the report and the accounts. Mr. E. W. Wingrove, the deputy-chairman of the bank, briefly seconded the motion, which was put and carried nem. dis., and the dividend declared. The Chairman said that since the report was issued the board had received many letters from shareholders residing abroad—and, as most present were aware, the majority resided in Calcutta—asking that the dividend should be paid in gold sterling in London instead of in silver in Calcutta as heretofore, and the board had decided to accede to that request. The retiring directors, Messrs. W. S. Fitzwilliam, R. O. Campbell, and J. R. Boyson, were unanimously re-elected, as were also the auditors. A Shareholder inquired whether it would not be well for the board to call a meeting to consider if the time had not come when the bank's operations should cease and the institution be wound up, and the capital invested returned to the shareholders. He was not satisfied with the remarks of the chairman nor the management, because he found that for the eight years and a half that the bank had been in operation the average dividend paid had amounted to only 4¼ per cent. Two other shareholders supported the previous speaker. The Chairman in reply said that latterly times had been against Indian banks, but they could look hopefully to the future.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, April 24.—THE ROYAL TITLE.—In reply to Mr. FAWCETT, Mr. DISRAELI declined to offer any facilities for a fresh discussion on the Royal Titles Bill, because the question had already been decided by the House, and because, further, one opportunity had already been given to the hon. gentleman for bringing forward a motion on the subject, but that opportunity had not been utilised. Considering that the Government had only two out of the five working Parliamentary nights of the week at their disposal for the prosecution of public business, he did not feel justified in offering any further facilities.—Mr. FAWCETT thereupon gave notice that he would move a direct vote of censure against the Government for advising her Majesty to assume the title of Empress of India, and promised to ask the Prime Minister whether he would give facilities for the prosecution of such a motion as that.

PERAK.—Mr. BOURKE promised Mr. E. NOEL the early production of papers in regard to the Government of Perak.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, April 25.—COMPLAINTS OF OFFICERS IN INDIA.—Lord G. HAMILTON informed Colonel JERVIS that complaints on the subject of their pay made by Majors Wynch, Ellis, Rawlins, Thornton, Knox, McLeod, Hammond, Royal Artillery, at inspections by general officers in February, 1875, stated by the Madras Government 23rd September, 1875 (Parliamentary Return, East India Office, March 6, 1876), to have been sent to the Deputy Adjutant General, Royal Artillery, Horse Guards, had not yet been received. He would cause inquiry to be made as to whether memorials from officers of the Royal Artillery, complaining of the mode in which the warrant of July 5, 1872, had been carried out by the Government of India, had miscarried.

THE INDIA TARIFF ACT.—Lord G. HAMILTON stated, in answer to Sir G. BALFOUR, that they had received two days ago the last papers connected with the replies of the India Government to the despatch of the Secretary of State for India of the 11th November, 1875, relating to the India Tariff Act; and as soon as the reply of the Secretary of State for India to the reply of the Government of India, now under consideration, had been made he would lay the papers on the table of the House.

THE ROYAL TITLE.—Mr. FAWCETT: I wish to ask the First Lord of the Treasury whether he will afford any facilities for the discussion of the motion, of which notice has already been given, disapproving of the advice to be tendered to her Majesty by her Ministers in reference to the Royal Titles Bill before the Proclamation is issued which will give effect to that Bill?—The Marquis of HARTINGTON said he should like to explain, before the answer was given, that the right hon. gentleman at the head of the Government was under a misapprehension in what he had stated yesterday. It was a fact that the notice by the hon. member for Hackney was placed on the paper without consulting him (the noble marquis), and the motion to censure the Government was not therefore supported by the Opposition. After what had occured he should consult his friends as to the desirability of taking steps to facilitate the consideration of the motion of which the hon. member for Hackney gave notice yesterday.—Mr. DISRAELI, the House will, I am sure, understand that because a member of this House proposes a vote of censure against the Government, the latter cannot accept it as a matter of course, because it is quite obvious if that were the case the whole session would be wasted. I was under the apprehension when the circumstances took place, just before the adjournment, to which the noble lord has referred, that he had adopted the vote of censure. After the explanation the noble lord has given, I see I was in error, but the error was one that prevailed on all hands. If a leader of the Opposition gives notice of a vote of censure he does it with a full knowledge of the responsibility he incurs, and in that event her Majesty would not be without counsellors. This does not apply to private members, however. With regard to the question of the hon. member for Hackney, if it were carried it would be a vote of censure on the House of Commons. He seeks to alter a decision which the House arrived at, after full discussion, by a large majority. Under these circumstances, I do not feel justified in giving him any facilities for bringing on his motion.—Mr. FAWCETT denied that the motion, if carried, would be a vote of censure on the House of Commons, as all the Royal Titles Bill did was to entitle her Majesty to assume an addition to the Royal style and title. The motion would censure the conduct of the Government in giving the advice that the new title should be that of Empress.—The SPEAKER called the hon. member to order, stating that, according to the rules of the House, he could not discuss a motion which was not before hon. members.—Mr. FAWCETT said the motion was of great importance, but as the Government had refused to give him a day, he would leave the matter in the hands of those who possessed an authority in the House which he could not claim—an authority which would enable them, if they thought it desirable in the interests of the country, to obtain that consideration for the motion which he had failed to secure. He would give notice that he would leave the motion on the paper until the Royal Proclamation was issued.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, April 27.—THE ROYAL STYLE AND TITLES BILL.—The Royal Style and Titles Bill received the Royal Assent in the presence of the Speaker of the House of Commons and one or two members of that House, the Peers being represented by the Lords Commissioners themselves.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, April 27.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—The question of the Royal Titles Bill unexpectedly came up again, and led to a prolonged and exciting debate.—Mr. COWEN gave notice of his intention to ask the Marquis of Hartington whether, seeing that the statement made by the Prime Minister to the effect that the proposed addition to the Queen's title would be satisfactory to the people and princes of India had been corrected by information since received, he would now urge the Government to give a day for the discussion of Mr. Fawcett's motion.—Subsequently Mr. C. LEWIS gave notice that he would ask Mr. Lowe, with reference to his speech at Retford, whether he will state to which Ministers of the Crown he referred, when he said that two predecessors of Mr. Disraeli had been asked to propose the assumption by the Queen of the title of Empress of India, and had declined.— The SPEAKER, pointed out that as the question did not refer to any matter that had passed in the House it would not be in order to put it.—Some time later, all the questions being disposed of, Mr. ANDERSON asked Mr. Disraeli whether, in view of Mr. Cowen's pending question to the leader of the Opposition, he would consent to postpone the issue of the proclamation of the new title till Lord Hartington had had an opportunity of replying.—Mr. DISRAELI shortly replied that he had received no notice of the question.—Mr.

Digitized by Google

ANDERSON insisted that the question was a simple one, and scarcely needed notice; whereupon Mr. DISRAELI answered that he would not advise the Queen to delay the issue of the proclamation.—Mr. C. LEWIS here found an opportunity of giving in another form notice of his intended question to Mr. Lowe.—Mr. FAWCETT moved the adjournment of the House, and proceeded to refer to Mr. Disraeli's narrative of what had taken place before the adjournment for the recess as "scarcely accurate," adding that "a stronger expression might be used." Mr. Disraeli was, he continued, amid murmurs and renewed cries of "Order!" from the opposite benches, attempting to wriggle out of the question—"he said it advisedly, attempting to wriggle out of it," being afraid to face a vote of censure.—After a brief pause the Marquis of HARTINGTON rose, and observed that he could not say such further communication as he had had with other gentlemen on that side of the House had induced him to believe that it would be expedient that he should urge the Prime Minister to give a day for the discussion of Mr. Fawcett's resolution.—Mr. DISRAELI declared with some warmth that he would undertake that, if Lord Hartington, after the issue of the proclamation, thought fit to bring forward a vote of censure on the Government, he would secure the earliest opportunity for discussing it.—Mr. BRIGHT said Mr. Disraeli was trying to evade the question, which really was not one of a vote of censure. The object of Mr. Fawcett's motion was to give the House a final opportunity of deciding on the merits of the title of Empress, an object which the Ministry had hitherto defeated by pushing forward the measure with a degree of compulsion unusual with regard to any Bill, and dangerous in the case of one affecting such delicate interests.—The House being now fully roused, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER endeavoured to soothe it by showing in detail how deliberate and free from haste had been the progress of the Bill.—Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Mr. MUNDELLA, Lord ELCHO, and Mr. WATKIN WILLIAMS continued the debate, which was brought to a conclusion by Mr. FAWCETT withdrawing his motion for the adjournment.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, April 28.—THE BENGAL FAMINE.—Mr. EUSTACE SMITH called attention to the correspondence on the Bengal famine. He proposed the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the circumstances of the disaster and the various systems of relief adopted.—Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL, the late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, explained the steps taken by the Indian Government in the emergency, and recommended certain general principles for future adoption.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON characterised the motion as a vote of censure, and expressed his belief that the appointment of a committee would not do much pratical good, it being generally allowed that the policy of the Indian Government during the famine was attended with singular success.—Mr. FAWCETT, Mr. GRANT DUFF, and other honourable members spoke during the debate.—On a division the motion was negatived by a majority of 103.

INDIAN LEGISLATION BILL.—Sir W. VERNON HARCOURT, on the 1st of May, will move, on the proposal for going into committee on the Indian Legislation Bill, that the House will upon that day six months resolve itself into the said committee.

FATAL AFFRAY WITH NATIVES.—The Moradabad correspondent of an Indian paper says :—"I can give you now a more detailed account of the fray between some soldiers and natives. Five soldiers went out shooting to Asophpur ; they shot a peacock. The natives turned out in numbers with latees, and tried to attack the soldiers ; the latter, when hard pressed, in self-defence, fired, killing three and wounding about sixteen or eighteen more. The Europeans retreated to the railway station, followed by the natives. The stationmaster, a Baboo, wanted to leave the former to the mercy of the latter by despatching the train, which was about starting, without them, but the driver and guard stuck to the soldiers. Mr. Payne, the traffic manager at Bareilly, was telegraphed for, and came down with a pilot engine and took the train with the soldiers in it to Bareilly. The train was delayed for two hours. The row was serious, as the natives wanted to tear up the rails. It seems strange that any other person in India can go shooting and knock over as many peafowls as he likes. I have seen dozens shot, and no row is made about it ; but no sooner does a soldier fire at one than he is mobbed, and his life endangered, and he can only escape by the violent remedy resorted to in this case."

ADDRESS TO MRS. PHEAR.—There was an interesting gathering of Hindoo ladies and gentlemen on Thursday last at the residence of Baboo Doorga Mohun Dass, No. 1, South Circular-road, to present Mrs. J. B. Phear with an address from the pupils and ex-pupils of the Hindoo Mohila Bidalaya prior to her leaving India. A few European ladies and gentlemen, consisting of the guest of the evening, Mr. Phear, Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow, and Mrs. Gibbons, were also present. The number of ladies by far outweighed the number of gentlemen present. Among the native gentlemen we saw there were—Messrs. Mono Mohun Ghose, Anundo Mohun Bose, Sreenath Dutta, and Baboo Protab Chunder Mazoomdar, and a few others. The business commenced at about 9 P.M., with a song sung by some of the ladies. It was an exhortation to the women of India to awake and be up and doing. Then the English translation of the address was read by the Miss Daas, the daughter of Baboo Doorga Mohun Dass. Mrs. A. M. Bose, the lady who composed the address, then followed her to read the original address in Bengali. After the reading of the address, which was very beautifully printed on parchment and in golden letters, it was presented to Mrs. Phear, with a silver plate and a garland. Here the good hostess distributed garlands to other ladies and gentlemen. Mrs. Phear, in receiving the address, made a very short but feeling reply. The proceedings of the evening were concluded with a song specially composed for the occasion. There was a good deal of friendly conversation after the refreshments (which consisted of tea, coffee, cakes, &c., as well as various sweetmeats prepared by the ladies themselves) were passed round. Everything went off satisfactorily, under the direction of Mrs. Mono Mohun Ghose and the hostess, assisted by some other young ladies. The party departed, evidently with much satisfaction, at about midnight.—Indian Daily News, March 31.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.
SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

COCKLE'S PILLS,

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 76 years for
INDIGESTION.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

LAMPLOUGH'S

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.
Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."
SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.
SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.
For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See article in the Civil Service Gazette.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, April 17; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, April 15; Calcutta, April 14.

THE Calcutta papers mention the arrival of Lord Lytton in that city on April 12, and of Sir Frederick Haines a day or two later. The new Viceroy's opening speech to his Council, the gist of which has already appeared in our columns, seems to have given general satisfaction. Lord Northbrook and suite left Calcutta on the morning of April 15, in the Tenasserim troop ship, embarking at Prinsep's Ghaut, amidst the greetings of a large and mixed crowd. Nearly his last legislative act was the passing of the Calcutta Municipal Bill. It is said that his Lordship was so perfectly satisfied about its political usefulness or harmlessness that he did not even trouble the Executive Council for an opinion.

AT the meeting of the Viceregal Council on Tuesday, April 11, the Presidency Banks Bill and the Obsolete Enactments Repeal Bill were passed. The presentation of the reports on the Merchant Seamen's Act Amendment Bill, and the Presidency Towns Police Bill, was postponed. Sir H. Norman then expressed the regret of the Council at Lord Northbrook's departure, and his Lordship thanked the Council for the assistance they had given to him, and for their remarks about himself. The Council then adjourned sine die; and so ended Lord Northbrook's Indian career.

THE Horse Fair at Rawal Pindi appears to have been a great success. From two to three thousand horses were on the ground, nearly a thousand of whom are believed to have changed hands, at rates that should be satisfactory to the sellers, and encouraging to those who make horse-breeding a business. It will, however, require constant care and pressure to keep up the breed that is best suited for army purposes, and the best method of doing so is still open to question.

THE Rajah of Patiála died, it seems, of epilepsy, brought on from drink, a taste for which his Sikh countrymen have been more or less noted ever since the days of Ranjit Singh. The late Rajah was only twenty-four when he died, after a nominal rule of fourteen years. Patiála, we are told, was well liked by Englishmen for his manly character and liberality, his house being "open" all the year round. Unhappily, he could not control his passion for strong drink, which possessed him at all times and in all places. He also indulged in the most reckless extravagance. His vanity led him to adorn his person at any cost; and his friends had frequent reason to fear that he was determined to throw his patrimony into the lap of Calcutta jewellers. His eldest son, five years old, succeeds to the gadi. It was thought that the Government of the State would be placed under a regency with the present Prime Minister as President. Mr. Lepel Griffin left Simla on April 15 for Patiála, where Mr. Gore Ouseley, the Commissioner of Ambála, had been telegraphed to meet him.

AN influential meeting was held at Calcutta on the evening of April 11, under the presidency of Lord Northbrook, when it was resolved to commemorate the services of the late Bishop Milman by raising funds towards the creation of a new Bishopric of Lahor for Northern India.

IT is rumoured at Simla that among the reforms recommended in the Native Army are the following:—Increase of pay to sepoys and native officers, and two more English officers to each regiment. We are also assured that the Viceroy's Council has supported Lord Napier in most of his views.

ANOTHER rising of rayats is reported, this time from Barhampur. The whole of the village turned out to resist the arrest of certain of their number, and one hundred policemen were beaten back. The ringleaders were eventually captured by a strong police force, and order was restored.

THE Punjab Northern State Railway was opened for public traffic, as far as Naurangabad, on the south bank of the river Jhilam, on Monday, the 10th April. There will be only one train a day at present, leaving Lahor at 12 30.

WE regret to learn the sudden death from cholera of Mr. Charles George, R.N., on the 1st April, at Akyab, on the Arakan coast. Mr. George was one of the naval officers who went out to India some two years since for the Indian Marine Survey. At the time of his death he was serving on board the s.s. Clyde with Captain Jarrad.

IT is given out in Calcutta that Mr. W. Spink, of the firm of Thacker, Spink and Co., is to be appointed a member of the Bengal Legislative Council when Mr. Brookes leaves for England. A better selection, remarks the Englishman, could not be made. Mr. Spink, besides being one of the oldest residents in Calcutta, has done no little service to Anglo-Indian literature by his skill and discrimination as a publisher.

FROM Sir W. Muir's Financial Statement we learn that the net Army Charges, which in 1867 were £15,344,000, were gradually reduced to £14,217,000 in 1873. During the next two years they were very little higher, but for the present year they are estimated at £15,101,000. On the returns for eight of these years Mr. Kellner, the Military Accountant-General, thus remarks:—

The expenditure of the first four years ended in 1870-71 included a charge of £90,000 for the Hazara Campaign. The expenditure of the next four years included the following extraordinary charges:—

Digitized by Google

The Looshai and Duffla Expeditions	£259,000
Camps of Exercise	90,000
Capitalised value of annuities to retired officers ...	195,000
Total...	£544,000

If these extraordinary charges be deducted from the net expenditure of the two periods the remainder will give an average normal expenditure of £15,187,632 per annum for the first four years, and of £14,347,935 for the four years ended in 1874-75, being a reduction of £839,697 per annum.

An examination of the returns of the effective strength of British and Indian troops during the same period brings out the following result :—

	British Troops.	Indian Troops.	Total.
Average effective strength from 1867-68 to 1870-71	56,989 ...	122,270 ...	179,259
Average effective strength from 1871-72 to 1874-75	59,993 ...	119,379 ...	179,372

There were thus 3,000 British troops more, and a like number of Indian troops less, in the later period, the excess being explained by the fact that the effective strength of British troops in the country was considerably below the complement between the years 1867-68 and 1870-71, and the deficiency in the other case by the absorption of supernumerary Native soldiers entertained for the Abyssinian expedition, and by the recent suspension of recruiting operations in the Madras Native Cavalry. If the average annual expenditure be divided by the average effective strength of British and Indian troops during the two periods (assuming that one British soldier is financially equal to two and a-half Indian soldiers), the rate of expenditure for each man will be found to be £143. 4s. for the first four years, and £133. 1s. for the four years ended in 1874-75. And this reduction of expense has been effected simultaneously with considerable improvements in the pay, instruction, and equipment of the soldier.

OUR little difference with the Afridis near Kohát is not quite settled yet. According to recent telegrams two Afridi clans have sent away their families to a place of safety, proclaimed war, and made several raids, in which they attacked a village five miles from Peshawar and carried away 120 head of cattle. Other mountain tribes are said to have joined them. A strong force will be sent from Peshawar, and may enter the Khaibar Pass. Owing to the recent blockade the tribes are short of provisions, but are apparently determined to fight; so that unless strong measures are promptly taken the affair may yet give us much trouble.

AT the latest telegraphic dates the force sent to Bastar was still there, but, as the rayats are dispersing and there is little chance now of a collision, the troops will probably soon return.

A Times telegram from Calcutta announces that during the minority of the Maharajah of Patiala the State will be managed by a Council of Regency, consisting of the present Ministers and an European officer. The late Maharajah's ashes have been conveyed with great pomp to Bardwan, to be consigned to the holy waters of the Ganges.

IT is believed that Sir R. Temple will visit Nepal before going to Darjiling. If he does go, we hope that he will succeed in inducing the Nepal Government to withdraw the existing restrictions on Europeans entering the country. At present no Englishman save the Resident can even enter Nepal. This visit, coupled with his previous journeys to Sikhim, seems to show that Sir R. Temple is fully convinced of the weakness of the policy which allows Nepal and China to shut us out from Tibet and the Trans-Himalayan trade.

ACCORDING to a telegram from the Times Calcutta Correspondent, the last number of the Calcutta Gazette contains an important Minute by Sir R. Temple on the vexed question of the adjustment of rent disputes between landlords and occupancy rayats. The remedy he proposes is briefly this—to ascertain the difference between the average rents of occupancy and non-occupancy rayats in each district, and of this difference to allot a certain share to the occupancy rayat and the remainder to the landlord. In fixing the former's share, regard should be had to the length and character of his possession, but his rent is always to be fixed at least twenty per cent. under that of the non-occupancy rayat. Tenants are also to have full allowance for any improvements they may effect.

WE learn from a recent telegram to the Times that the troops sent under Colonel Jebb to escort the Grosvenor Mission have arrived at Bhamo, and will march thence to Manwain, where the Chinese escort stops. Colonel Duncan, the Political Agent at Mandalay, accompanies the troops. The rumour that seventeen men are to be executed for complicity in the murder of Mr. Margary is still unconfirmed. The mission is said to be a great success.

FROM the same source we learn that Major Sandeman's expedition has reached Kirta, in the Bolan Pass, where an outbreak of cholera delayed his advance. There were eighty cases, of which thirty were fatal. As the disease is now abating the march towards Khelat will probably soon be resumed. The reception by the Chiefs and the Khan's officers being friendly, the trading caravans were safely escorted into the Pass.

ACCORDING to a Rangoon telegram of May 5, Mr. Grosvenor, with his party, arrived at Talifu on the 12th of April. The British escort left Bhamo on the 3rd of May to meet him.

THE Indian Government steamer Tenasserim, with Lord Northbrook on board, arrived at Aden on the morning of May 2. His lordship landed amid salutes from the heavy land batteries and the ships in harbour. The bunders were gaily decorated. Brigadier-General Schneider proceeded to Venice on his way home by the mail steamer of May 1.

IN the beginning of this month Sir Salar Jung, Prime Minister of the Nizam of Hyderabad, arrived at Naples from Bombay with a retinue of sixty persons in the Rubattino steamer Asia. He was received with artillery salutes, and Admiral Delgarretto, accompanied by the British Vice-Consul, went on board the steamer to welcome him. In England he will be all the more welcome, if it be true that he has no intention of urging his master's claims to the restitution of Berar.

SIR SALAR JUNG, who arrived at Rome on the night of May 4, was received by the King the next morning. The audience lasted a quarter of an hour. On alighting at the Quirinal he was received by the Court officials. Sir A. Paget, the British Ambassador, called on him the same day.

SOME Parliamentary papers lately published enable us to see what kind of action was really taken by the India Office with regard to Lord Northbrook's Tariff Act of last year. In his telegram of September 30 Lord Salisbury said :—

Your despatch forwarding Tariff Act received. I cannot assent to the new duty on raw cotton or to the maintenance of duty on manufactured cotton at present rates. But I am sensible of the inconvenience of altering a tariff by correspondence. I think it would tend to a complete understanding between Home and Indian Governments and lead to a better result if personal communication on the matter could be arranged. Do you assent to Sir Louis Mallet being sent out to discuss the whole subject with you? His great experience in these questions would give confidence at home in any settlement arrived at. But the step entirely depends for its beneficial effect on your hearty concurrence. If you are not able to give that concurrence he can do little good in India, and we had better proceed in the ordinary way. But if you concur, the present difficulty will be overcome in the most satisfactory way, and there will be fair hope of arranging a sound system for future legislation.

Replying by telegram on October 7, Lord Northbrook "heartily concurred" with the proposal concerning Sir Louis Mallet. Three members of the Indian Council recorded their dissent from the previous telegram, which had not passed through Council without undergoing certain modifications. Sir Erskine Perry describes the telegram as—

A violation of the fundamental principle of good government for India that fiscal measures should originate with the local authorities there. The Government of India is necessarily despotic, and the useful function of the Home Government is, by careful revision of all measures originated there, to prevent the usual concomitants of despotism—such as caprice, hastiness, injustice—from springing up. If the telegraphic wire is to convey peremptory orders during the concoction of measures in India, it will greatly enhance the difficulties of government in that country, and will increase the repugnance of statesmen of mark to accept the office of Governor-General.

He also held it premature to send a despatch disapproving of the Tariff Act, before the Council knew for certain what had been done in India through other channels than the newspapers alone. Sir Henry Montgomery writing to the same effect, adds the expression of his belief that the Council of India ought not to delegate its authority to "any individual officer, however able."

IN a minute on the same subject General Strachey assents to the views of the Secretary of State respecting the import duty on cotton, but sees nothing in the circumstances of the case before him to lead him to think that the regular system under which such matters are dealt with by the Secretary of State in Council should be departed from. Sir Robert Montgomery, who, in Lord Salisbury's absence, took the chair as Vice-President of the Council when the draft telegram was discussed and modified, maintains in a later minute his right to lay before Council the amendments actually adopted in the telegram as sent out. In a final minute Lord Salisbury observes that he was at a distance from London when the telegram was sent to the Council, nor was he aware that they had not had the opportunity of reading the papers. "The Council altered the telegram by striking out two or three words which might seem to commit them to the opinion on the details of the tariff which I had formed, and in which at a subsequent period they concurred. It is necessary also to observe that the language of Sir Erskine Perry has no relation to the words of the telegram. He objects to 'conveying by the telegraphic wire peremptory orders during the concoction of measures in India.' The telegram conveyed no orders of any kind, peremptory or otherwise, and related to no measures that were being concocted in India at the time."

IN the House of Commons the other day Sir G. Balfour asked for certain papers which would throw a curious light on the questions lately raised concerning the Indian Cotton Tariff. It is all very well for English economists to urge the repeal of all duties on Manchester cotton goods; but is there nothing in our own customs tariff which calls at least as loudly for removal in the interests of India? Sir G. Balfour's request evidently pointed to one glaring departure from free-trade principles in the shape of a heavy import duty on gold and silver plate, to the extent of nearly 25 per cent. on the former and of over 30 per cent. on silver. We should like to know what so warm an admirer of Cobden as Sir Louis Mallet thinks about this happy illustration of his master's principles. Perfect freedom of exchange, exemplified by a protective duty compared with which the Indian cotton duties are as nothing. It is true that silver spoons and golden ornaments are not quite such necessaries of life as shirts; but relief to industry and freedom of exchange are the nominal rallying-cries of Manchester, and on these grounds we fail, with the Pioneer, to see why "the gold and silver chasers of Kashmir, the filagree workers of Orissa, the 'Swami' jewellers of Trichinopoly, and the silver embossers of Kutch, should not have a very strong and pointed plea put in on their behalf." If this absurdly high duty on silver plate were removed, the increased demand for such specimens of Indian industry might even go some way towards reversing the downward movement in the value of silver.

THE discussion which Mr. Eustace Smith started yesterday week on the subject of the Bengal Famine ended, as one might have expected, in mere talk. Nearly all the speakers however agreed on certain points which seemed to justify the motion for an inquiry, and the motion itself was supported on various grounds by those independent members for India, Sir G. Campbell, Sir G. Balfour, and Mr. Fawcett. Even Lord G. Hamilton virtually acknowledged the need for an inquiry, which for obvious reasons he refused to concede. Mr. Grant Duff, although he opposed the demand for a Committee in this country, because most of the witnesses were out in India, was none the less glad that the discussion had taken place, and hoped that in future more heed would be paid to the Indian authorities, who might have to deal with similar famines. We hope so too, for it is certain that pressure from this country largely increased the burden placed on the shoulders of the Indian Government. Sir G. Campbell now tells us that at least half the actual outlay could have been saved, had his own advice been followed. Mr. E. Smith reckons the outlay, as it ought to have been, at two millions; the author of the "Black Pamphlet" put it at one million; and Mr. W. Hunter forecast it at half a million. At the highest estimate therefore India has paid too much by four or five millions.

THAT a new novel by the author of "The Battle of Dorking" and "A True Reformer" would please and interest a large circle of readers was a thing of course. "The Dilemma," which first appeared in Blackwood, is in one respect at least a decided improvement on "A True Reformer." Instead of a novel tailing off into a treatise, it is a novel and nothing else; a novel with a story full of interest, enhanced by a bright, eloquent, and graceful style, and by frequent passages of life-like portraiture, telling pathos, and playful humour. The minor characters are excellently drawn and nicely discriminated, from Mrs. Polwheedle and Captain Sparrow to Ensign Spragge and the Rev. Mr. Morgan. There is enough of incident and adventure throughout the book to keep the reader's attention from flagging, and his sympathy with the hero from growing cold. Yorke himself belongs to the best type of Company's officers; and his Colonel, Falkland, shows himself from the first a noble gentleman and an accomplished soldier, of whose love any heroine might well be proud. Two of the three volumes are wholly taken up with life in India, the life of cantonments in the days before the Mutiny, and the stirring life which English men and women had to lead during the fiery trial which brought all their highest energies into victorious play. And very skilfully are both kinds of lives pourtrayed, alike in their nobler and meaner aspects, by one who had only to draw upon his own memory and observation for most of the pictures thus wrought out. The sudden outburst of the Mutiny awakes the garrison of Mustaphabad from their ordinary cares and bickerings to the imminence of a life and death struggle against fearful odds; and the defence of the Residency is told with a vivid clearness and simple force which an eye-witness could hardly have surpassed. But there is, we think, a little too much of the subsequent fighting and marching about the country to please any one who regards a novel as a work of art, and believes in the maxim "ne quid nimis." If not quite irrelevant, the latter half of the second volume does little to help the story. In the third volume the hero returns to England and the quiet life of a country town, followed by a visit to the country-house of a retired tradesman with marriageable daughters. Here again we have some clever scenes and sketches of character, which serve as an amusing foil to the excitement of the Mutiny adventures, and give us a little breathing-time before the final catastrophe overwhelms us with its strange and tragical surprises. It was surely a needless piece of cruelty to bring Falkland to life again merely for the purpose of finding a short cut out of the difficulties which beset the heroine. And we must own that poor Olivia gets more than her share of the sorrow and suffering which a heroine of romance is expected to undergo. Few gleams of passing happiness are allowed to light up her path, and her hasty marriage with Kirke seems hardly consistent with the sort of heroine designed by the author. Perhaps the weakest point in the book is the lack of dramatic distinctness in the portraiture of the leading characters. Neither Yorke nor Olivia stand out half so clearly from the canvas as the figures of which they form the central theme.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, May 6, 1876.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

SIR W. MUIR'S Budget statement shows some very satisfactory results for the past year, 1875-76. It must, of course, be remembered that his "regular estimate" gives only the actual figures for ten months; those for the remaining two being still to adjust. But there is no reason to suppose that the complete returns will differ for the worse from the estimates now published. It is likely indeed that the actual surplus for the last year on ordinary income and outlay will be yet larger than the £1,903,000 set down in the regular estimate. Under the head of Income the improvement on the original or Budget Estimate embraces every item except Land Revenue, Law and Justice, Interest, Public Works Ordinary, and Irrigation. From Opium the gain amounts to nearly £400,000, although in the Budget Estimate the net receipt from opium was raised a quarter of a million above the estimates of previous years; while "a deficient stock in Malwa and some combination there for a time to stop the export of Opium have militated against the revenue."

The expected gain from Customs, though not in itself large, shows how little that source of revenue has so far been affected by the recent changes in the Tariff. The receipts from Salt, too, are higher by £78,000 than the original estimates, and on Army accounts the increase amounts to £104,000. The ordinary outlay has exceeded the first estimates by £430,000, the bulk of which was owing to increased charges for Administration, Marine, Superannuation Allowances, Provincial Allotments, Public Works Ordinary, State Railways, and Loss by Exchange. On the other hand, there was a saving of £84,000 on Opium, and of £581,000 on Guaranteed Railway Interest. Of the latter sum, however, £330,000, spent on repairs of damages caused by floods, were merely charged against Capital instead of Revenue. The remainder was a real growth of revenue, due partly to the normal increase of traffic, and partly to the increase of passenger traffic caused by the visit of the Prince of Wales.

Coming to the Budget Estimates for the current year, Sir W. Muir tells us how those estimates have been modified by the causes which have lately conspired to lower the exchange value of the rupee. But for this untoward circumstance the general growth of the revenue would have enabled him to estimate for a surplus of more than a million sterling, instead of only £144,000. The net receipts from opium are estimated at six millions, or half a million below the average of the last eight years. "Looking to the past," says Sir W. Muir, "there is every reason to anticipate that even this estimate will be exceeded; but as we are taking a quarter of a million more than we did last year, the excess on the estimate, whatever it may turn out, will of course be, by so much, less." The steady growth of the excise revenue emboldens him to estimate for a further increase of £35,000, which will no doubt be more than realised. A becoming caution, in view of the uncertain working of the new tariff and of the derangements arising from the fall in the value of silver, impels him on the other hand to reduce the estimate for Customs by £85,000 below the receipts of the past year. From Salt he expects a revenue of £6,300,000, an excess of only £14,000 over the latest receipts, which were better than the previous estimates by £60,000. The net receipts from the Post-office are expected to show a small decrease, owing to the intended reduction of the overland postage from eight to six annas. Under the head of Stamps Sir William estimates for an increase warranted by the steady growth of that branch of income from year to year. Of the remaining items the most noticeable is State Railways, which in 1874-75 yielded a gross income of £130,986. Last year's receipts rose to £277,000, and for the current year they are estimated at £415,000. Putting the charges at £297,000, we may expect from this source a net return of no less than £118,000. On the whole, the gross income estimated for the present year is better than that of the past by £660,000; or, if we deduct the increase taken on the opium estimate, by £510,000.

The Budget Estimates of ordinary expenditure show a a total increase of £592,000 on the regular estimates for 1875-76. This includes an increase of £654,000 on Army Charges alone, a part of which must be ascribed to home charges and supplies for the British troops. A good deal, however, is merely nominal,—payments expected to occur in 1875-76 having been postponed to 1876-77. Marine, on the other hand, and the allotments for Provincial Services show a saving of £80,000 and £84,000 respectively. The saving of £107,000 under the head of Administration is ascribed to a smaller demand for stationery, and also to the transfer of the Indian Museum in London to "Minor Departments." In the cost of Superannuation and other allowances, there is an estimated decrease of £148,000, to be set against the somewhat larger reduction in the receipts under the same head. With regard to the ordinary outlay on Public Works, the Government "have been obliged, with much regret, to reduce the grant by £122,000 from the amount assigned in 1875-76 for Military Works and other buildings; hence the improvement under this head." With the rapid extension of State Railways, and the opening of new lengths for traffic, increased establishments and working charges become necessary; and these are represented by the enhanced charge of £76,000. But it seems certain that this enhancement will be amply recouped by a growing revenue.

We note that the net charge for interest will be very much the same as in 1874-75, although the receipts were in that year swollen by increased traffic in grain on account of the famine. Compared with 1875-76, however, there is an increase of net charge for interest, amounting to £258,000, which arises from the transfer in 1875-76 of a large sum from Revenue to Capital, as already explained. The following are the estimated net traffic receipts, compared with those of the two previous years; and when —says Sir W. Muir—we take into account the special receipts of the Railways in 1874-75 owing to the famine, and in 1875-76 in consequence of the visit of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the prospect may be held encouraging:—

1874-75 Actual Accounts	3,449,322
1875-76 Regular estimates (less £330,000)	3,355,000
1876-77 Budget estimates	3,470,000

The extraordinary outlay on Public Works is reduced this year to £3,759,000. Thus the total estimated outlay amounts to £54,095,000, leaving a net surplus of £144,000 on an estimated income of £50,480,000, or, if Extraordinary Public Works are included, a net deficit of £3,615,000. To quote, in conclusion, Sir W. Muir's own words on the subject, the financial position of the Indian Government may be thus defined:—

Owing to our great remittances to England, the future of our finance and the success even of the present budget, will essentially depend upon the course of exchange, seeing that at the point to which the rates have become depressed the variation of even a farthing involves a gain or loss of nearly two hundred thousand pounds. But the future is enveloped in obscurity. While things remain in the uncertainty which now prevails, it has been deemed sufficient to frame the present budget so that it shall provide equilibrium between expenditure and income; and for the rest, until the problem of the eventual value of silver shall further unfold itself, to economise expenditure, develop every improvable source of revenue, and avoid fresh liabilities. It is at the least satisfactory to know that this misfortune coming upon us as it has so suddenly and from so unexpected a quarter, finds all the springs of our revenue sound and prosperous;—a conclusion fully established by the present budget.

ON AN OVERLAND TRADE ROUTE BETWEEN INDIA AND CHINA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I thought I had written quite enough upon the above route, but circumstances have of late occurred which oblige me to write a little more. My position has hitherto been that of a finger-post, with "The Trade Route to China" inscribed upon it; but the effacing fingers of Time, and the not over-clean hands of some passers-by, have rendered it necessary to renew the inscription. For forty years I have been doing my best, both orally and through the Press, to advocate the formation of a trunk road between the navigable branches of the Brahmaputra, the Irrawaddy, and the Yang-tsi-Kiang, via Munnipur, Bhamo, Talifu, &c.; and now that the grand scheme seems likely to be realised, various names have been put forward to deprive me, if possible, of the credit of being the original projector, the only reward I have sought for all my trouble.

So long ago as 1836, in my "Topography of Assam," written whilst on duty in that province, and published by order of the Bengal Government, I pointed out at page 12 the great importance of such a road. In 1860 I read a long paper before the Royal Geographical Society on the same subject, which was published in extenso in Colburn's United Service Magazine for May, 1861. In 1873 I read a similar paper before the British Association at Bradford, and sent the manuscript to the Secretary of State for India, who ordered it to be printed, and "that copies be transmitted to the Government of India, some placed for reference among the records of the Office, and some supplied to other departments of her Majesty's Government."

Notwithstanding, a new map of the North-east frontier of Bengal was about a year ago published by Mr. Ogilvy Hay, containing all the proposed overland routes, with the names of their proposers; the route so long advocated by me was also there, but without my name, and "The Government of India Route" was printed in its stead!

About the same time the name of General Babbage was adduced as the original proposer of the Mannipur route, and sundry other claimants have since appeared dimly represented by initials. Very recently a bulky volume, written by Dr. Anderson, on a section of the route (Bhamo to Momein), has been published, assigning the discovery of the Mannipur route to a Baron Otto de Grange, a name I have never heard of or seen in print before. Who the mysterious Baron was, or in what capacity he was acting, the author does not mention, further than that he made the proposition in 1848.

If Dr. Anderson did not know what I had done to forward the two expeditions of 1868 and 1875, with both of which he served, he might have known it; and if he did know it, it was invidious and disingenuous to withhold my name from the map and the text of his book, when he was so particular in mentioning every one else who had written upon the subject.

I have thus, as briefly as possible, stated my own claims, and leave it to an impartial public to draw their own conclusions.

THE BENGAL FAMINE DEBATE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Although Mr. Eustace Smith's motion for an inquiry into the circumstances of the Bengal famine was rejected by Parliament, he has done good service to India, as the debate on the occasion served clearly to establish some important facts, that many were interested in concealing, and that the public in England had hitherto accepted only with doubt and uncertainty. Those facts are that the information upon which the Government obtained the authority of Parliament to borrow ten millions was inaccurate in the extreme; that the expenditure incurred for relieving the distress was unnecessarily heavy, and that the relief measures adopted were not only open to the charge of reckless extravagance, but were of a demoralising nature.

Until these facts were denounced, it could scarcely be expected that greater care in estimating the danger and extent of famine, and more economy and judgment in the expenditure of public money than had characterised the action of the Government in 1873-74, would be exercised on the next occasion; and unless such care and economy be adopted in future it is difficult to see, with the embarrassed finances of India and its ever increasing debt, how the administration of the country can be satisfactorily carried on, and its army provided for, if eight millions sterling have to be spent in feeding a section of the people whenever the food crops suffer any serious injury from drought or floods—a contingency which, in so vast an extent of territory, might occur every other year.

Mr. Smith stated that, having been in India in 1874, and travelled over a considerable portion of the country said to have been visited by famine, he had met with a number of persons, including some high officials, who said that there never had been anything but what might be called a considerable scarcity. After going into particulars on the food supply of the country and the relief measures devised, Mr. Smith added:—"Looking at all the circumstances, I have no doubt that an expenditure of about two millions would have met the exigencies of the occasion, as effectually as did the system which has been adopted."

Sir George Campbell seconded the motion, because he considered an inquiry necessary, owing to the correspondence between the Government and the Indian authorities, on the subject of the famine relief, having ended without the enunciation of any general principle by the Secretary of State for guidance in future cases. While maintaining that there had been grave reasons for apprehending that the famine might have had much wider limits than it actually assumed (an opinion to which, however, he had already committed himself when he held the post of Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal), Sir George Campbell admitted that the expense for relief had been excessive, observing that public opinion at home was, perhaps, after all, most to blame in the matter; and he pertinently remarked that if the disbursements, on account of the Bengal famine, had been paid by the country, the Government would doubtless not have had the smallest hesitation in granting the inquiry.

Mr. Onslow thought that Mr. Eustace Smith had done good service by bringing forward the question of famine expenditure, because it would, he said, convince the people of India that the House took great interest in all that affected their welfare. Dr. Ward and Sir George Balfour followed, speaking strongly in favour of the inquiry, not for the purpose (as the latter observed) of imputing blame to men who were surrounded with difficulties at a most critical period, but with the view of devising means to prevent the recurrence of famine. Mr. Fawcett strongly supported the appointment of the committee asked for, and Mr. Grant Duff said that he was very glad that the discussion had been raised, as he thought that it would do good when the next famine occurred in India, adding that he sincerely hoped that the Indian authorities would be listened to more than they had been on this occasion, evidently intimating thereby that the home authorities had been chiefly to blame for the wrong done in 1874.

After this charge brought against the India Office, and a similar charge distinctly implied in Mr. Fawcett's speech, and in Sir George Campbell's allusion to the influence which English public opinion had exercised over the expenditure incurred in India, it could not be expected that the majority which the Government commands in the House of Commons would have consented to the investigation asked for, unless the Government could clear itself of the charges brought against it. Lord George Hamilton's opposition to the motion must therefore be accepted as an indication that the course pursued with regard to the Bengal famine, could not be justified. In the face of the evidence that already existed in this country the Under Secretary could scarcely deny that mistakes had been committed; he accordingly admitted that preparations (i.e., expenditure) had been somewhat in excess of the necessity—in other words, that unnecessary expenses had been incurred, but said that "it was owing to circumstances which no one could have foreseen," and he opposed the motion on the ground that, owing to the different conditions under which different parts of India were placed, the lesson to be derived from the inquiry might prove useless on the next occasion, if a famine should arise in a province differently conditioned from Bengal. A weaker argument could scarcely have been adduced, seeing that, until the investigation has taken place, it is impossible to say whether the errors committed are chargeable to local conditions, to the shortcomings of officials, to the dishonesty of subordinates, or to the injudicious directions of the authorities. Besides, the next famine might occur under conditions sufficiently analogous to those of 1873-74 to render the lesson of the highest value. Another statement of the Under Secretary betrayed the lameness of his case. Referring to the inquiry that had been granted in the matter of the Abyssinian war, he said that "there the estimates had been largely exceeded, while here there is no such excess." It is true that the original estimate for "famine relief" was £6,500,000, and that the disbursements charged under that head amounted to £6,588,000, but this sum did not include the large expenditure incurred on relief works.

Under all these circumstances it is much to be regretted that the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the circumstances of the alleged Bengal famine was not obtained. At the same time, we may rest assured that a great advantage has been gained by the discussion, induced by Mr. Eustace Smith's motion, and that more circumspection will be exercised on the next occasion when a scarcity in India will call for relief at the hands of the Government.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, DELTA.

UNCOVENANTED LEAVE RULES.

The Pioneer remarks that the despatch of the Secretary of State, published in a recent Gazette of India, involves the following remarkable decision. No one but a native of India shall be appointed to any office in the service of Government in India unless he is appointed in England, or with the sanction of the Secretary of State. If any person is appointed to such office in breach of this rule, he shall be entitled to leave at less frequent intervals, for shorter periods, and on smaller allowances, than if he had been appointed in England, or with the sanction of the Secretary of State; in short, he shall in respect of leave be treated as if he were a native of India. The policy of Lord Salisbury seems to be to restrict the patronage of the Government in India. So long as it is confined to the appointment of natives of India, well and good; but if anyone else of higher qualifications, and therefore presumably of the higher emoluments, is to be employed in the service of Government, the India-office sniffs a job, claims a monopoly of jobbery, and inflicts a penalty for the breach of such monopoly. Now there are in this country a large number of offices, and, indeed, classes of offices for which the natives are not generally qualified, and there are persons in the country who are well qualified to fill these offices which lie out of the line of members of the covenanted civil service. These persons are Englishmen, and their habits of life and their necessities as to relaxation from work are those of Englishmen. Many have been born and bred in India, and others have come to India, not in the service of Government. They are frequently the sons of English officers. If any of these gentlemen are appointed to the offices in question, they must suffer disabilities in respect of leave unless their appointment is sanctioned by the Secretary of State. We venture to say that the India-office will fail in its object. The dispensers of patronage in India will continue to appoint these gentlemen to offices for which they are qualified without first submitting their nominations for the sanction of the Secretary of State. The only result will be a large body of discontented public servants who will never be brought to understand the justice of their being treated less favourably in respect to leave than those persons whose appointments were made or sanctioned in England.

A GOLD COINAGE FOR INDIA.

The Pioneer thinks that public opinion in England,—as some extracts we gave from the home papers when the last mail came in will have shown,—has too hurriedly pronounced in favour of a gold coinage for India as the remedy for the depreciation in the value of silver. We say too hurriedly without meaning to imply that the gold coinage may not be a necessity in the future, still less from any dislike to the idea; but people who lightly talk of changing the standard in the same way that they would recommend quinine as a cure for fever cannot possibly have arrived at their conclusions in any legitimate way. They cannot have grasped the problem or realised its magnitude. Supposing a gold coinage were to be introduced and the Government to have acquired an adequate stock of that metal,—a very large supposition,—and to have coined a quantity of sovereigns, is anybody with ten rupees to be empowered to claim a sovereign in exchange? If not, the holders of rupees would hardly benefit by the grand remedy as they hope. Would all contracts relating to payments now made in rupees be converted by a decree of the Legislature into contracts relating to pounds? If so, what would be the loss that the country represented by the Government would have to bear? We have heard an estimate to the effect that sixty million pounds' worth of gold would be required to change the Indian coinage. Of course, the amount is altogether conjectural, but that conjecture is at all events founded on a large knowledge of Indian finance. Take it as a basis of some rough calculations. Say the Government goes into the world's market to buy (with rupees) sixty millions of gold. With the rupee at 1s. 8d. it would have to give (roughly) a sixth more for this amount than it would receive back from its own subjects. There would be ten millions sterling absolutely lost by the country on the transaction—ten millions which special taxation would have to provide. Really, of course the loss would be much greater, because such an operation would enhance the value of gold all over the world, and depreciate that of silver more than ever. The result of course would be very pleasant when it was done for everyone in India who is paid by salary, and quite independently of that, trade would be guarded from some dangers which threaten it at present, while the rupee is steadily declining in value. But the country at large—would it gain or lose? The cultivator would not find himself getting such good prices for his produce in the new as in the old coinage. Probably he would greatly lament the change. But of course he would profit on the other side of the account in his purchases, though he would not realise this so clearly. However, the wealth of the country has really incurred that loss of ten millions—on the estimate taken above—already, and the truth, looking at the matter economically, is that the purchase of gold would merely register it, and bring it unequivocally to public notice. The practical introduction of the coinage, if it were ever introduced, would have to be faciliated by paper, we suspect. A vast issue of notes temporarily inconvertible would seem almost inevitable. And then some most interesting problems would arise, as the complete resumption of specie payments came into play. But one remarkable consideration must not be overlooked. The benefits of the change would come into force almost directly it was known with certainty that the Government meant to carry it out, even though its completion might take time. Meanwhile, the strongest argument in favour of gold turns on the home expenditure of the Indian Government. To lay down its fifteen millions this year, it has to lose one other million outright. But if silver goes on falling in value, it might conceivably come to pass that the home expenditure in pounds would swallow up the whole Indian revenue in rupees. If the rupee came to be worth a quarter of its original value only to lay down fifteen millions at home, the Government would have to find sixty crores of rupees. That may be an extreme hypothesis, but it may also be that the first loss on adopting gold would be a small matter compared to the ultimate loss incurred by adhering to silver.

THE NEED OF A LOCAL BRITISH ARMY IN INDIA.

The Pioneer remarks that the question of most urgent interest to India is not to be found in Mr. Hardy's Budget statement at all; but in the answer he gave to Sir George Campbell in the House of Commons on the 17th February, when he stated that "no decision had yet been arrived at regarding an arrangement by which adequate provision for the military requirements of India might be combined with short service in the army at home." Now, this is the very question that above all other affects Indian finance and military efficiency,—a question that must not be delayed or slurred over,—a question that ought to be discussed, and a decision arrived at as early as possible; and it is with great regret we find that Mr. Hardy never as much as alluded to it, never stated it to be under his consideration, and seemed to be unconscious of its vast importance. Under the head of military intelligence in the Pioneer of 29th March our readers may have observed it stated that upwards of 500 men of the 34th Regiment, lately arrived from England, were enlisted for short service, that their time expires next year, and that they will have to be sent back to England after a year's service in India. This statement may have been exaggerated, but it seems not unlikely to be true. Calculate the cost of these men's passage home, and the passage out of the men to replace them; the Indian Government for one year's service of 500 men will have to pay the passage money of 1,500 men. And what will be the state of the 34th Regiment next year; will they be fit to go on service with 500 unacclimatised and undisciplined recruits in their ranks? And such, or nearly such, would in course of time be the condition of every battalion. Is this a state of matters to be ignored and slurred over, postponed for consideration from year to year, considered unworthy even of reference in the Secretary of State's speech on the army estimates? This subject, though passed over in silence by Mr. Hardy, has been repeatedly mooted, both at home and in India; but it appears probable that as long as India is prepared quietly to submit to the inconvenience and expense of continual reliefs, the Home Government will rest content, and let matters take their course. Yet the remedy is not so difficult to devise. Mr. Holms never uttered a truer word than when he said that the varieties of Home, Colonial, and Indian service, were in themselves incentives to recruiting, if men were encouraged to select particular service according to their tastes. In wars, or cases of emergency, British soldiers must of course be, and always are, prepared to serve wherever duty may call them; but in the ordinary reliefs in time of peace there could be no objection to make India a country for special voluntary service, every soldier so volunteering binding himself to serve for a certain number of years from date of embarkation, irrespective of the time he had already served; and on a regiment being ordered to India all men unwilling to submit to these terms could be transferred to their linked battalion. With periodical service in hill stations, the health of soldiers would suffer little in eight or ten, or even more, years of Indian service; and a system of this kind, utilising the right of transfer between linked battalions, might perhaps be found equally applicable to Colonial service. The objections at home to such a scheme are, that it would diminish the strength of the army reserve, and be an approach to lengthened service for pension. But in many respects the best remedy for the existing evil would be the reintroduction of an entirely local European army for India. We have advocated the expediency of this measure on other grounds; we have shown the facility with which it could be raised, and the popularity of such a service with many classes who hesitate to join the army at home. The Empress of India should have a British force pertaining to the Indian Empire, the guarantee of British influence in Asia. We believe that few in this country doubt the expediency of such a restoration of a European army in India; but, if matters go on for some years in their present train, it will no longer be a question of expediency, but one of necessity, to save India from financial embarrassments and military inefficiency.

DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.

The Parliamentary Committee appointed to inquire into the causes of the depreciation of silver met on Monday; Mr. Goschen in the chair.

Mr. Mackenzie stated that he had been a merchant in India. There was a comparatively small amount of gold in circulation among the peasantry, because their transactions were so small that gold did not enter into them. The value of the houses and furniture in the peasant's house was very small, but the intrinsic value of the ornaments of the peasantry was often very large. The silver arrived at Calcutta in bars, where a small charge was made by the Government for coining it. The silver he received as rent while in business and through the circulation in the district would have been insufficient for use unless there had been a supply from Calcutta; there would without that supply have been a depreciation in the price of silver and an increase in the price of commodities. He had studied the balance of trade between England and India, and in the ordinary sense of the word it had been nearly always in favour of India. There had been a great absorption of silver for ornament and domestic use and by hoarding, consequently a large amount remained in the provinces. Government had coined fifty-eight millions in value in the last ten years, which had been rapidly absorbed for the above purposes. There was a consequent difficulty to meet circulation. The future prospect of the price of silver would depend on internal and external causes, and consequent rate of exchange. This had varied from 1835 to date, in series of ten years, from 16 to 20 per cent.

Some further evidence was taken, and the Committee again adjourned.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The following were the exports of Bullion to the East by the steamers of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company, at the dates mentioned:—From Southampton, per Peshawur, April 27—Silver, to Bombay, 86,950. Per Hyduspes, May 4—Silver, to Bombay, £68,800; to Calcutta, £254,900. We subjoin the export of specie by the steamers of the Messageries Impériales:—From Marseilles, per Scamandre, April 20—Gold, to Alexandria, £9,513. Per L'Anadyr, April 23—Gold, to Aden, £500; Silver, to Pondicherry, £860; silver, to Madras, £1,540.

STATION TALK.

LAHOR, April 3.—There is still some small-pox at Lahor, and careful people are having themselves vaccinated; but few Europeans have been attacked, the disease being almost entirely confined to the city, where, I am happy to say, it is now daily decreasing. It has been brought forward as an accusation against Montaigne that when he was Mayor of Bordeaux he did not take up his abode in the town during a severe outbreak of the plague, but made such arrangements as were necessary from a safe distance. Similarly, the local paper finds fault with Dr. de Renzy for not taking up a position in Lahor, with a view of combating the present, and I trust I may say the late, outbreak of small-pox. The author of the "Essais" and our Sanitary Commissioner can make pretty much the same answer to their accusers, namely, that they were better employed elsewhere. But the official position of the Sanitary Commissioner of the Punjab is a peculiarly difficult one. He has "responsibility without authority." Were he to take a house in the most unhealthy part of the city during an outbreak of cholera or small-pox and walk about the most infected streets all day he could do but little. The Civil Surgeon would probably resent his interference, and would certainly not obey his orders. Indeed, if he presumed to give any, he would most probably be reported to the Surgeon-General of the "Circle," who would indignantly remind him that he had no authority within iláqua, and would "bring the matter under the notice of the Local Government" on principle. As a matter of fact, the Sanitary Commissioner has, for many weeks past, been engaged upon a most interesting work. He has been engaged in touring about the Cis-Indus districts of the Punjab, and has visited almost every town of any importance, on a species of pilgrimage or crusade (for it is a holy war) against dirt, the parent of disease. He has composed a small pamphlet containing the most elementary rules of cleanliness, which has been translated, not only into Urdu, but into Hindi and Gurmukhi (Punjabi), and of which over two-and-twenty thousand copies have already been distributed. At every place, while there was a Municipal or District Committee, Dr. de Renzy called them together and read his pamphlet to them, with the addition of experiment and ocular chemical proof of the effect of human occupation upon the quality of the water in the neighbourhood. The natives have shown considerable interest in these "readings," which must be entirely novel to them, and I trust they may profit by what they hear and see. India is no doubt an ultra Conservative country, and results are slow to be perceived; but it is hardly possible to imagine a more practical way of teaching the natives of this province the great sanitary lessons we wish them to learn by the personal intercourse and the practical illustrations which form so important a part of Dr. de Renzy's scheme. It is the old story of difference between the horse being brought to water and being made to drink. Anyone can write a pamphlet, but to make ignorant, superstitious, and dustoor-ridden natives "read, learn, and inwardly digest it" is a very different matter. Lieutenant-general Sir Charles Reid, K C.B, was succeeded on the 1st of the month in charge of the Meean Meer division by Major-general Donald Stewart, C B., after having held the command for the last three years. He was chiefly distinguished for the attention he devoted to the transfer of troops and warlike matériel, and for his successful experiment connected with the rapid embarkation of artillery in trains, to which I have more than once alluded. One such experiment was witnessed by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on the morning of his departure from the Punjab.—Pioneer Correspondent.

CHOLERA and small-pox are both prevalent in the Central Provinces.

Miscellaneous.

DR. LEITNER.—The members of the Anjuman-i-Punjab on the 30th March presented an address of welcome to their late President, Dr. Leitner. The meeting was numerously attended, and some other important business was transacted.

SCHOOL OF ART.—It is rumoured that three additional branches of study, viz., oil-painting, steel engraving, and photographing, will be introduced into the School of Industrial Art at Calcutta, and that a competent teacher will be entertained for the purpose.

THE MINT.—Mr. F. W. Peterson, of the Calcutta Mint, has been appointed to officiate as Deputy Assay Master at the Bombay Mint; but who is to act in the place of Captain Robinson, Deputy Assay Master at Calcutta, who has just proceeded on furlough, is not yet known.

SANITATION FOR SIMLA.—The Simla correspondent of the Delhi Gazette writes that the large sanitary scheme for Simla, which was sent to the Secretary of State some months ago, has been approved by him, and may be expected to be soon carried out.

THE TRADE ROUTE THROUGH KULU.—A correspondent at Kulu writes to the Agra paper that since the Maharaja of Kashmir has abolished transit dues the Yarkandi merchants have quite abandoned the Kulu route, and Yarkand products are cheaper in Amritsar than in Kulu.

ENGLISH BEGGAR CHILDREN.—Relative to a paragraph that recently appeared in the local columns of the Lucknow Times, to the effect that two children of European parentage had been begging in the bazaars of the town and cantonments, our contemporary has been informed that no end of inquiries were made by the police on the subject in the localities referred to, but that no trace of them can be discovered.

HOLKAR AND SIR H. DURAND.—In this month's number of the Calcutta Review we understand an article appears written by Mr. H. M. Durand, C.S., entitled "Central India in 1857." It will no doubt go deeply into that part of Sir John Kaye's last volume which treats of Sir Henry Durand, and will probably take a view of that subject which will be very welcome in India. It will also be read with interest as a contribution to the history of the Mutiny compiled from entirely new and original sources.—Pioneer.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO MR. BADHAM.—A letter from Masuri to the Delhi Gazette says:—A melancholy accident has befallen Mr. Badham, of the firm of Badham and Co., lately arrived up here. It appears he was riding a horse in company with a friend, whose horse turned round and kicked the animal Mr. Badham was upon; the animal fell upon him, breaking Mr. Badham's thigh. He was progressing favourably under medical treatment, when he unexpectedly and suddenly died of apoplexy.

DEPARTURE OF LORD NORTHBROOK.—Lord Northbrook left Calcutta for England on the morning of Saturday, April 15, and Canon Duckworth, who was sufficiently recovered to proceed on his journey home, accompanied his Lordship in the Tenasserim. A public meeting held at Calcutta on Saturday, April 8, consisting mostly of natives, voted that Lord Northbrook's Viceroyalty should be commemorated by a bronze statue. A member of the Indian League had something to say in opposition to this proposal, but the meeting refused to hear him. Three native gentlemen offered to subscribe Rs. 17,000.

PROPOSED MEMORIAL TO LORD NAPIER.—The following letter has been addressed by his Excellency the Commander-in Chief to Mr. Bullen Smith:—

Calcutta, March 31.

My dear Mr. Bullen Smith,—I have received from Colonel Dillon your letter of the 27th March, conveying a record of a public meeting held on the 16th inst., at which it was proposed to connect my name with this city by the erection of a memorial.

I beg the favour of you, as chairman of the meeting, to receive and convey to all who were so good as to interest themselves in the proposal, my sincere and earnest acknowledgments for their favourable opinion, and my deep sense of the great honour conferred upon me.—I remain, my dear Mr. Bullen Smith, yours very truly (Sd.) NAPIER of MAGDALA.

LITERARY.—The Indian Mirror informs us that Babu Anundram Burooah, of the Bengal Civil Service, is engaged in the compilation of a practical English Sanskrit Dictionary. Its object is not simply to give Sanskrit equivalents for English words, but also to show how these words are employed in combination with other words. It is expected that the work will be complete in two octavo volumes of about 800 pages each. The first volume of his work will be out probably in November next, and the second in the beginning of 1878. Professor Max Müller has written to Mr. Burooah that "the work, if carried out in the same manner as the specimen (first sixty-four pages), will prove very useful, and reflect great credit on native scholarship." "Your work," he continues, "is evidently not simply a Sanskrit English Dictionary mechanically invented, but you have treated each word independently, and by giving the nearest approach to each English word in Sanskrit you have shown your familiarity with the idioms of both languages. The passages from Sanskrit writers, illustrative of the employment of Sanskrit words, are extremely useful, and give to your work a really scholar-like character."

ARRIVAL OF THE NEW VICEROY AT CALCUTTA.—Precisely at six o'clock on the evening of April 10 Lord Lytton and suite arrived at the Howrah Station by special train. His Lordship was there met by Colonel Earle, Military Secretary to the Viceroy, by whom the Secretaries to Government were introduced, as also Sir Stuart Hogg and the Hon. Mr. Bullen Smith. After shaking hands with almost everybody present, Lord Lytton passed through the station to the compounds, where a guard of honour of the 46th Native Infantry presented arms. His Lordship and Colonel Earle drove off in the Viceroy's first carriage, preceded by the Calcutta Volunteer Lancers, and followed by the other carriages, in which were the Secretaries to Government. As soon as the cortège came up to the Hughli Bridge a Royal salute was fired from Fort William, and the party proceeded along the Strand-road down to Chandpal Ghat, and turning down Esplanade-row and Government-place, entered Government House by the north or principal entrance. In Government House the guard of honour was composed of the Volunteer Rifles and a European Regiment. On arrival at the grand stairs, Lord Lytton was received by Sir Richard Temple and staff, and was conducted by the Lieutenant-Governor to the top of the stairs, where he was met by Lord Northbrook, attended by the members of his staff and the Members of the Supreme Council. His Excellency the Viceroy then conducted Lord Lytton to the Throne-room, and shortly afterwards Lord Lytton, accompanied by the Members of Council, proceeded to the Council Chamber, where his Lordship's Commission from her Majesty was read out by the Home Secretary. After a Royal salute had announced the assumption of office by the new Viceroy, his Excellency proceeded to address the Council.

Madras.

DEATH OF MR. BOODLE.—Mr. Boodle, lately Officiating Locomotive Superintendent of the Madras Railway Company, who left Madras in bad health to proceed to England, died a few days ago at Galle.

MAJOR HOBART.—Major Bertie Hobart, R.A., Military Secretary to his Grace the Governor, leaves Madras on four months' leave to Europe, and Captain the Hon. Hardress Standish O'Grady, R.A., will act for him during his absence.

SCARLET FEVER AT SIKANDARABAD.—Scarlet fever has broken out in the 2nd Battalion 16th Regiment at Sikandarabad. Three men were recently attacked, one of whom died. The disease first made its appearance on board ship during the passage from England. A few men and children had to be left behind at Bombay.

THE GOVERNMENT.—The members of the Madras Government have left the Presidency to join his Grace the Governor on the hills, and the offices have also been removed, and the capital is bemoaning the absence of the Government, and the dulness of the season. Ooty, on the other hand, is rejoicing, and the gay season there has now fairly set in.—Madras Times, April 15.

BURMESE TOBACCO.—We read that Captain E. A. Campbell, of the Invalid Pension Establishment, who has latterly been successfully engaged in improving the manufacture of cigars at Dindigul, has disposed of his business in that locality, and is about to proceed to Burmah, under an engagement with the Government of India, in view to conducting operations in that quarter for the better outturn of the tobacco grown in it.

SICKNESS IN BRITISH BURMAH.—Burmah is not very healthy just now. Cattle disease is reported in parts of the Pegu Division. The disease has also appeared at Thonkwa and Mobyah. Cholera is prevalent in the Arakan Division, and has again made its appearance in Bassein town. It still exists in Prome, and some sporadic cases are reported from Thayetmyo. Small-pox has been "raging" in Prome, 235 cases having occurred there between the 1st February and 9th March. Thayetmyo and Bassein are also afflicted with it. The state of public health in Rangoon, Henzadah, and Shwegyeen is reported good.

COSTS OF THE PRINCE'S VISIT.—The cost of the Prince of Wales' visit to this Presidency promises to lead to some edifying results. Madras, it seems, has expended sixty thousand rupees more than Bengal on account of the reception of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the Government of India have called upon the Local Government to explain the cause of such an excess. Not only is such an explanation to be afforded, but vouchers are to be submitted in support of the charges incurred. It would seem that Madras has been either more loyal or more extravagant than Bengal. Which it is, the Government of India will perhaps decide.

A QUESTION OF BOUNDARY.—A boundary dispute of some importance is pending between the Madras and Mysor Governments, the Bangalor Spectator states, involving a large tract of forest. The State forests of Mysor run into those of the Madras Presidency on the Malabar frontier, and both Governments lay claim to a belt of jungle on the borders. To settle matters, Commissioners are to be appointed by both Governments, who will demarcate the boundaries of each and adjust the matter now at issue. The adjusting Commissioners, on the part of the Mysor Government, are to be Colonel Anderson, Commissioner of Revenue Settlement, and Captain Van Someren, Conservator of Forests.

THE KAREN CHRISTIANS.—Colonel McMahon, in his new work on the Karen Tribes of Burmah, tells an odd story. He says that the Karens are great drunkards; but among the converts to Christianity teetotalism is universally enforced. Of course, wine is allowed when the Holy Communion is administered; yet even then the strong native arrack will not serve, some foreign liquor of some sort being considered indispensable. Colonel McMahon once presented the native pastor of a hill-village with six bottles of port for sacramental purposes, and this he did on hearing that Bass's pale ale was being made use of in default of wine, the preacher on each occasion solemnly uncorking and pouring out the frothing beer—who does not know how beer will froth in a warm climate—in the presence of his communicants, and then passing the beverage round in tumblers.

DISTURBANCES IN BASTAR.—The latest tidings from Major Balmer, the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, state that he is all right, with about two hundred constables and a number of naiks. He is surrounded by about 20,000 ryots, but there is no probability of a fight. The people have been much worried by a rascally Dewan, and are determined to get rid of him. Major Balmer considers they are open to reason, and remain quiet until the arrival of the Commissioner. The rising being not against the Rajah, but against the Dewan, leads to the expectation that a change of ministry may be all that is needed. On the other hand, the police superintendent at Bastar reports, under date the 1st inst., that the rebels are collecting round him in large numbers, and show hostile feelings against his police force. No shots have been exchanged as yet. As the number of the "rebels" exceeds 30,000, the need is felt of the military reinforcements, which started yesterday from Vizagapatam for the scene of the disturbance.—Madras Mail.

THE LATE RESIDENT AT HAIDARABAD.—The Bangalor Examiner, writing of Mr. Saunders, late Resident at Haidarabad, says:—"It is somewhat premature to say that the Government of India have cancelled Mr. Saunders's resignation at the instance of the Marquis of Salisbury. The fact is, that though Mr. Saunders tendered his resignation, it has never been formally accepted, and what is still more odd, his leave has never been gazetted. The position remains then as thus. Mr. Saunders, in the first place, was requested for certain weighty reasons of State to exchange with Sir Richard Meade. Mr. Saunders, not quite seeing the thing in its proper light, declined, sent in an application for leave, and posted home to see Lord Salisbury. His appeal against Lord Northbrook's action was presented to the India-office direct, but Lord Salisbury, being a great stickler for forms, refused to receive it, except through the Government of India. The appeal has accordingly had to find its way back to Calcutta, and in all probability by this time it is on its way home again to the Secretary of State, who, receiving it through the usual channels, will then dispose of it in the usual manner."

THE DEATH OF DR. STEWART.—A correspondent writes to us as follows regarding this sad event:—Surgeon A. A. Stewart, M.D., met with a frightfully sudden death the other day at Calicut, where he was in charge of the Detachment of H.M.'s 48th Regiment, from Cannanore. Dr. Stewart was out riding with Captain Lynch and Lieutenant Bennet, of the 48th Regiment, a few miles along the road out of Calicut, when his horse apparently shied, fell, and threw him heavily, and he died on the ground in great agony in about half an hour, notwithstanding the earnest and unremitting attention that he received at the hands of Captain Lynch. Lieutenant Bennet had at once started off for medical assistance and a dooly, but death had terminated the unfortunate doctor's sufferings before such assistance could arrive. A post-mortem examination revealed the fact that four ribs had been broken and the liver ruptured. It is conjectured that the deceased was thrown against the fourth mile stone, near which he lay. Surgeon C. J. L. Bushe, M.B., doing duty with the 45th Foot at Bangalore, was promptly warned by telegram from the Surgeon-General B.M.S. at Madras to proceed immediately to Calicut, and take charge of the detachment, vice Stewart deceased. Dr. Stewart was generally a great favourite with all the officers and men with whom he was brought into contact, whether officially or socially.—Madras Times, April 12.

THE SUICIDE OF CAPTAIN MORANT.—A correspondent writes to us from Vellore:—I saw in your last issue a report of the suicide of a European at Vellore. The following, as far as I know, is a correct report of the facts:—Captain Morant, late of the 1st Royals and Nizam's Service, was en route to Vellore, when, between the Sholingur and Arcot Stations, he threw himself out of the railway carriage. It so happened that he did not injure himself much by the fall. He was picked up, and finally brought to the Vellore Railway Station. Although very violent during the night of Saturday, no proper steps seem to have been taken by the railway officials to bring the matter to the notice of the authorities at Vellore until the next morning, when, it is stated, the station-master wrote to the town sub-magistrate, requesting him to send a European constable to the station. The sub-magistrate addressed the European police inspector of Vellore, it is said, on the subject, but that official did not consider that he had anything to do with it; and so time passed, and the unfortunate gentleman put an end to himself by cutting his throat with a razor at about half-past 8 o'clock A.M. on Sunday. There was an inquest held by the officers of the Vellore station, and the remains of the deceased were buried in the new cemetery in Vellore on Monday morning. In the absence of the chaplain the burial service was read by Mr. Irvine, the Judge of the Small Cause Court. The property of the deceased officer is now in charge of the head assistant collector of the district. It is reported that the deceased officer has left two children at Saugur, and that he had lost his wife very recently.—Madras Times.

AN ODD RUMOUR.—A singular rumour comes to us from Baroda. The 9th Regiment have heard on the very best authority (of course) that they are one of a number of regiments that are to form a force for Egypt. The object of sending an army from India to Egypt would be probably merely as a demonstration to enforce the payment to England of Egypt Turkish tribute. We are afraid, however, that the news is too good to be true for the 9th.

PRESENTATION TO LADY SOUTER.—On April 1 a deputation from the European members of the Police Force waited on Lady Souter, and presented her with a large sized and very well executed portrait in oil of Sir Frank Souter, who has been at their head for the last ten years. An address on vellum accompanied the gift, to which Lady Souter in reply made a short but appropriate speech, thanking the deputation warmly for their handsome and most gratifying present, and also for the highly complimentary letter accompanying it, which she said will be deeply prized by her and her children.

SIR L. PELLY.—Colonel Sir Lewis Pelly has come out to India for a few months, at the request of Lord Lytton, to aid his Excellency with his advice as to the possible reorganisation of the frontier districts and the redistribution of political authority along the mountain border of Sind and the Punjab. It is an odd thing for a Viceroy, who is supposed to have a Council to advise him on all financial and political questions, thus to bring out an officer whose authority apparently will be superior to theirs; but so many queer things happen in India now-a-days that it may, perhaps, be the intention of Lord Salisbury and Lord Lytton to do away with the Executive Council of the Viceroy altogether. Sir Lewis Pelly, however, knows a good deal about the frontier.

SUPERSESSION.—We mentioned a few days ago that no regimental officer senior to Major Sandeman was to be allowed to go with the Force detailed to escort that officer through the Bolan Pass. This order was naturally felt as a particular hardship by the Major commanding the wing of Jacob's Rifles going with Major Sandeman, as it condemned him to be left behind while his own men went to the front. The case of this officer was, we hear, referred to the Government of India, which has sent telegraphic instructions confirming the supersession of the Major, and decreeing that Capt. Humfrey shall command the wing, and the Adjutant accompany it as acting wing subaltern. A wing of the regiment, therefore, remains at Jacobabad under two Majors, one of whom must act as Adjutant. This is a pleasant way of treating regimental officers.

DEPARTURE OF LORD NAPIER.—Lord Napier of Magdala left Bombay on Monday, the 10th April, embarking in the s.s. Ettore, and not in the Orontes, as was expected. His departure was marked by the display of due honours, and the leave-taking was characterised by many expressions of genuine regret. Before his departure his Excellency published his farewell order, in which he refers to various improvements that have been effected in the armies during the period of his command, gives some good advice to officers of regiments, and expresses his indebtedness to all those who have aided him during his command with their opinions or suggestions for the benefit of the army. The order is, on the whole, a rather self-laudatory and rose-coloured one, and concludes as follows:—"I part from the army with which I have been intimately associated during my military career with the deepest regret. Its general conduct has been admirable. Its honour, its well-being, and its success will ever be most dear to me."

RETIREMENTS OF COLONELS.—The last Government Gazette published gives us a list of seven officers of the Bombay Army who retire from the 1st inst. under the new scheme. Their names will be perused with considerable disappointment by regimental officers, for only one regimental appointment becomes vacant, and that is a second-in-commandship. The simplest way to explain this will be to take the names of those retiring in rotation. First comes Colonel F. Phillips, who is Collector and Magistrate of Hyderabad, Scinde, Colonel Hathway, Cantonment Magistrate of Deesa, is next; then Lieutenant-Colonel W. Waddington, of the Revenue Survey; and fourth comes Lieutenant-Colonel Collier, who is residing in Europe on the allowance of £365 per annum. So it will be seen that the retirement of these four gentlemen leaves those officers serving with regiments in exactly the same position as they were before. The fifth on the list is Lieutenant-Colonel Currie, second in command of the 15th N.I., whose place will be filled up by Major Utterson, now acting for him. The sixth is Lieutenant-Colonel Lyons, who is merely acting for Colonel Rice as second in command of the 20th N.I., and who therefore makes no permanent vacancy. Last on the list is Lieutenant-Colonel C. P. Barras, the well-known Superintendent of Police on the B.B. and C.I. Railway. Only these names are down at present, and, as we remarked before, regimental officers will not view the list with any great satisfaction. One appointment out of seven retirements is barely three out of the whole twenty, if the others are to be similar to these, and three steps will do next to nothing to lessen the existing stagnation.—Times of India, April 17.

THE UNCOVENANTED LEAVE RULES.

March 31.—The Governor-General in Council directs that the following be published in the Gazette of India for general information:—

Financial, No. 48.

India Office, London, Feb. 10.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

MY LORD.—Para. 1. I have considered in Council your Financial letter dated the 29th January, 1875, No. 39, on the subject of the Leave Rules of the Uncovenanted Service.

2. You therein state that you have some doubts as to the intentions of the Duke of Argyll, and as to the manner in which effect should be given to his Grace's instructions; that nearly all the offices in the Uncovenanted Service are such as may, under certain circumstances, be "fitly held by natives," and that, consequently, if you were to adopt a principle of selection, which would be most in accordance with the instructions received by you the logical conclusion would be that no members of the service should be admitted to the favourable rules.

3. You consider that the rigid adoption of the principle that the present holders of offices to which Natives could fitly be appointed should not be admitted to the benefits of the favourable rules, would cause not unreasonable dissatisfaction, and you are of opinion that some limit of a more or less arbitrary nature, as to the position of those to whom those rules should be extended, will have to be laid down.

4. You therefore forward nominal lists, which you state to be complete, of all those officers of the Uncovenanted Service who come within the category set forth in Schedule A of the Civil Leave Code, and request me to determine the principle on which admission to the favourable Leave Rules shall be regulated.

5. With your Financial letter dated the 30th September, 1875, No. 346, you forwarded, in continuation of the list already referred to, a list of officers of the Accounts Branch of the Public Works Department, whom you proposed to admit to the more favourable rules.

6. The instruction conveyed to your Government in the financial despatches dated the 10th March, 1870, and the 6th December, 1871, appear to me to leave no doubt as to the intentions of the Duke of Argyll on this subject.

7. In the former despatch the Duke of Argyll assented to the favourable rules "proposed for holders of offices now held by English gentlemen," with certain modifications, and desired "that they be declared applicable from this date only to officers of the Education Department appointed from England, and to such others of those now actually in the Service as you may think fit to include in a nominal list for that purpose to be submitted for my approval." His Grace also stated that the second set of rules proposed "for all other classes of the Uncovenanted Service would, for the present, apply to all Uncovenanted Servants not entitled to the benefits of the first set of Rules, and hereafter to all Uncovenanted Servants who may not have been appointed from England."

8. In para. 7 of the latter Despatch, the Duke of Argyll extended the benefits of the first set of Rules to "those uncovenanted Servants appointed in England to offices for which they had special qualifications," and "to those Europeans who for special reasons may have been, or, with my sanction, may be hereafter appointed in India to certain exceptional posts," and his Grace added "but, in order to confine these privileges within reasonable limits, I must again request that you will furnish me with a nominal list of the officers who appear to you to come within the description referred to in my Financial Despatch dated the 10th March, 1870, No. 84."

9. The Duke of Argyll concluded [Financial Despatch, March 10, 1870] "the principle which her Majesty's Government have steadily kept in view throughout the discussion on these Furlough Rules is, that the Uncovenanted Service should be principally reserved for the natives of the country, and that superior appointments which require English training and experience should be made, as heretofore, from England, and they look with great disfavour on the system, which appears to be growing up in India, of appointing Englishmen in India to situations that ought only, as a rule, to be filled by civilians who have gained their position by open competition. I trust that the views I have now expressed will put a stop to the above practice.

10. In the views expressed by the Duke of Argyll in those Despatches I concur.

11. In respect, therefore, to the future, I request that it may clearly be understood, that the less favourable Leave Rules will be applicable to all Uncovenanted Servants appointed after the year 1871, unless—

1. They have been appointed in England.

2. They have been appointed in India with the sanction of the Secretary of State.

It remains to specify in detail the reasonable concessions which, in accordance with the intimation made by the Duke of Argyll, I am willing to grant to certain of your Uncovenanted Servants who now hold, and, at the date of his Grace's Despatch, held appointments in the Uncovenanted Service. It is to be understood that the instructions contained in the remainder of this Despatch apply only to them.

12. I have not within my reach the information necessary to enable me to select individual officers according to their merit or according to the peculiar circumstances of their appointment. In the absence of any such principle of choice, it will be expedient to shape the proposed concessions in such a manner as to harmonise with the policy which has been laid down for the future. Without going so far as to assent to your Excellency's opinion that "if the whole of the classes enumerated in Schedule A are admitted to the new rules, the concession must be extended to the future," I am quite sensible of the difficulty which would attend any attempt to enforce, in respect to the future, a system contrasting violently with that which shall be adopted in respect to present incumbents. It will be, on this ground, expedient to apply a different mode of treatment to the present incumbents of those offices which will in future, so far as they are continued, certainly be filled up as a rule from England, and those which may possibly continue to be filled in India. The Uncovenanted Service of the Public Works Department—except so far as it is recruited from students educated at the Indian Civil Engineering Colleges which were specially designed for the natives of the country—will ordinarily in the future be supplied from Cooper's Hill. The forest service will, in like manner, and with possibly an analogous exception, consist of candidates prepared in Europe under the system established by Dr. Brandis. The limited opportunity which exists in India for obtaining men of scientific training furnishes an obvious reason for confining, as a general rule, to persons selected in England, the higher grades of the Telegraph and Geological Survey Department. It has already been determined that the higher educational officers shall be selected here. On the other hand, the officers on the present establishment at Mysore only exist for a temporary purpose. A similar consideration applies to the arrangement under which the small number of Uncovenanted Marine and Medical Officers are at present appointed. To all these officers, as occupying posts which, so far as they are filled up by Englishmen at all, will in the future be ordinarily filled up in England, I see no difficulty in extending without restriction the concessions contemplated by the Duke of Argyll.

13. The following Officers, therefore, named in the enclosure to your Despatch of 29th January, 1875, may be immediately admitted to the more favourable Leave Rules :—

The 274 Officers, under the Government of India, included in Section D.

The 30 Officers, under the Government of India, included in Sub-sections 4 and 6 of Section E.

The 20 Officers, under the Government of Madras, included in Sub-section 2 of Section B.

The 19 Officers, under the Government of Bombay, included in Sub-section 2 of Section C. and four Forest officers in Sub-section 1 of the same Section.

The 10 Officers, employed in Mysore, included in Section 1.

The Educational Officers, the Officers of the Marine Department who have served in the Indian Navy or Bengal Marine, and the Medical Officers named in the lists transmitted by you.

The three Medical Officers of the Persian Telegraph Service, as recommended in your Financial letter, dated the 26th February, 1875, No. 79.

A nominal list of all the above Officers is annexed to this despatch.

14. Of the remaining Officers named in your lists, the greater part are filling posts which do not require preliminary technical education, and which, in future, if not held by Natives, will be occupied partly by Covenanted Civil Servants, or by Uncovenanted Servants specially selected, with the sanction of the Secretary of State, according to the principles adverted to in para. 11 of this despatch. Adopting, therefore, with regard to this class of Officers your suggestion that, as respects existing incumbents, an arbitrary limit must be to some extent applied to them, I sanction the extension of the more favourable rules to such of the above-mentioned officers named in your lists, as are now in the receipt of salaries of not less than Rs. 6,000 per annum, and I request that a list of the persons to whom this will apply may be forwarded for record in this office.

15. I observe that your lists do not include any of the officers employed in the higher appointments of the Andamans. You may, perhaps, desire to correct the omission, and possibly other similar omissions; if so, I will gladly consider any recommendation you may make.

I have the honour to be, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient, humble servant, (Signed) SALISBURY.

Miscellaneous.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S INDIAN EXPENSES.—We (Vanity Fair) are able to announce that the accounts of the expenses connected with the Prince of Wales's visit to India show that the sum of £60,000 voted has not been exceeded. It will, therefore, not be necessary to ask for any further vote of money.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta, £320,000 ; to Bombay, £160,000 ; and to Madras, £1,000. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8$\frac{3}{4}$d. will receive in full.

DEATHS OF COLONEL COUCHMAN AND CAPTAIN CAMPBELL.—Colonel Couchman who was Assistant Adjutant-General at Madras, died on April 26, at Genoa, on his way home to England ; he entered the army in December, 1841.—Captain A. H. Fletcher Campbell, late of the 56th Regiment, died at Aldershot on April 29. He served in the Indian Mutiny campaign of 1858-59, with the movable column under Lieutenant-Colonel Carmichael, which went in pursuit of Beni Maddoo, and drove him and his troops across the Gogra.

DEATH OF MAJOR-GEN. JOHN GEORGE BOOTHBY, R.A.—This officer died on April 27, at Charlton, aged fifty-two. He obtained his first commission as second lieutenant in June, 1844 ; became first lieutenant in April, 1846 ; and captain, 5th August, 1852. He served throughout the Eastern campaign of 1854-55, including the affair of M'Kenzie's Farm, the battles of Alma and Inkerman, the siege of Sebastopol, and the repulse of the sortie on the 26th of October, 1854. He had received the medal with three clasps, was made a Knight of the Legion of Honour, had received the Order of the Médjidié of the 5th class, and the Turkish medal.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—About ten o'clock on Monday night, as Viscount Helmsley's brougham was standing outside a club-house in St. James's-street, the horse took fright, ran upon the pavement at the corner of Bury-street, and knocked down Surgeon-major Robert Pilkington Linton, F.R.C.S., F.R.G.S., of the Indian Army. The coachman lost all control of the horse, and the brougham, after breaking the iron railings in front of several houses, was at length shattered, and the coachman thrown into the road. Both the injured persons were taken to St. George's Hospital, where Mr. Linton died the same night, and the coachman on Tuesday morning.

THE BISHOP OF BOMBAY.—The Rev. Louis George Mylne, D.D., Tutor of Keble College, Oxford, was on Monday consecrated in St. Paul's Cathedral to the See of Bombay. The Archbishop of Canterbury was assisted in the consecration service by the Bishops of London, Winchester, Lichfield, Lincoln, Oxford, and Ely. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Henry Scott Holland, M.A., Senior Student of Christ's Church, Oxford. Her Majesty's letters patent conferring the bishopric on Dr. Mylne were read aloud by command of the Primate. There was a large attendance from the University of Oxford. The Marquis of Salisbury has the yet more important Bishopric of Calcutta to fill up.

PRESENTATION OF NEW COLOURS TO THE 77TH REGIMENT.—New colours were presented to the 77th Regiment of Foot at Woolwich, on Thursday, by the Duke of Cambridge. It had been intended that the Prince of Wales should present the colours on his return from India; but as the regiment is under orders for Fermoy, the arrangement had to be altered.

INDIAN MISSIONS.—On Monday last the annual meeting of the Wesleyan Missionary Society was held at Exeter Hall. The chair was taken by Mr. Alexander M'Arthur, M.P. The report read referred to the missions to India, Ceylon, and China, which were seeking to enlighten and convert some 700,000,000—probably half the entire population of the globe. In India and Ceylon there were 89 missionaries, of whom 52 were natives; in China, 12 missionaries, including one native; in Southern Africa and among the Bechuana and Kaffir tribes there were 94 missionaries, of whom 16 are natives; in West Africa there are 25 missionaries, of whom 17 are natives; 91 missionaries labour in the West Indies. The above missions are all under the control of the British, Irish, and French Conferences, and include 429 missionaries, 83,484 church members, and 53,120 scholars. The President also referred to the conversion at Calcutta of some forty or fifty sailors on board the Serapis, under Wesleyan influence.—The anniversary of the Ladies' Association for Zenana work in India, in connection with the Baptist Missionary Society, was commemorated yesterday week by a breakfast at Freemasons' Hall, at which about 500 sat down. Among those present were the Hon. Sir Robert Lush, Mr. Alderman Barran (of Leeds), Colonel and Mrs. Croll, Dr. and Mrs. Wood, Dr. and Mrs. Underhill, Mrs. J. Gurney, Mr. and Mrs. Tritton, the Rev. Dr. Manning, the Rev. C. M. Birrell, the Rev. J. P. Chown, and Dr. Thomas. Alderman Barran presided, and having introduced the business of the meeting with a few opening remarks, called on Dr. Underhill, for the secretary, Lady Lush, to read the report, which stated that the object of the Association was the propagation of Christianity in the Zenanas or harems of India by means of lady visitors and Bible women. In Calcutta there were three such visitors and fourteen native Bible women, and there were five girls'-schools with 160 children. In Delhi there were three Zenana visitors and five Bible women, together with a female medical missionary. At Benares the Zenanas were visited by several female missionaries, and there were well-attended Sunday-schools. Serampore was another Zenana station, and at Soorie 115 women were under Christian instruction, and much good was doing. Other stations were Allahabad, Dacca, and Barisane. In all the stations progress was being made. The ordinary income for the year had been £1,397, and the expenditure £1,323.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, May 2.—ROYAL TITLES PROCLAMATION.—Lord SELBORNE, in putting a question to the Lord Chancellor as to the meaning and operation of the terms in the Royal Proclamation, reviewed at great length the statements made at various times by members of the Ministry as to the limitation of the title "Empress" to India, and urged that the Proclamation did not carry out Ministerial pledges.—The LORD CHANCELLOR repeated at greater length the affirmation made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer that the Proclamation precisely carried out the expressed intentions of the Government; and after some remarks from Lord HATHERLEY in support of the view taken by Lord Selborne the subject dropped, and their Lordships adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, May 2.—THE ROYAL PROCLAMATION.—Sir H. JAMES rose to put a question to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the subject of the Royal Proclamation.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER admitted that when the Titles Bill was in Committee it was the intention of the Government, expressed by himself and his colleagues, not to advise the Queen to take the title of Empress, save with the intention that it should be a title of a local character to be borne in India. But at the same time it was, he urged, stated that there would be circumstances under which it would be necessary for the Queen to use the new title in England, and the Proclamation "exactly gives effect" to the intentions expressed by Mr. Disraeli, and particularly indicated by the resistance with which the Government met Mr. Pease's amendment prohibiting the use in the United Kingdom of the title of Empress. This last statement of opinion was received with a deep groan from the Opposition, answered by some cheering from the Ministerialists.—In reply to Sir CHARLES DILKE, who asked Mr. DISRAELI whether the new Imperial title will be used in army commissions, the Premier answered that the officers of the army sometimes served in India, and that the title of Empress would certainly be used in their commissions.—Mr. OSBORNE MORGAN asked the ATTORNEY-GENERAL whether the Proclamation required that the title of Empress shall in future be used in proclamations, writs, charters, commissions, and other like instruments, issued by the Governors or out of the Supreme Courts of Colonies. The hon. and learned gentleman said the Royal Proclamation required that the addition of the title of Empress should be added only in instruments operating in the colonies in cases where it is necessary to make use of the full title of the Queen. In writs it might be necessary to make such additions; in other documents it would be for the authorities to decide as cases arose. This answer was received with cheers and laughter by the Opposition.

CIVIL EMPLOYMENT OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.—Sir H. HAVELOCK then proceeded to move for a Select Committee to inquire into the practicability of soldiers, sailors, and marines, who have meritoriously served their country, being employed in the civil departments of the public service. He further desired that the Committee should inquire into the practicability of the State becoming the medium of communication between private employers of labour and soldiers of the army and militia reserve who desire to obtain employment.—Mr. GATHORNE HARDY said the project had long been talked of, and he thought the time had now come when the experiment should be tried. He accordingly offered no objection to the resolution, and the appointment of the Committee was agreed to.

THE QUEEN'S TITLE.—Mr. C. LEWIS then found an opportunity to bring forward his motion for returns relating to the oath of certain Privy Councillors. The hon. gentleman explained that he was actuated in this step by the publication of Mr. Lowe's statement, made at Retford, to the effect that two Prime Ministers before Mr. Disraeli had been asked to pass a Bill making the Queen Empress of India, and had declined. He said he had written to Mr. Lowe, asking him whether the report was accurate, and created much merriment by reading the reply received, in which the right hon. gentleman bluntly remarked, "My recent speech at Retford contains nothing relating to you," and therefore declined to answer his question.—Mr. LOWE now said he was arraigned, not as a member of the House, not as a Privy Councillor, but as a spouter at a convivial dinner. He pointed out the inconvenience which would arise if the House were to "follow in the line of business" in which Mr. Lewis had set out, and flatly declined to answer any of that hon. member's questions.—Mr. DISRAELI said he regretted that the motion had been made, but he regretted still more the speech of Mr. Lowe. The statement made by Mr. Lowe was, he said, monstrous if true; and, if not true, must be described by an epithet Mr. Disraeli could not find in his vocabulary. Betraying an altogether unusual degree of excitement, the right hon. gentleman, amid loud and prolonged cheering from the Ministerialists, protested against the conduct of Mr. Lowe, inasmuch as he had commented upon the character of the Sovereign, and had held up to public infamy the conduct of her chief adviser. Attempting to cite the testimony of the Queen as to the truth of Mr. Lowe's original statement, he was met by loud cries of "Order!" in the face of which he resumed his seat.—The SPEAKER, rising, explained the rule which prohibits the introduction of the Sovereign's name in debate.—Mr. DISRAELI said it was a very small matter, and he only desired to say that the Queen had authorised him to state that with no Minister, and at no time, had such circumstances happened as were described in the Retford speech.—After some words from Mr. REED, Mr. LEWIS offered to withdraw his amendment; but this being thwarted by members on the Liberal side, a division took place, when the resolution was carried by 91 votes against 37.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, May 4.—THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Mr. FAWCETT gave notice that on the introduction of the Indian Budget he should move that "This House views with apprehension the constant additions which are being made to the public debt of India, and is of opinion that, considering the serious losses which have been and may be caused by the depreciation in the value of silver, no new public works should be undertaken which would necessitate new loans, and that in order to place the financial position of India in a satisfactory condition, the distinction in the budget between ordinary and extraordinary expenditure should be discontinued."

DUTIES ON INDIAN PRODUCE.—Sir G. BALFOUR asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will cause to be laid before the House statements of all duties levied in the United Kingdom on the produce and manufactures of India, and also of the duties levied in India on the produce and manufactures of the United Kingdom and colonies, with a view to negotiations being entered into between the Governments of the United Kingdom, of the colonies, and of India for establishing a thoroughly reciprocal free trade between the dominions of the Sovereign.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said there would not be the slightest objection to lay before the House a statement of the character asked for if the hon. gentleman would move for a return; but he must demur to the latter part of the question, which, indeed, he thought was hardly one it would be right to put in the form of a question as to the policy which was to be founded upon these returns, and he must guard the Government against the adoption of what was implied in the question.

SUEZ CANAL.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, replying to Sir H. WOLFF, said that in his opinion it would be inconvenient to discuss the arrangements for the future management of the Suez Canal before the company held their general meeting.

INDIAN FINANCE.—Lord G. HAMILTON, whom Mr. FAWCETT asked why the Secretary of State for India had thought it necessary to borrow in this country an amount greater than the Budget estimate published in India showed to be necessary, said the Indian Government based their estimates upon the most probable assumptions, guarding themselves by stating so, and that in the present instance what were considered the best means of meeting a deficit had been adopted.

INDIAN TARIFF ACT.—Mr. FAWCETT asked for the production of the substance of the telegram of Sept. 30, from the Secretary of State to Lord Northbrook, with reference to the Indian Tariff Act. —Lord G. HAMILTON said the papers asked for were laid upon the table of the other House under protest. The hon. gentleman was therefore at liberty to move for them as an unopposed return ; but he hoped that in granting this no precedent would be created for the production of similar papers.

THE ROYAL PROCLAMATION.—Sir H. JAMES, who was received with much cheering, said : I beg leave to give notice that at the earliest opportunity afforded me, I propose submitting the following resolution to the House : "That, having regard to the declarations made by her Majesty's Ministers during the progress of the Royal Titles Act through Parliament, this House is of opinion that the proclamation issued by virtue of that Act does not make adequate provision for restraining and preventing the use of the title of Empress in relation to the internal affairs of her Majesty's dominions other than India." (Hear, hear.) Perhaps it may be convenient that I should state the course I intend to pursue. I mean to place this notice formally on the paper, on the motion for going into Supply to-morrow, in the hope that the right hon. gentleman at the head of the Government and the noble lord the Member for the Radnor Burghs may be able to make arrangements to allow this motion to come on at the earliest possible moment. (Cheers.)—Mr. DISRAELI, who was received with cheers, said : There will be no occasion whatever to postpone till to-morrow the settlement of the point raised by the hon. and learned gentleman. He has given notice of what, in my opinion, is not only a vote of censure, but one which involves a want of confidence altogether, and therefore I think it will be to the convenience of the House on both sides that —of course with a due regard to the courtesies that generally attend the bringing forward of motions in this sudden manner—that we should at once fix a day, and an early one, for the consideration of the motion. I therefore place at the disposal of the right hon. gentleman this day week, and I trust it will be convenient for himself and his friends, (Cheers and counter cheers.)

MR. LOWE'S EXPLANATION.—Mr. LOWE, alluding to the comments which were made on Tuesday upon some remarks which he was reported to have uttered at a dinner at Retford, expressed his sincere regret that he had been led into an error, and that through his mistaken ideas her Majesty's name had been introduced in the debate. The right hon. gentleman's apology was received with cheers from both sides of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, May 5.—RUSSIA AND CENTRAL ASIA.—Mr. BAILLIE COCHRANE called attention to the occupation by Russia of the Khanate of Khokand, and moved for copies of certain correspondence between her Majesty's Government and that of Russia respecting it.—After a lengthy debate Mr. DISRAELI stated that the occupation was anticipated ; that the Government were determined to maintain and strengthen our Indian frontier ; and that the best possible understanding with regard to this matter existed, he was happy to say, between themselves and Russia at the present time. As there was no correspondence between the two Governments with respect to Khokand, no papers could be produced.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—Sir H. WOLFF called attention to the proposed arrangements with regard to the future management of the Suez Canal.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER replied to several interrogatories put to him by the hon. baronet, and explained the manner in which England would be represented in the councils of the Company. With regard to the surtax, further information, he said, would be given to the House as early as possible.

THE DUKE of EDINBURGH in AFRICA.

With Map and Illustrations, crown 8vo., 14s.,

SPORT and WAR. Recollections of FIGHTING and HUNTING in SOUTH AFRICA, from 1834 to 1867, with a Narrative of the Duke of EDINBURGH's Visit. By Lieut.-Gen. BISSET, C.B.

"General Bisset's book is pretty equally divided between war and sport, and it is hard to say which is the more attractive portion. A large number of the pages devoted to sport are occupied with a description of the Duke of Edinburgh's exploits on the occasion of his two visits to South Africa. The author also relates several stories of most dangerous encounters with lions; indeed, his book cannot fail to be interesting to both soldiers and hunters, its chief merit being that it bears throughout the impress of perfect truth."—Athenæum.

CAROLINE HERSCHEL.

Second Thousand, with Portraits, crown 8vo., 12s.,

MEMOIR and CORRESPONDENCE of CAROLINE HERSCHEL, Sister of Sir WILLIAM and Aunt of Sir JOHN HERSCHEL. By Mrs. JOHN HERSCHEL.

"Caroline Herschel's life is not simply an interest to astronomers; it is a grand example to true men and women, and calculated to point wholesome morals to an age of self-seeking. With the help of her diaries and daybooks, and diligent ransacking, in the retirement of her later years, of desk and drawer for the treasures of her English memories, Mrs. John Herschel has constructed a biography which throws a light upon the biography of the brother who was the object of so much self-devotion."—Academy.

With Map and Illustrations, crown 8vo., 12s.,

RUSSIAN TARTARY, EASTERN SIBERIA, JAPAN, and FORMOSA; a Narrative of the Cruise of H.M.S. Dwarf in the Eastern Seas, from the Corea to the River Amur. By Capt. B. W. BAX, R.N.

"An exceedingly interesting and well-written narrative. It extends over a period of three years and eight months, and contains admirable descriptions of many places hitherto comparatively unknown. While so much public interest is being excited about Russian doings in Central Asia, much instructive information is given respecting the Russian ports in the Eastern Seas, and of the splendid harbours, which are capable of holding large fleets, and of being made almost impregnable."—United Service Gazette.

"A work of literary art of rare excellence. A most valuable and profoundly interesting work."—Home News.

"Nothing could exceed the completeness with which Dr. Hunter has told the story of a noble life and of a great career, and he has done it in a manner that may fairly be described as masterly."—Hour.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 76 years for
INDIGESTION.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, April 24; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, April 22; Calcutta, April 21.

THE departure of Lord Northbrook on the 15th April, as mentioned in our last week's issue, appears to have been unmarked by any popular demonstration. There was little indeed beyond a formal leave-taking of the officials who had surrounded his Lordship during the four years he filled the post of Governor-General. At the place of embarkation, Prinsep's Ghat, Lord Lytton took leave of the late Viceroy; a good deal of hand-shaking took place, and with a few cheers the late ruler of two hundred millions left the shores of India. Stepping on board the barge at Prinsep's Ghat soon after seven o'clock in the morning, his Lordship was conveyed to Diamond Harbour, where he embarked on board the Tenasserim about noon.

THE Afridis are reported to have attacked the outpost of Cherat on the night of the 13th April. A force of all arms soon afterwards left Peshawar for the Khaibar Pass. A Peshawar telegram of the 19th April announces that an affair took place between the Afridis and the movable column, which had taken up a defensive attitude near Fort Mackeson for the protection of the husbandmen who were harvesting. The enemy's loss is unknown. The movable column lost one Kahar killed and five men wounded. The 70th Regiment was at Cherat. Some Afridis of the Kukekhail and Zukekhail tribes appear to have made a successful raid on the frontier on April 15, carrying away a large number of cattle from a village only five miles from Peshawar. The head quarter wing of the 70th Foot, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Pigott, arrived at Chedrat by forced marches from Naushera on the 13th April. Strong pickets were posted every night, and the men were heavily worked.

IT is stated in the local papers that the troops for the escort of Messrs. Grosvenor and Baber through Upper Burmah had been ordered to leave Thayetmyo for Bhamo immediately; and a telegram from Thayetmyo asserts that seventeen convicts were to be executed for the murder of Mr. Margary; and that the escort was to start on the 20th of April to see them executed on the 5th May. There is no reason, says the Pioneer, "to doubt the accuracy of the dates given, or even of the number of men to be executed; but we can hardly suppose that the murderers will be taken to Bhamo for execution; and the escort, unless absolutely obliged, was certainly not to have left the King of Burmah's territory."

THERE are significant rumours of a coming change in the directorate of Indian State Railways, which is at present embodied in the single person of Lieutenant-Colonel Williams, R.E. It is easy to imagine that a charge extending from Calcutta to Peshawar and Karachi might overstrain the powers of any one director. So, as the Pioneer puts it, "the great railway diocese is to be broken up into three bishoprics." Major Staunton, R.E., Engineer-in-Chief to the Tirhut State Railway, will probably administer that of Bengal, which may include the Burmese lines. Lieutenant-Colonel Williams will take the North-Western Provinces, including the Rajputana system, while the Punjab division, which includes the line to Karachi, will fall either to Mr. Alexander Grant, Engineer-in-Chief to the Punjab Northern line, or to Lieutenant-Colonel Peile, R.E., who stands in the same relation to the Indus Valley line. It is understood that each director will be responsible, both for the working of open lines, and the construction of new works carried on within his province.

IF the local Lucknow paper reports correctly, on Wednesday, April 17, Lucknow was visited with a hailstorm of a very remarkable character. The day, we are told, had been boisterous, with a strong wind from the east, and as the night closed in there was a lurid murky look in the atmosphere that betokened either hail or a tornado. "We were spared the latter, but had the former with a vengeance. For about a quarter of an hour the downpour of hail-stones, varying in size from a pigeon's egg to a pound, and even more, in weight, was well sustained, and for all the world made us for a moment imagine, with a very little stretch of fancy, that we were being battered by some relentless foes as in 1857. The rain of ice shot was sufficient to do a great deal of damage to life, limb, and property; but although injury has been caused to roofs and tilings on all sides, personal damages have been but few, owing to most people being under cover at the time, whilst the aspect of affairs out of doors during the evening was not sufficiently attractive to induce much moving about, except where necessary." From the same informant we learn that one woman was killed during the storm. Considering the alleged weight of the hailstones we should think that more than one man or woman must have perished under such a shower.

LORD LYTTON held his first levee at Government-house, Calcutta, on Wednesday, April 17, at the unusual but now more agreeable hour of 9.30 P.M. About thirteen hundred persons were presented.

A VERY large and important meeting was held on the evening of April 16 in Bombay, to memorialise the Secretary of State against the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Bill, passed by Lord Northbrook's Government just before he left. The leading members of the European and native community were present at the meeting.

ON the 9th April, at the age of sixty-eight, Lieutenant-General Charles Samuel Reid, of the late Bengal Artillery, died at Barrackpore. General Reid entered the service in 1824, and served through the Shekawatti campaign of 1834-35, and in the Burmese war of 1852-53. He commanded the artillery at the capture of Meeaday, and also during the operations against the rebel chief Mayatoon. He was severely wounded on the 19th of March, 1853, in the final assault and storm of Mayatoon's stronghold by Sir John Cheape's force; and his right arm was afterwards amputated. For the way in which Major Reid handled his guns on that occasion, dragging a howitzer with great difficulty up to the stockade and pouring shrapnel into the enemy at twenty-five yards, he was specially mentioned in the despatches, and obtained his brevet lieutenant-colonelcy. He became brevet colonel in the following year, and Major-General in 1865. Latterly the deceased officer was a resident of Dehra Dhun, where he had a tea estate.

FROM Sir W. Muir's Budget Statement we learn that the foreign trade of India continues to show a steady and satisfactory advance. The imports (excluding stores and treasure on behalf of Government) increased from £37,437,000 in 1873-74, to £42,786,000 in 1874-75; and the exports from £56,840,000 to £57,904,000. The total trade thus rose from £94,277,000 to £100,690,000. The aggregate trade of the four years preceding 1873-74 stood at an average of £98,640,000, the average imports being £40,760,000, and the average exports £57,880,000, indicating a slow but steady increase in both the import and export trade. Of the imports, the main articles of increase in 1874-75, as compared with 1873-74, were the following: Cotton goods in Bengal showed an advance of about two millions; metals an increase of £384,000, and liquors of £93,000. In Bombay, metals show an advance of £380,000, and machinery of £166,000. In regard to exports: in Bengal, raw hides and skins gave an increase of £274,000; tea of £193,000, and oil-seeds of £543,000. Bombay shows an advance in raw cotton of £1,951,000, and Madras an increase of £331,000. In seeds, Bombay also gives an increase of £195,000. In Bengal there was a falling off in indigo to the value of £646,400, and £190,000 in raw jute. In Madras also indigo fell off by £309,000. In tea the rise has been very remarkable, as the following table of averages will show:—

1864-65 to 1868-69... ...	„ 6,378,869	506,843
1869-70 to 1873-74... ...	„ 16,057,545	1,386,800
1874-75... ...	„ 21,137,087	1,937,429

THE returns of exports and imports for the first ten months of 1875-76—the accounts for the whole year not having been yet made up—show a steady advance on the same periods of the years just preceding. The total figures were £1,200,000 in excess of 1874, and £8,400,000 above those for 1873. Among the items of increasing imports the most striking are machinery, chiefly in Bombay, and metals; but the latter are still far below the average value for 1868 and 1869. The recent tariff arrangements will no doubt help this trade. Turning to exports, we find that raw cotton has maintained its position well, rising from 3,440,000 cwts. in 1873-74, to 4,300,000 cwts. in 1875-76. There is also an increase in the exports of cotton twist and yarn. Wheat shows a great improvement; having risen from 998,000 cwts. in 1874-75 to 2,156,000 cwts. in the last year; that is to say, the export in the first ten months exceeded considerably the export for the whole year 1873-74, which is the highest on record. A falling off in raw hides and skins is compensated by a rise in the exports of prepared hides and skins from a value of £541,000 in 1874-75 to £988,000—a result largely owing to the new tariff. Raw jute fell off by more than a million cwt.; but the loss is partly met by the growth in the export of manufactured jute, chiefly in the shape of bags for Australia, which advanced from a value of £189,000 in 1873-74 to £369,000 last year. Vegetable oils increased to nearly the same extent. But the most marked prosperity has been shown in the export of seeds, which increased from 4,632,000 cwts. in the first ten months of 1874-75 to above eight and a half million cwts. in the same period of 1875-76—a success for which the new tariff may justly receive the chief credit. Raw silk declined considerably, while tea continued its steady advance, having in the ten months improved from a value of £1,591,000 in 1874-75, to £1,900,000 in 1875-76. This staple is rapidly gaining ground with the English public; while in 1869 the proportion of Indian to Chinese tea in the English market was but one-eleventh, the Statistical Department now estimates the proportion at one-sixth.

DURING the past year a section of the South Indian line was opened, to which it is chiefly due that the open railway mileage increased from 5,592 miles at the close of 1874, to 5,693 at the close of 1875. The bridge at Cawnpore was also completed, thus establishing through communication between Lucknow and Cawnpore. At the end of the last year 334 miles were under construction, of which 117 have since been opened. The train mileage was less in 1875 than in the preceding year, owing to the cessation of grain traffic for the famine, But passengers increased from 22,783,258, paying £2,127,320, to 24,445,400, paying £2,335,135, an improvement attributable in a great measure to the visit of the Prince of Wales. The goods traffic, for the cause already specified, fell off from 5,220,740 tons to 4,404,848; and the receipts from £5,143,064 to £4,488,473. The aggregate receipts amounted to £7,061,980, against £7,669,815 in the previous year. The net income to be appropriated to the guaranteed interest (after deducting £202,583 as moiety of profits payable to shareholders) was estimated at £3,141,000; it will now be £3,685,000. The gross interest payable under guarantee is expected to be £4,687,000; and the net charge on the Indian revenue will, therefore, be no more than £1,002,000.

THE length of State Railways open for traffic at the close of last year was 616 miles, against 446 at the close of 1874. The additions consisted of eighty-eight miles of the Rajputana line, twenty miles of the Holkar line, and sixty-two of the temporary Metre Railway laid upon the Punjab Northern line. The Rajputana line has also been brought into through communication with the East Indian Railway by the completion of the Agra Bridge. At the close of 1875 the length under construction was 1,184 miles, while 559 miles had been surveyed, but not begun. The receipts for the year were £251,924, or nearly treble those for 1874. At the present rate of increase these lines may be expected soon to return a fair interest on outlay.

THE gross direct revenue from irrigation for 1875-76 is estimated at £529,000; but it must be borne in mind that, except in the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, and Bengal, the charge for water is generally included in the land revenue of almost every province. In those three provinces alone the direct revenue amounts to £507,500, or nearly the whole sum just mentioned. Hence it is only in these three provinces that any trustworthy reckoning can be made as to the degree in which the State is receiving a direct return sufficient to compensate for the capital sunk. Steps are, however, being taken to secure a fair estimate of the proportion of the receipts in other provinces due to water, but now credited under land revenue. Until these shall have been completed, it is impossible to give a correct statement of the returns yielded by the capital for all India. The net profit on canals in the provinces above-named amounts to 4 per cent. on the outlay. Two of the canals, the Agra and the Són, yield revenue this year for the first time; and if these were taken out of the reckoning the net profits would be about 5 per cent. On the Agra Canal the cultivators are eager for water, although the rates demanded are higher than on any other canal in the North Western Provinces. On the Són Canal, in consequence of apprehended drought towards the end of last summer, water was allowed to be taken before the channels for its distribution had been fully constructed. Over a large tract of country the harvest was thus protected, but the completion of the canal and its distributaries was thereby delayed. It is calculated that the returns on this canal will eventually yield above 8 per cent. on the outlay. The area watered by canals in the three provinces above-named during the past year was as follows:—

	Acres.
North-Western Provinces	979,735
Punjab	466,679
Bengal	147,802
Total	1,594,216

IN the North-Western Provinces the chief expenditure was on the Lower Ganges Canal, which is making fair progress. The foundation of the great weir at Narora will probably be completed before the rains, and the excavation and masonry works are in good train. The remodelling of the Upper Ganges Canal is proceeding steadily, and the works connected with the Agra Canal approach completion. In the Punjab the chief expenditure (over £260,000) was on the Sirhind Canal, including £80,000 contributed by the States of Patiala, Jhind, and Nabha, which are sharers in the undertaking. The remainder was chiefly spent on the Bari Doab and Western Jumna Canals, for the latter of which a masonry dam, thrown across the Jumna, successfully withstood the great floods of the autumn. In Bengal £277,800 were spent on the Són Canal, and the remainder on the Orissa and Midnapur projects. In Madras the greater part of the money was expended on works connected with the Godavari and Kistna delta system; and in Bombay on the Muta-mula and Sind Canals. These latter advance slowly, owing to the difficulty of obtaining labour—which is the more to be regretted, as without canals the greater part of the country would be desert.

THE appointment of Deputy-Secretary to the Military Department at Calcutta, vacant by the death of Colonel Basil Bacon, has been conferred on Colonel A. B. Johnson, Bengal Staff Corps, brother of Major-General Sir Edwin Johnson, K.C.B., one of the Council for India.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of May 7 the assumption of the Imperial Indian title by the Queen had not then been officially proclaimed in Calcutta. The Pioneer states that no change will be made in the Viceroy's title. The Natives appear generally to regard the matter with indifference.

FROM the same source we learn that during the last week things were quiet on the Punjab frontier, but it is impossible to say how long this may continue. The force from Peshawar has cut the Afridis' crops. There have been no rains lately. Sir Richard Pollock, the Commissioner at Peshawar, and other officers are trying to arrange matters peaceably. It is not known how far the negotiations have been successful, but the Afridi Chiefs declined to attend the conference at Peshawar, declaring that they would not permit the Government to make a road through their territory. A Lahor paper says that they asked for assistance from the Akhund of Swat, who refused it, advising them to settle matters amicably.

AT the end of last week Major Sandeman's Mission was steadily advancing towards Khelat. The Chief and people are said to be very friendly. Cholera has disappeared from among the troops. The Bolan Pass is open for the present at least, and caravans from Sind have reached Quettah and proceeded to Kandahar.

SIR LEWIS PELLY and Dr. Bellew, according to recent telegrams, are at Simla. It is rumoured that they were summoned to advise the Viceroy on the frontier and Central Asian affairs. The first-named officer was for many years the British Resident in the Persian Gulf, and the latter is intimately acquainted with Afghan politics and once accompanied an English Mission to Herat. The Government offices are now in full working order at Simla. There will be no meeting of the Council for a month. The Viceroy has been slightly unwell since he arrived there.

DOWN to the latest telegraphic dates from Calcutta no further news of the Grosvenor Mission had been received. The King of Burmah sent a steamer and a military force to accompany the British escort. The latest Burmah papers tell some characteristic anecdotes of the King. He built mud walls round Mandalay, and armed them with useless guns to impress the British troops with an idea of the strength of the place.

IT is stated in recent telegrams that the Rajah of Bastar has dismissed his Dewan, and thus satisfied the Rayats, who have now dispersed. The troops have been ordered back to their quarters.

THE latest rumours telegraphed from Calcutta give out that the State of Patiála will be managed by the present ministers without the assistance of a British officer. The Punjab Government is said to have advised this course.

ACCORDING to the latest reports from Madras the Urigaum goldfields are likely to prove successful in yield; four to six ounces of the purest gold having been obtained from a ton of quartz, while the working expenses were only half an ounce per ton.

THE Bengal Government has appointed a native lady inspectress of the female schools in Calcutta. She is a daughter of a Bengali clergyman. This is the first instance of any appointment of the kind, but we hope that it will not be the last.

THE Pope received Sir Salar Jung and his suite last Monday. His Holiness expressed his gratitude to Sir Salar for the protection afforded by the Nizam to Catholics and his hope that it would continue. He then entered into conversation with the members of the suite, giving them his hand to kiss, and promising to pray for them. Sir Salar Jung afterwards left Rome for Florence.

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA arrived at Venice from Bombay on Tuesday last, the same day on which the Tenasserim, with Lord Northbrook on board, entered the Suez Canal on her way home from Calcutta.

IT is said that Dr. Burnell, the well-known Orientalist, has accepted from the Madras Government the post of overseer of the South Indian Archæological Survey.

WE understand that Lord Salisbury has offered the Bishopric of Calcutta to the Rev. W. D. Maclagan, Vicar of Kensington. The new Bishop may hope to carry on his future labours under more favourable conditions of space than his immediate predecessors, if the scheme of a new Bishopric for Northern India can be brought to completion. From Lord George Hamilton's reply to Mr. Cust we learn that the Indian Government are quite prepared to sanction the division of the present see, if the public will supply the means of endowing a new one.

WE understand that Mr. Charles Saunders, C.B., late Resident at Haidarabad, has just started for India to take up the post of Commissioner for Mysor.

Odds and Ends.

DR. TRESIDDER, the Deputy Commissioner, and the two Civil Surgeons of Simla, have been ordered to divide the station into two divisions, for the sanitary arrangements of which they are to be responsible.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, May 13, 1876.

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.

THE recent debate on Russian progress in Central Asia, however unworthy in its opening of a powerful and self-respecting nation, produced at any rate one or two good results. It drew from Sir George Campbell a full and telling exposure of the fallacies urged by half-informed alarmists, touching the interest felt by the people of India in Russia's relations with Turkistan. As a statesman of much longer, later, and wider Indian experience than Sir Henry Rawlinson, Sir George had the best possible reasons for declaring that the mass of the people in India are utterly unconcerned about Russian movements in Central Asia, if they even know for certain what is going on there. Nor is it likely, as he well puts it, that people who associate inroads from the north-west with "the most terrible onslaughts of bloodshed and plunder" would look with much hopefulness on a Russian advance from the same quarter. On this point we should think that impartial observers would generally agree with the late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. It is nearly impossible indeed to know for certain what is passing in the minds of the natives of India, and there are doubtless plenty of unquiet spirits at work among them, watching for signs of hostile movements beyond the frontier, and swift to spread rumours unfavourable to the British power. But it may, we think, be assumed that the people at large are just as indifferent to the politics of Central Asia as they are to the question whether the Queen of England shall be called an Empress in India. With regard to the supposed danger of Mohammedan disaffection in India, Sir G. Campbell did good service in showing how little there is to fear from the divided interests of a people who have no common tie of race, or even of religious creed with the Mohammedans of other countries. One half of their forty millions live in Eastern Bengal, are "among the quietest and best of our subjects," are "comparatively wealthy and well-to-do," and for the last hundred years have been kept in order by a single native regiment. Nearly ten millions more people the Punjáb, but these, too, are "quiet and industrious, making our best cultivators and our best soldiers;" and they are not likely soon to forget that period of Sikh tyranny which English conquests brought to a close. The remaining ten millions are scattered throughout India, and if we do our best to govern justly and redress real grievances, they need not be expected to give us much trouble. It is rather from agrarian than political ferments that Sir George finds elements of danger among the Mohammedans of Bengal. It must be remembered, too, that these latter are nearly all Hindus by race, and that even their religion differs as much from pure Islam as the mongrel Christianity of Abyssinia differs from the faith of Protestant England. Sir G. Campbell possibly underrates the influence of a common religion, but he is probably right in holding that there "never was a greater delusion" than the belief that the Sultan of Turkey is a great power in India. As for the Russian conquest of Khokan, we hold him perfectly warranted by the facts in declaring that it has brought Russia not an inch nearer to India than before, and that Russia in plain truth has thus far been following the route not to India, but to China. How any one can fail to see her real object in working through the wilds of Central Asia, is a mystery only to be explained by the firmness with which people cling to past traditions, and their readiness to follow each other in taking up cries founded on hasty inductions from ill-digested or misleading data.

But perhaps the best service rendered by Sir G. Campbell was the answer which certain passages in his speech evoked from Mr. Disraeli. It is useless to deny that a recent utterance of the Prime Minister, coupled with some movements lately begun on the Sind frontier, seemed to justify a fear that the good old policy of masterly inaction had been exchanged for one of systematic meddling. On this point Sir G. Campbell himself delivered a challenge which Mr. Disraeli took up with timely promptitude. Nothing could be plainer or more reassuring—except perhaps to Russophobists—than the language in which he disclaimed all thought of a forward policy as against Russia, and enlarged on the wisdom of maintaining frank and friendly relations with a Power which has hitherto merely followed the law of its natural development. He held and declared that the Russian Government agreed with him in holding that—

There was room enough in Asia for Russia and England, and that there was no reason whatever, if there was a clear understanding between them—not the understanding of a neutral zone or the restoration of a city which they had captured, but an understanding the result of frankness and firmness—why we should view the natural development of their Empire in Asia with jealousy, so long as they were clearly made aware by the Government of this country that we were resolved to maintain and strengthen both materially and morally our Indian Empire, and not merely do that, but also uphold our legitimate influence in the East.

We are glad to hear from him that the understanding between the two Governments was never friendlier than it is now, and we agree with him that a good understanding is more likely to be maintained by "the frank expression of our own views," than by a policy of silent suspicion varied by occasional outbreaks of grumbling and growling. Mr. Disraeli, like a wise man, sees "no reason why Russia should not conquer Tartary any more than why England should not have conquered India," and he only hopes that the one conquest will bring as much advantage to the conquered, as the other has done. It is a comfort also to find that all visions of a neutral zone to be formally established between India and Asiatic Russia have "passed into the dream of things that were," and that no such project indeed was ever agreed upon by the statesmen of either Power.

THE INDIAN LEGISLATION BILL WITHDRAWN.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Under-Secretary for India explained last Monday that the above Bill had to be withdrawn in consequence of a further reference on the subject to the Indian Government having been found necessary. It would appear that the Indian authorities, at whose request the Bill of last year was introduced, have disapproved of the form given to the measure in the present Session, inasmuch as the new Bill did not destroy the power of the High Courts to adjudicate as invalid any laws made by the Governor-general of India in Council that were found to be ultra vires and to violate Acts of Parliament. Thus, not content with exercising entire control over the Indian legislature, the Government of India now ask for power to enforce their enactments, whether legal or illegal, and for release from all responsibility for any abuse of the powers entrusted to them.

Let us hope that the eyes of Parliament will at last be open to the unconstitutional and dangerous character of the powers they were called to confer on the Executive, and to the injury which the "Indian Legislation Bill," even in its modified form, was calculated to inflict on the people of India, and that the measure will be strenuously opposed when it is brought forward next Session.

Thanking you for having published my two previous letters on the subject of the Bill in question, I remain, Sir, your obedient servant, CIVIS.

May 11.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

With the demonetisation of silver, the tendency to lower prices occasioned by the increased production was naturally accelerated, and as a consequence there is more silver to be had for gold in the open market of the world; but in India silver is as good as gold.—Article in the Times of to-day's date.

SIR,—The losses to Government, to private remitters from India, and to Manchester and Liverpool merchants, cannot be checked as long as enfaced Rupee Paper can be employed by Exchange Brokers to upset the natural course of the Money Market. The enfacement of Rupee Paper was wisely authorised for the purpose of enabling British investors to draw their interest easily in London; but re-enfacement acts mischievously when used as Bills of Exchange for the purpose of causing sudden fluctuations in the rate.

The Members of the Press who advocate the cause of the millionaire brokers throw the English public off the scent by declaring that the fall in the value of silver has caused the fall in the rate of exchange; whereas the fact is that no remittances from India are made in silver. The enormous remittances by Government and by private persons are entirely made in the shape of opium vid China, tea and silk from China and India, cotton, indigo, jute, and other products of India. It is wonderful that those products should have increased as fast as the increase in the tribute paid by India to England. The Government remittances alone have increased from 4 to 16 millions sterling yearly!!

There is always a great and unceasing demand for silver in India and China, and millions of the peasantry are always ready to toil year after year if they feel sure of getting good silver in exchange for the produce of their fields.

The hope of obtaining silver has enormously increased the cultivation of the sugar-cane in Oudh.

To steady the exchanges it is necessary—

1st. To abolish all export duties on Indian Produce. Political economists are, I believe, now agreed in the opinion that the levy of export duties is foolish.

2ndly. The India Office should, without delay, reduce its enormous and reckless home expenditure. If the Duke of Argyll and Lord Salisbury had displayed one-tenth of the economical wisdom for which the East India Directors were so warmly praised by the late Duke of Wellington, there would have been in India at the present moment an enormous demand for Manchester goods in exchange for the products of India; fond as the natives are of silver, they prefer cheap and fine cotton cloths.

Talk of the extravagance of the late Emperor Louis Napoleon! Why it was frugality itself in comparison with the extravagance of the Secretary of State for India.

3rdly. A limit must be put to the re-enfacement of rupee paper. Let not foreigners have the opportunity of criticising the financial history of the past ten years as consisting of blunders having for their result the enriching of wealthy brokers at the expense of the Imperial treasury, at the expense of Government servants who have thus lost part of the savings required for their families, and at the expense of the true interests of British trade.

I presume that the authorities at the India-office are by this time convinced that their policy of borrowing two and a half millions sterling last year in India instead of in London was a grave mistake (see your excellent article on the 23rd of August).—Your obedient servant, T.

KASHMIR AND KASHGHAR.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—The mercantile public of India, who have, for the last seven or eight years, been led into believing, from the florid accounts of Mr. Shaw and the high-flown reports of Sir Douglas Forsyth, that a large and profitable business might be done between the Punjab and Eastern Turkistan, are under great obligations to Dr. Bellew, whose work, "Kashmir and Kashghar," you noticed in a recent issue, for having set before them a plain unvarnished tale of the stupendous difficulties and consequent risks that must attend endeavours at establishing anything like regular commercial intercourse across the vast and desolate mountain ranges of the Karokorum. Indeed, I imagine that after reading Dr. Bellew's book few persons will be found to venture on an undertaking fraught with danger, difficulty, and all but certain losses, as set against the possible gains that may now and then be realised on the few articles of interchange that are respectively required by the population of the countries north and south of the frightful tracts that separate Central Asia from our provinces and dependencies.

The anticipations of Sir R. H. Davies, when Secretary to the Government of the Punjab, and of the same officer since his elevation to the head of that administration as to the infinitesimal character of a trade on fostering which vast sums have been expended, altogether disproportioned to the object in view, and likely to be found to have been utterly wasted, except in so far that much valuable geographical information has been acquired—will be found to be verified to the letter. Indeed, all attempts to force a trade into channels altogether unsuited to its course will most assuredly fail, notwithstanding the endeavours made to bolster it up by fairs, by roads, and by inducements altogether unsuited to the "lie of the country." It would be almost as reasonable to try and turn the Indus into the Central Asian steppes as to attempt to divert the highway of trade from its comparatively easy, though somewhat round-about and certainly expensive line of progress through Afghanistan and over the Hindoo Kush.

The commercial treaty with the Ameer of Kashghar looks well on paper, and served its end by raising Sir D. Forsyth a step higher in the rank of enterprising "Envoys;" but for all the advantages it will afford to our merchants in the north-west, European and native, it might as well have been left to waste its sweetness on the desert wilds of the Sasser Pass. Yarkund and Kashghar, instead of being, as was supposed, thickly inhabited by people anxious and ready to trade with us and consume our Manchester and Sheffield wares to the extent of hundreds of thousands of pounds, are found to be unimportant oases, separated at long intervals from each other by vast sandy deserts, submerged by saline incrustations, as hostile to the growth of vegetation as they are to the comfort of animal life, carrying on but an insignificant trade outside the domestic wants locally supplied, while the onward progress of the Russian movement, now vastly extended by the acquisition of the new province of Khokand, will bring European wares to their very doors, by comparatively easy means of access.

The astute ruler of Kashghar, again, is much more likely to favour commercial intercourse with his now immediate neighbours than with his far-off treaty friends, while the insolent hauteur with which he and even his lieutenants treated the British "envoy," so to mark even their superiority, plainly indicated that he considered Sir D. Forsyth a suppliant for favours bestowed because they cost him nothing. The tyrant who has but as yesterday waded to a throne through an ocean of blood, who maintains himself there by the most rigid espionage and oppression, instances of which Dr. Bellew is nothing loath to notice, has learnt a lesson from his former Chinese masters which he applied with an astuteness that even Sir D. Forsyth must have penetrated; and it is to be fervently hoped that we shall hear of no more squanderings of treasure or "embassies" that have proved as profitless in a political point of view, as they will undoubtedly be ultimately found useless in their commercial aspect.

But while covertly exposing the worthlessness of our attempt to open commercial relations across the great rocky girdle of the world, Dr. Bellew has done justice in another direction, hitherto obscured by most unmerited objurgations, and bestowed a well-merited tribute of praise on one who is so frequently and unjustly abused by English visitors to Kashmir; and I hope you will allow me to give an extract, somewhat lengthy it is true, but valuable for the ample testimony it bears to the anxiety of Maharaja Ranbir Sing, of Kashmir, to prove himself in all respects the honest and faithful adherent to the British Government he has always been. While Mr. A. Wilson, in his otherwise very instructive narrative of his travels in the "Abode of Snow," damns the Maharaja, now with faint praise, and then with undisguised insinuations, Dr. Bellew, who has had far better opportunities of forming a correct opinion, having passed a whole season in Kashmir, besides travelling twice through the valley with the Kashghar mission, writes as follows, and I unhesitatingly commend his views to the fair consideration of those who so frequently rush into court to complain of tyranny and oppression, because they did not get as many coolies as they wanted or just as many eggs as they required*:—

The next day (24th June, 1874), says Dr. Bellew, we resumed our march (from Leh), and arrived at Sreenuggur on the 6th July, receiving on the way even more abundant assistance and more assiduous attention than on the upward journey. In fact, such a large number of men and cattle had been withdrawn from their usual occupations, for the service of the embassy, that the tourists who annually flock into the country were for the time somewhat incommoded in their movements.

We passed several families on our way down from Sona Murg (where, since our passage last year, a couple of new houses had been built by the Kashmere authorities for the British Commissioner), who were delayed in their camps for want of carriage. I felt less pity for the pleasure seekers than for the unfortunate men who are pressed into their service during six months of every year, and, on this occasion, into ours.

Between three and four hundred European tourists roam this country during six months of every year, and, as a rule, none of them make any provision for their carriage. They are all dependent on the country for their means of transport within its limits. This necessitates the abstraction from their homes and fields of something like six thousand men during half the year, in order to carry about their camps from place to place; and of the amount of oppression it leads to few can have an idea.

Of the hundreds of English officers and their families who, during six months of every year, visit the Kashmir territory and enjoy the hospitality of the Maharaja there are few, very few, who appreciate the benefits and privileges they are freely accorded within the territories of this most hospitable of Indian princes.

It is the fashion to abuse the native administration of Kashmir, and charge it with every species of oppression and corruption. Whether this is just or unjust I will not take upon me to say. But this I do say, that of those who join in the outcry against the authorities of this tributary State, there are few, if any, who consider the part they themselves play in bringing about the very oppression they complain of.

I resided in the valley, on duty, during the season of 1869, and had ample opportunity of ascertaining the effects of our annual invasions of the country upon the people, as well as the impression our conduct in it made upon the strangers who, in the pursuit of their commercial business, frequented the capital from all the outlying countries on the north, west, and east—men who carried away their opinion of the Englishman from what they had seen of him in Kashmir, and spread it as the character of the nation in the cities of Affghanistan, Turkestan, and Tibat. I observed also the benefits and privileges we enjoyed in the country, and the benefits we are satisfied that we confer upon it; and, as to the last, it is my positive conviction that they are outweighed by the evils attending them.

It is needless here to enter into detail. It is enough to say that the roaming of hundreds of Europeans, independent of each other, all over the country necessitates a vigilant activity on the part of the authorities, and the employment of a large body of police officers, purveyors, clerks, coolie drivers, and others, to look after their safety, attend to their wants, supply their carriage, procure their provisions, &c., in all parts of a thinly-peopled and wild mountainous country. How well this is done is proved by the fact that instances of insult, robbery and assault, are never heard of.

From my own knowledge and observation I can state that in no other part of India with which I am acquainted (and I have travelled in the three presidencies), not even in territory under our own administration, is the European so promptly and cheerfully served, and so safely protected, as he is in Kashmir, and nowhere else does he exercise the liberty of the subject to the extent that he does in that same territory.

Yet, notwithstanding these facts, there is a chronic outcry against the governors of the country, and the local English press rails at their shortcomings with a vehemence unbefitting the occasion and altogether forgetful of their claims upon our forbearance. Our conduct toward Kashmir does not escape notice on the neighbouring States, and whilst Kabul and Nepaul holds up the finger of caution, saying, "Beware, keep out the European," others, less independent, remark on the boldness of our words against Kashmir, and compare it with our discreet language towards her neighbours.

*Mr. Wilson admits that the Maharaja holds an open court once a week, to hear complaints from even the meanest of his subjects, but adds that fear of surrounding officialdom prevents many of the aggrieved poor approaching his Highness. I may against this state that being, once upon a time, in a subdivision of the district, not fifty miles from Lahor, in British territory, it came to my knowledge that the native subordinate officer of the Tuhseel, expecting a visit from the Deputy Commissioner, placed police soldiers at sundry suitable points to prevent the people from coming to make any complaints to the great man, who, no doubt, repeated to his commissioner that, having visited such a part of his charge, he was happy to say that not a single complaint had been made to him!

To us returning from the independent State of Kashghar the change in the character of our experiences in point of treatment was most remarkable, and no less so was the feeling with which on entering Kashmir we recovered our conscious superiority as lords in the land. With the Indian there was more of that air of superiority of which we had seen so much, and which the Tatar official so courteously appropriates in his dealings with those whom he means to honour, and in its absence accommodating ourselves to the circumstances of the case here, disappeared the deference it naturally drew from us as guests in their country. In its place we have found a cheerful readiness to meet our every wish, and a solicitous care to provide our every want, and, with these ready attentions, naturally returned the sense of our positions as servants of the paramount Government, and we felt at home amangst our own people. The change, indeed, from foreign to British territory was complete in other respects, too, and for the third time was I made practically acquainted with the relative merits of the Governments ruling on the one side and on the other.

Beyond the borders prevail disorder, oppression, and despotic caprice. The natural resources of the soil are undeveloped, commerce struggles for bare existence, and society is sunk in the barbarism of ignorance. Within it are found order, prosperity, and established law. The land is worked, trade is active, and the people advance in the path of knowledge.* And, with such differences between the influences of civilisation and barbarism, who can wish to deny to the oppressed States of Central Asia the blessings of good government which are pressing upon them, whether they receive them from the north or the south, or from both in their just proportions?

I think that even the most cursory reader of the opinions enounced by Dr. Bellew, on a subject on which he is entitled to write with authority, must agree with me that it is high time that justice should be done to the Maharaja of Kashmir, and that he should no longer be exposed to the indiscriminate and undiscriminating abuse so constantly heaped upon him by those who should be thankful to him for the hospitality and attentions they receive in Kashmir.—Faithfully yours, *****

AFFAIRS IN KHELAT.—II.

It was then, in 1823, that the troubles of Mihrab Khan began. Disgusted with the turbulence of the tribes and by domestic intrigues, he became a prey to mistrust and suspicion of all around him, and fell, a passive tool, into the hands of one Dadod, a Ghilji Afghan, for whom he had sacrificed Futteh Mahomed, the hereditary Tajik Minister, suspected of favouring the cause of Ahmed Zar.

It is well here to explain the Brahoe constitution as established by the clans after their conquest of Belochis, then under the leadership of Kambar, chief of the Nurwari Brahoes. In accordance therewith the Khan of Khelat is merely the head of a military confederation, in which the chiefs of tribes and the Prime Minister also occupy, in their degrees, positions as assured as his own;—his, though hereditary, being subject to the approval of the chiefs, and theirs, though similarly hereditary, being alike nominally subject to his approval. The office of Minister is vested in the aboriginal Tajiks, who are the cultivating class; and the Khanehzads (household retainers), though entitled to the other principal offices of State, are debarred from exercising that of Prime Minister. The fact is that the Khan, being merely by the constitution the chief member of a brotherhood, the hereditary chiefs of the component clans of which each considers himself as good as the Khan, the Prime Minister could hardly be appointed from among such chiefs. It was in recognition of this difficulty that the office was confined to members of the original Tajik race, subjected by the Brahoes and living among them. In addition to such a Minister there soon sprung up around the Khan a body of clients, the Khanehzads or hereditary clients, who furnished the advisers and devoted instruments not to be found among the jealous Brahoe brotherhood. To these the Khan could confidently intrust the management of Crown estates and the administration of conquered territories. The rank and file of these clients formed the body guard of the Khans and the élite of their armies, which otherwise consisted merely of tribal levies.

This state of things has lasted for many generations; innovations have always been strenuously resisted, and the assumption by the Khan of any power independent of the goodwill of the tribes has immediately led to the alienation of the latter. Those Khans who have enjoyed great power without raising discontent have been such as, like Nusseer Khan the First, kept the clans employed in foreign conquest,—or, like his great-grandson, Nusseer Khan the Second, displayed great liberality to the chiefs. The subjection of the Murrees and Boogtees in Mehmood Khan's day, which would appear an instance to the contrary, was really effected, not by the agency of the other tribes, but by mercenary troops maintained by the Governor of a conquered province (Gundooa Hurrund and Dajil) with the revenues of that province.

No Government can continue under such a constitution, and consequently, all the world over, all sovereigns have either established a commanding influence by successful wars abroad, or have endeavoured to break the power of their too independent barons by a strong coercive policy at home. In the immediate neighbourhood of which we treat, Nusseer Khan the First, of Khelat, and Ahmed Shah Doorance, of Cabul, did the former, and their sons, Timoora and Mihmood, lived upon their prestige. Ahmed Shah's grandsons, Zeman Shah, Mihmood Shah, and Shah Shuga, tried successively the latter plan, but not being able to play off the people against the nobles, as did the Louises in France, they failed signally one after another, and were eventually supplanted by the most powerful of the Barons. Mihrab Khan in Khelat also tried the second plan, and only did not share the fate of the Doorance monarchs, because among the Brahoe chiefs there were no men of the ability of the Barakzai family, now dominant in Cabul, since the fall of Shah Shuja Doorance. But the Brahoes reduced him to such straits that he hailed our approach in 1838, in the hope of earning by good service our support against his rebellious chiefs. It turned out far otherwise, as will be hereafter detailed.

The office of Minister being hereditary it may be imagined that the incumbent was not always such a man as the Khan himself would have selected. Thus it was that Futteh Mahomed, as before mentioned, fell under suspicion, and was supplanted and murdered by Daood, the Ghilji adventurer, who had acquired the confidence of the Khan. Daood was then installed as responsible Minister, the murdered man's son and successor remaining sans porte feuillé. The new Minister proceeded to secure his own position and his master's interests by destroying the more stiff-necked among the Brahoe chiefs—a procedure which soon led to a general combination against him. In 1827 a rising of 30,000 men compelled Mihrab Khan to humble himself to acceptance of their terms, and, on his failing to dismiss Daood another large body of insurgents invested Khelat in the same year. The Khan moved out against the malcontents, but was deserted by all his following save 400 Khanehzad clients; and, refusing to sacrifice Daood, was in imminent danger of deposition or death. In fact, his successor was actually elected, when the clever manœuvring of Dorogha Gul Mahomed (a Khanehzad now first heard of but who played a conspicuous part in Khelat politics for the next forty years) succeeded in exchanging the Khan elect's family, then in his power within Khelat, for liberty to the Khan to withdraw into the town. Gul Mahomed then closed the gates and bombarded the insurgents into retreat, which, with tribal levies, means dissolution.

Gul Mahomed now grew more and more powerful, and succeeded in 1833 in ousting and murdering Daood, and restoring Mulla Hussur, the hereditary Minister. In the interval, however, the anti-Brahoe policy was maintained, and attempts were made to coerce the chiefs by playing off one against the other. The disorganisation resulting on these struggles had its natural result. The Murrees and Boogtees, between 1824 and 1830, broke out of hand and repeatedly invaded Gundava. In the latter year Hurrund and Dajil were betrayed by the then Governor, Syud Shereef, to the Khan of Bhawalpur, in consequence of his supercession, after having immediately before purchased from Daood Ghilji the nomination to the Government. Bhawalpur very soon lost these districts to General Ventura, Runjeet Singh's Governor on the frontier, and they now belong to the British as part of the Punjab. Mekran, which in the beginning of his reign Mihrab Khan had contrived to reconquer, again asserted its independence and defied two efforts on his part, in 1829 and 1831, to reannex it. To the south Wad and Nal rebelled successfully in 1831, and in the same year the districts of Nooshki Kharan and Mushki to the west placed themselves under the protection of the Barukzai family, who had ousted the Doorances from Cabul. The Jam of Lus Beyla, also, in the south, achieved an independence which his successor has recently lost, Lus having been brought under subjection by the present Khan of Khelat.

In 1828 Mihrab Khan was reduced to such straits by a rebellion in Sarawan that he called in the Barukzai rulers of Candahar to support him, in consideration of a subsidy of £1,500 per annum. The Barukzais made him pay five years' subsidy in advance, but on his failure to expel Daood Ghilji, which was one of the conditions of support, they declined to take any action in his favour, and, indeed, the following year, they made this failure the excuse for marching an army into Shal and Mustoong, the Khan's northernmost districts. The Khan met them at the head of 12,000 men, but was unable, through the disaffection of his tribunal levies, to effect anything against them, and was compelled to make peace by payment of an indemnity of £2,500, and by undertaking to assist the Barukzais in their designs against the Ameers of Sind. In 1831 the same Barukzais compelled the Khan to raise the siege of Gwerjak, the chief town of Mushki, which he had invested in the course of an attempt to reduce the revolted provinces of Nooshki, Mushki, and Karan to submission.

In 1833, as before mentioned, Daood Ghilji, the origin of so many troubles, fell, and Mulla Hussan, hitherto nominal premier, became the real Minister. No improvement, however, in the Government resulted from the change, and the Chiefs of Jhallawan and Bhagwan (the central division of Belochistan) joined the ranks of the rebels. In 1834 Shah Newaz Khan, cousin of Nuhrab, and pretender to the throne, headed an insurrection in Sarawan, and being defeated fled to the Barukzais at Candahar, where he remained till our arrival in 1838 enabled him to attain his object. In the same year Shah Shuja, defeated in his attempt to recover Candahar at the head of a force raised in Hindostan, received asylum in Khelab against the pursuits of the Barukzais, who followed him up to the very walls of that place. This dangerous and noble act on Mihrab Khan's part received its recompense four years later, when we stormed Khelat, slew the Khan, and dismembered the kingdom by annexing to Cabul the districts of Shal Mustoong and Gundava—all in Shah Shuja's name.

*In the month of October or November, 1874, Allen's Indian Mail gave in its editorial columns a highly interesting account of the rapid advance of civilisation in Kashmir, the promulgation of a fixed code of laws, the establishment of colleges for the study of Sanscrit, the Vernacular, and of English, and other marked symptoms of progress.

The history of these transactions is thus given by the Indian Foreign-office in the "Collection of Treaties, Engagements, and Sunnuds:"—"When the expedition of 1838 for the restoration of the Shah (Shuja) was determined on, a British officer, Lieutenant Leech, was sent to Khelat to secure the co-operation of Mihrab Khan, through whose territories the armies had to march. Mulla Hussan, however," (the hereditary Minister, Futteh Mahomed's son, who, though he had avenged himself on his father's murderer, Daood Ghilji, had never pardoned the Khan's part in the transaction) "contrived to create a dislike between the Khan and Lieutenant Leech, and the latter left without attaining his object. The treacherous Minister further caused it to be believed that the Khan had seized stores of grain which had been collected for the British troops, and he wrote orders in the Khan's name, but without his knowledge, inciting the tribes to rise and harrass the British army on its line of march. Sir Alexander Burnes was deputed to Khelat to allay the supposed hostility of the Khan, and to negotiate a Treaty with him" (confirming to the Khan all his territories, and repudiating all idea of supporting his cousin and rival, Shah Newaz, or Futteh Khan, his brother). "The Treaty was signed contrary to the secret wishes of Mulla Hussan, and the Khan agreed to proceed to Quetta to pay his respects to Shah Shuja. Sir A. Burnes preceded him, and on his way was waylaid by a party appointed by Mulla Hussan, and robbed of the draft Treaty which the Khan had signed. The belief that this was done at the instigation of the Khan was studiously impressed on the British Government, and the Khan himself was prevented from going to Quetta by Mulla Hussan, who frightened him into the belief that the British intended to make him a prisoner. The proofs of the Khan's hostility were now apparently complete, and it was resolved to punish him when a fitting opportunity occurred.

Such is the story as told by Mr. Masson, who visited Khelat very shortly after our occupation, and accepted by the Indian Foreign Office. Gul Mahomed, the Khanehzid official, aided by Sayud Shereff, the Governor before mentioned, who betrayed Dajil and Hurrund, had much to do with these intrigues, and after the close of the negotiations, it was he who politely shouldered out of the country Mohun Lall (the Agha Sahib now residing at Ludiana), who had been left at Khelat by Sir A. Burnes. Mulla Hussan no doubt acted treacherously by the Khan in this matter, hating him for having consented to his father's death. Gul Mahomed, on the contrary, seems to have acted for the best, according to his lights. A bitter hostility to any one likely to curtail the power of the Khan, or to exercise any influence over the Khan, appears to have been the mainspring of his actions through life. This led him in 1857 to poison Nusseer Khan the second who had come under complete subjection to the influence of General Jacob, the British Resident in Sind.

The influence of these two men made Sir A. Burnes believe the Khan to be guilty of treachery, and filled the Khan's mind, first with suspicion of the intentions of Sir A. Burnes, and then with despair at the hostility incited in the minds of the British officers by outrages perpetrated, with this very object, by the emissaries of these two desperate intriguers. In November, 1839, came the denouement. General Willshire's brigade returning from Cabul to India was diverted from Quetta against Khelat. The Khan prepared for defence by sending off his son, Hoossain Khan, to Nooshki, under charge of Gul Mahomed. On the 13th November Khelat was stormed, and Nuhrass Khan fell, like a stout Beloch chief, with his faithful clients round him. He had been deserted in the hour of need by most of the chiefs who, for fifteen years, had been in incessant rebellion against him, and his garrison was but composed of hasty levies from the villages around. Nevertheless, the British exploit was a brilliant one. The assaulting force was composed of less than 1,000 bayonets, and Nuhrass Khan had 2,000 men within a walled town. One-sixth of the assailants were placed hors de combat, and of the defenders more than four hundred were slain, including the Khan, Shahghassi Noor Mahomed (the father of the able Wageer lately expelled by Nuhrab Khan's son, the present Khan), the principal chiefs of Sarawan, and one of the Mungul chiefs from rebellious Nal and Wad. When the result of the assault was no longer doubtful, the women of the Khan and the Chiefs had all been put to the sword.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

The Indian Daily News remarks that the chief lesson of some late experiences seems to be that a second or third rate statesman, sent out to India as Viceroy, has little chance of escaping from the personal influence of his advisers, whose honesty, where they happen to be perfectly honest, is of itself an insufficient protection against their strong local prejudices. If it is necessary, as we have remarked on some previous occasions, that the Home authorities must exercise some influence on the Indian Government, all that it remains to decide is the extent to which, and the conditions under which, the necessary interference can best be maintained. Lord Salisbury urges, and we think with reason, that, seeing that the Indian Government is wisely codifying its legislation, decidedly less trouble would be caused by examining a law before it was finally passed than by rejecting a whole law after it had been passed, only on account of some solitary but important defect in it. And the quotations given from former despatches from former Secretaries of State for India plainly prove that, so far from being exceptionally severe or discourteous, Lord Salisbury's despatch will compare favourably with those of some of his predecessors. The position taken up by Lord Halifax when Secretary of State was that, if the Government of India was bound to study the wishes of the Home authorities at all, the mere fact of the Viceroy and some members of his Council sitting in the Legislative Chamber, and not in the Executive Council, could not alter the permanent relations of the two bodies. The Secretary of State is not of necessity more fallible than an Indian Viceroy, but the chances of his being a statesman are greater; and unless the Viceroy of India, carried away by the honest enough but rather unfortunate representations of officials trained in a bad school, is to be free to break away entirely from the principles which regulate the government of the whole British Empire, it is not easy to see what there is to object to seriously in the much-discussed despatch.

MISDEEDS OF THE FOREST DEPARTMENT.

The Englishman declines to enter upon the abstract question of the policy of attempting, in these latter days, to reverse the whole tendency and historical traditions of progress in India by a system of conserving the jungles. That question has been decided. We think that on the whole it has been rightly decided, and at any rate we know that nothing which might now be urged on the other side would lead to its being reopened. We will admit that in the general interest of the country it is necessary that the remaining forest tracts should be conserved. What we complain of is that this legitimate, and probably useful, end is being attained by the most oppressive means. The general welfare is being secured by the ruthless sacrifice of private rights. Races who know no other system of cultivation than the primitive nomadic husbandry have been compelled to stop their clearings, and are being driven from their native tracts. Villages which depended on free pasturage in the forest have been surrounded by a cordon of officials, and their former means of subsistence is now cut off. Communities who had struggled on from generation to generation by eking out the miserable produce of their unwatered fields, by gathering the jungle-products and the jungle-fruits, have suddenly been given the alternative of starving in their homesteads or being treated as criminals if caught "pilfering" in the forest. We will admit that the ancient system of nomadic husbandry is a wasteful one; we acknowledge that free pasturage leads to the destruction of the trees; we are well aware that jungle-fruits and jungle-products can be made to yield a revenue to the State. But if, in the interest of the State, the old systems of primitive communities are to be brought to an end, and the forests conserved, the State should pay honestly for the advantages which it thus proposes to attain. At present it is labouring to secure the general good by the extermination of individual households, and by the extinction of pre-existing village rights. This may seem to some to be an unfounded, or, at least, an exaggerated statement. The records of the Forest Department in every province of India establish each item in the charge. It is not long since the head of the Government absolutely refused to give credence to the official reports of the oppression that was being wrought among certain jungle communities in Southern India. He had the documents tested paragraph by paragraph by means of a separate set of officers, and he was compelled to come to the conclusion that the wrong doing, which had seemed to him incredible, was merely the regular procedure. The State has entered on the unpopular task of reversing the natural order of things, and conserving the jungles, which would otherwise assuredly disappear before the advancing waves of population. It has intensified its difficulties by vain efforts to make this putting back of the hand on the dial "pay." And to accomplish its end, it has let loose a host of myrmidons, destitute of sympathy with the people, and trained in the belief that the life of a Sál-tree is more precious in the sight of God and the Government than the life of a man. But, indeed, no condemnation of ours can be so strong as the denunciations which have been officially placed on record. Lord Lawrence and Lord Mayo left their views behind them in unmistakable terms. "If ever there was an instance," writes the latter, of one of the cases which he had carefully investigated, "of a system of administration established among a people almost savages, which is quite unsuited to their state and character, the description of it is to be found in these papers." The district may be called a dense forest with a few strips of rich cultivated land along the banks of the rivers. There are no towns except the head-quarters of the Irrigation Works and of the District Administration. The climate appears to be exceedingly unhealthy. Fifty per cent. of the population of 56,000 (which is exceeding sparse, giving only an average of twenty-eight souls to the square mile) is composed of the wildest tribes. The great majority of the agriculturists appear to be of restless habits. They do not settle down, and generally move from one spot to another, in every three or four years. In such a district, and among such a people as this, we have been endeavouring to establish our complicated and highly organised administrative system. There is a sort of cultivation which, however barbarous and destructive, is the only one known to the people. We have prohibited it over nine-tenths of the district. We have taxed the tree which grows wild throughout their forests, and gives them food and drink. We have permitted the native landholder's agent to levy the rents of those who emigrated from the remainder who stayed behind. We have permitted the subordinates of the Trigonometrical Survey to ill-treat the people. We have made the people pay dues for grazing their cattle in the Government wastes. And all this is administered by a small body of Europeans and native officers, not one of whom can speak the only language which the people understand."

DEPARTURE OF AN AMERICAN OFFICER.—General Litchfield left Calcutta on Monday for America, via England. He has been making a tour in Upper or Northern India, and will no doubt take with him pleasing recollections of this country, in which he has unostentatiously represented the great transatlantic nation, and won the sincere respect of those who came in contact with him.—Indian Daily News, April 14.

MR. EASTWICK.—The persevering Professor Eastwick has almost completed his researches in the Punjab, for information for a forthcoming guide to India on a large scale, to be published by Messrs. Murray. He has been indefatigable in his search for interesting items of the Upper Punjab, and has succeeded in noting down and translating several obscure inscriptions which had escaped the scrutiny of Cunningham and other seekers after the doubtful. We understand the accomplished Professor and late M.P. has already collected material sufficient for eight large volumes, and the idea appears to be a division of India into circles, with a separate guide to each.—Pioneer.

HOP GROWING.—With reference to the question about hop growing in India, we are informed by the Simla paper that the Murree Brewery Company has commenced an experimental hop plantation in Srinagar, having obtained certain concessions from the Maharajah of Kashmir. The company is to bear all expenses of management and supply of hop roots for two years (1876-77)—the Maharajah giving land, labour, poles, fencing and manure free. The ground has been prepared and fifty thousand hop roots which had been brought out from England during the winter are now on their way into Kashmir, and have probably by this time reached their destination. The company has engaged for the management of the experiment Mr. J. Beck, formerly an Assistant to Dr. Hooker in the Kew Gardens.

RAILWAYS.—The opening of the Naorangabad section of the Punjab Northern State Railway seems to have been almost as pleasing a surprise in point of traffic results as was the opening of the section between Lahor and Wazirabad. A correspondent of the Lahor paper states that ever since the 10th April the press of passenger traffic has been greater than there was carriage for, and crowds of natives were disappointed. This sudden rush is of course in a great measure due to the fairs at Amritsur and Wazirabad, which usually take place during the Bysakee; but it is not entirely due to this, as it is stated that the local traffic is also very considerable. We should not be at all surprised, adds our Lahor contemporary, if this line, which was constructed primarily for military purposes, should prove also financially successful. When the broad gauge line is ready and better through traffic arrangements can be effected, the traffic will, most probably, still more increase.

FOREST DEPARTMENT.—Captain Wood, Conservator of Forests in Oudh, and Captain Pitcher, of the Oudh Commission, are holding conference somewhere in the jungles of that province, with reference to the rights and wrongs of the agriculturist, as involved in forest administration. The forest officer must needs be the foe of the farmer. But the damage inseparable from the ravages of wild beasts and miasma, which his operations tend to encourage, is aggravated by an evident want of reasonable elasticity in the rules of conservancy, and we are glad to see the Oudh Government alive to the cruelty of handing over the inhabitants of large agricultural districts to the tender mercies of the petty officers of the department. That the forests of India must be preserved no one questions. So also must the tiller of the soil. The ways of the people in respect of the forest, though petty larceny by the light of forest laws, are vested rights by the light of immemorial usage, and the people must be educated to the new order of things by degrees. If forest preserves and agricultural holdings are to co-exist in close contact, the forest officer should bow to the officer of the district. And so he may without imperilling the observance of necessary technical rules.—Pioneer.

THE KOHAT AFRIDIS.—The Rawal Pindi correspondent of the Times of India, writing on April 16th, says:—"The dogged obstinacy of the pass Afridis has quite overthrown the calculations of our frontier politicals, who, after patiently hoping to terminate the dispute by negotiation, have resolved upon adopting offensive measures, and accordingly a movable column, consisting of the following troops, 500 rank and file of her Majesty's 8th Regiment, E. F. Battery R.H.A., 17th Bengal Lancers, and 20th P.N.I., under command of General Ross, left Peshawur this morning for the pass, with the object of cutting down the standing crops, which, considering that the harvest is at hand, will be a serious blow to the Afridis, meaning as it does want and starvation to them; they are therefore naturally most anxious to avert such a calamity, but by other means than submission. A stout opposition is expected, as it appears the pass Afridis have summoned several of the tribes from the interior to their assistance; but, as the close blockade which has been maintained for the past two months has entirely exhausted their stock of provisions, it is thought they will find it impossible to meet the wants of their increased numbers for any length of time, and must therefore soon submit to the inflexible demands of our Government. The troops from Kohat are, I believe, to make a demonstration simultaneously at the other end of the pass, which will divert the attention of the Afridis and facilitate the Peshawur column cutting down the crops on their side. A detachment of H.M.'s 70th Regiment, 250 strong, was sent up to Cherat from Peshawur some days back to protect that place against any attack the Afridis might make on it."

MILITARY ACCOUNTS SERVICE.—The grading of the Military Account Department, as determined in a late general order, is deserving of passing notice. Satisfactory in itself, as setting at rest doubts of many years' standing, and difficult of adjustment, so many, varied, and conflicting the interests represented, it may be conceded that the duty of "fixing" the officers concerned has been fairly enough discharged, or, as fairly as circumstances—writing generally—would admit. None the less, some of the inconsistencies are glaring, and quite beyond defence, or intelligent explanation. Thus we find a controller at Bombay, with a charge not much larger, if larger at all, than the Punjab Circle of this presidency, in receipt of a larger staff than the Controller of all Bengal. There are reasons and reasons for the anomaly which need not be stated, but it appears to us the difficulty might be met by withdrawing controllers from the departmental grading, and then Government would be at liberty to employ them east or west, irrespective of standing, the larger staff being rightly assigned to the larger work. And there is the better reason for such a non-departmental treatment of these officers that they may at any moment be drawn from outside sources, as was Colonel Atkinson. In another instance we find the petty duty of a disbursing officer of the most insignificant of all the circles of payment placed on the same footing with an officer at the head of an office, dealing with the audit and compilation of the pay of an entire army. In this and similar cases Sir George Balfour's opinion that disbursing officers should, as in practice they are, be subordinate or junior to auditing officers on the same lines of staff pay, has apparently been lost sight of. We have said, and repeat it, the difficulty of reconciling things all but irreconcilable was great, and anything was better than further uncertainty. But, having progressed so far, we trust that Sir Henry Norman, with the map representing all the grading bumps and inequalities lying before him, will level up, or level down, until something like consistency has been attained. Whilst the officer in charge of the audit of ordnance and army clothing accounts, Bengal, receives Rs. 500 staff, the paymaster of the pettiest circle of payment draws Rs. 800 staff. Without reference to present incumbents, and with every wish to avoid even the semblance of personality, such things should not be tolerated in any department of Government.—Indian Daily News.

LAND TENURES IN KURG.—Mr. Dalyell, Chief Commissioner of Maisur, is about to go on tour in Kurg, to make personal inquiries into the working of the present land system, the tenure under which coffee lands are held, and the abkári. The planters in Kurg have always been clamouring against the assessment. It is true they have not always been very successful in the cultivation of the berry, and, as such, deserve to be treated with some consideration. Mr. Dalyell may be able to meet the planters half way, and, if this is done, it will be an advantage to the coffee planters.

DEFALCATIONS DISCOVERED.—We learn from a Madras paper that extensive defalcations have been discovered in the accounts of Mr. McClay, the late Superintendent of the Men's Workshops of the Friend-in-Need Society. About the latter end of last year McClay drew attention to himself by his extravagant style of living, the salary of the post being only Rs. 60, but before his books could be looked into he resigned and proceeded to Bangalore. Mr. Lowe was then deputed to examine the accounts, when serious defalcations were discovered, chiefly in the purchase of cane for mat making. When the extent of the defalcations had been discovered, Mr. Lowe was sent to Bangalore with instructions to have McClay arrested; but he was not to be found at that station. The case was then made over to the police, which resulted in his being arrested near Calcutta, travelling under an assumed name. The prisoner is now on his way to Madras.

WEATHER AND HEALTH.—Madras is now as dull as it can ever be, and with the thermometer at 90° in the shade, with little in the shape of breeze to relieve the heat, it can well be imagined what existence in this city must be. Rain still keeps off, and as yet we perceive no prospect of ever so small a shower, if it were even one sufficient to merely lay the dust in the roads. Indeed, with the exception of very slight and partial showers in Kurnool and Tanjore, no rain has fallen in the Madras Presidency. The drought has been felt very generally. It has affected the supply of pasture in Kurnool, Tanjore, Malabar, and Madura. It the last-named district, drinking water is said to be failing. In such a state of things it is not to be expected that the public health can be very good. So far as the town of Madras itself is concerned, there is not much to be said on this score, but in many of the districts the case is different. Cholera is prevalent in most districts, and in Kurnool a considerable number of fatal cases have occurred. Cholera is also slightly on the increase in Mysore and Coorg.—Madras Times, April 22.

STRANGE IF TRUE.—A Hindu correspondent sends to the Madras Athenæum the following:—"Certain inscriptions carved on metallic plates announcing the grant of land to some of the Brahmin community of Southern India recently came to the notice of Mr. Rice, the Director of Public Instruction in Mysor, which we are told goes to prove the exact date of the 'sarpayaga' or great sacrifice to root out the serpent race from the face of Baralakanea or India, performed by Janamajaya, a descendant of the Pandus. The story of the sacrifice is, we are sure, familiar to most of our Hindu readers. Should the inscriptions be genuine, as there is every likelihood that they are, then the event must have taken place more than 3,000 years before Christ, which places the Mahabarata at a date much anterior, and the Ramayana, the earliest epic of the country, at a time long before the creation of the world as recorded in the Christian Scriptures. Mr. Rice will be opening a new vein in the mine of Indian antiquities which would interest antiquaries and amateur students of ancient relics and curiosities should he present his labours in this new direction in a readable form to the public."

NEWS FROM MALAYA.—The ex-Sultan Ismail, with seventeen followers, arrived at Singapore, from Penang, in H.M.S. Ringdove, on the morning of Sunday, the 26th March, and after an interview with his Excellency the Governor, was sent to Johore, where he is to be interned on parole, under the charge of his Highness the Maharajah of Johore, pending the result of the official inquiry. The Datu Sagor of Perak arrived next day in the Calcutta steamer Hindostan, and has been relegated to the Civil Prison, to await his trial on the charge of complicity in Mr. Birch's murder. At the Council meeting of the Governor of the Straits Settlements on the 27th March, his Excellency Sir William Jervois made a statement in reference to his Highness the ex Sultan Ismail and his capture, in the course of which he acknowledged the obligations of Government to the Siamese Government and Rajah of Quedah for their aid. His Excellency announced the appointment of a Commission to inquire and report as to the complicity of the Chiefs of Perak in the recent outrages. The Commission consists of Mr. Justice Phillippo, the Hon. C. B. Plunkett, and Mr. W. F. B. Paul, who will proceed at once with their labours.

BRITISH BURMAH.—The foreign trade of British Burmah has, according to latest returns, been falling off; the total in 1872-73 was just over 5½ millions sterling, which dwindled down in 1874-75 to 5¼ millions. The decrease was mainly in rice, a large quantity of which was diverted to Bengal during the scarcity. The bulk of the foreign trade of Burmah is with the United Kingdom and the Straits. Burmah also possesses an extensive coasting trade with other parts of India, but chiefly with Bengal. The value of this trade in 1874-75 was £4,767,636, and of this total £4,105,000 belong to Bengal. The direct trade between Burmah and China seems to be nearly extinct. From China there were no imports from 1871-72 to 1873-74, when their total value is put down at £46. The exports to China amounted to £76,210 in 1872-73, but sank the next year to £10, and in 1874-75 they were nil. Burmah sends to Bengal, or rather Calcutta, raw cotton, rice, and paddy; Cutch, sticklac, and wood, mostly teak. The imports from Bombay are unimportant; the exports are chiefly teak wood; the total value of the exports and imports to Bombay together amounted to £191,405, of which sum £171,993 represents teak. The King of Burmah has damaged the trade in sticklac, having monopolised the article, most of which is still produced in Upper Burmah. His Majesty has at Mandalay a manufacture of shell-lac and lac dye.

Bombay.

THE 108TH FOOT.—Colonel Williams and the officers of the 108th Regiment at Mhow gave a ball and supper to the residents of Mhow and Indore as a house-warming on their arrival in Central India.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—On Monday, April 17, Sir Charles Staveley left by the early morning train for Puna en route to Mahableshwar. A few personal friends assembled to see him off, and the usual salute was fired from the Apollo battery, though not until Sir Charles was several miles on his journey to Puna.

FIRE AT MHOW.- We hear from Mhow that a most destructive fire broke out in the grass market near the bazaar about midday on Monday, destroying most of the grass stacks, and causing damage to the extent of some Rs. 30,000. A high wind was blowing, and although men from the several regiments with engines were present, the heat was so intense that little could be done to avert the progress of the flames. Major-General Montgomery and other officers were quickly present, and aided the efforts of the soldiers and police. The fire will take some days to burn itself out, but fear is entertained that some few large stacks separated from those burnt may be ignited should the wind change.—Times of India, April 24.

CONCESSION TO RAILWAY TRAVELLERS.—The G.I.P. Railway has made a concession which will be most grateful to travellers on its lines. After the end of the present month all "single journey ticket-holders" will be allowed to make a stay of one day for every hundred miles of the journey. Thus a passenger from Bombay to Madras could stay at Puna for a day, travel one hundred miles the next day and rest again, so doing the journey by easy stages—a very necessary precaution in the case of invalids and sick people. We are sure that this arrangement will be much appreciated. The Ghaut mileage charges are also to be abolished and the terminal charges reduced to eight pies per maund.—Times of India, April 24.

THE LATE MR. JAMES BORTHWICK.—The death of Mr. James Borthwick took place at his residence at Byculla on April 9. Mr. Borthwick has been for the last sixteen years head foreman of the carriage department of the G.I.P. Railway at Byculla, and during that time he has earned the respect of his employers and of the number of subordinates in the extensive workshops for the construction of passenger carriages, trucks, and the rolling-stock of the G.I.P. Railway which has been for some time past in full operation at Byculla. Mr. Borthwick has died at the comparatively early age of thirty-nine, leaving a widow and orphan children but inadequately provided for.

MEDICAL.—We are glad to hear that the place of Dr. J. D. Mackenzie at the Jamsetjee Hospital and in the Grant Medical College is to be filled by Surgeon-Major J. H. Blanc, who is to act in both appointments. Dr. Blanc's well-known skill ensures efficiency in his hospital work, while his varied experience and vivacious manner should afford the students in the College class every chance of rapid progress. Some of the delay in filling up the appointment has been due, we understand, to the desire on the part of the authorities to apply rules precluding the professors from indulging too much in private practice—a luxury which has sometimes been enjoyed by the professors to such an extent as to lessen their zeal in clinical practice and lecturing. In this instance, with the new incumbent—and, we presume, all future appointees to these joint College and Hospital posts—consultations are to form the strict limit of their outside work.—Times of India.

MR. CHESTER MACNAGHTEN AND THE STUDENTS OF THE RAJKUMAR COLLEGE.—The summer vacation of the Rajkumar College began from the 1st April. The delight of the students was marred on this occasion by the approaching departure of their very kind and loving instructor, Mr. Macnaghten, who was going on leave to Europe on the 10th for the benefit of his health. They expressed their earnest wish, through Mr. Turkhud, their Vice Principal, to give him a farewell dinner; but Mr. Macnaghten declined the honour in kind and touching terms. The pupils were sadly disappointed, but they persistently urged their instructor till they prevailed on him to accept at least an address, if nothing else, from them. On the evening of the 30th March all the members of the College assembled in the central hall. Some native musicians were also engaged to add eclat to the occasion. After some time the head boy of the College, Harsinghjee, of Bhownugger, who lately passed the matriculation examination in connection with the Bombay University, got up and read the address, which ran as follows :—

Dear Sir,—The College term is now about to close, and we feel that we cannot part on this occasion in the same manner as we have hitherto done at the close of every term. For we cannot meet again for some months, and this parting, though happily it is not for long, is still a parting, and, therefore, painful to us. Most of us have been with you since the time the College began, for over six years. Most of us recollect how the name of the College frightened us before we joined it. We did not like leaving our homes; but when we came and saw what the College actually was, and how uniformly kind you were to every one of us, our sorrow in leaving our homes was changed into joy at having found a new home. There is not any one of us in this hall who has not received some kindness or other at your hands. We have been sick, and you have sat at our bedside speaking words of comfort and given us medicine with your own hands. In the playground you have been a zealous playmate, and in the schoolroom, though we are afraid we have often been very careless and inattentive, you have been with us extremely patient and persevering. In fact, we know you love us and treat us as your own. Can we do less in return? All this care of us has, we are grieved to see, told upon your constitution; and you are not so strong as you were when you first came. Hence this need of parting. You will now go back to your native country and meet your friends and relations; regain your health, and come back to us—our patient teacher, cherished playmate, and loving friend. We feel much, but we can say little. Our words fail, and we cannot express all that we feel; but you will understand us. Your absence from among us will leave a great gap in our hearts. The College without you will appear strange; but you will not be away for long; and we are thankful. We do not mean to be selfish in wishing you such short holidays, but we hope that you will have completely regained your health long before they end. We will now say good-bye to you and to MRS. Macnaghten, who also, like you, has been very kind to us, and we wish you both a pleasant voyage, a happy meeting with your friends and relations in England and a speedy return to us. In that distant land where you go, remember us kindly and keep a little corner of your great heart for us always.

Mr. Macnaghten replied briefly, but with much feeling, and a display of fireworks ended a happy evening.

MUNICIPAL.—The Inspector-General of Police, and the Director of Works, will take the places at the Municipal Council Board just vacated by Major Tranchell and Mr. Byrne.

NEW MEMBER OF COUNCIL.—The Governor's approval is notified in the Gazette as having been given to the choice of the Planters' Association, in the appointment of Mr. Downall as "planting member."

LEGAL.—The appointments of Mr. Clarence as Puisne Judge, Mr. Cayley as Queen's Advocate, and Mr. Ferdinands as Deputy Q.A., have been gazetted, and the three gentlemen were severally sworn in to their respective duties on April 4.

MR. DICKSON.—Mr. J. F. Dickson, who was reported in our last issue to have accepted an appointment at Mauritius (Receiver-General), changed his intention of quitting our service, and withdrew his acceptance of the post in the island of sugar-cane. It is generally believed that the ultimate resolve of Mr. Dickson to continue in our service arose from questions connected with future promotion and pension, which appear to be far more promising here than there.

THE PEARL FISHERY.—Captain Donnan's inspection of the pearl banks off Aripo has been extremely satisfactory in results. On both the South Cheval Paar and the Modrigam Paar the oysters have been found perfectly undisturbed and in good condition, having, of course, grown very much since the inspections of the previous year. Judging by their present appearance, they will have attained a sufficient maturity to fish in 1877, beyond which it would be unsafe to leave them in the hope of obtaining larger pearls.—Ceylon Times.

KANDY.—Kandy is being liberally beautified and adorned, and having the advantage of one of the most picturesque situations of any town, will soon leave Colombo far in the shade. Many of the drives and walks about Kandy, have been already improved; the lake shores and bund have been greatly ornamented, and at the present time the approaches from the railway to the town are being laid out with considerable taste and skill, as gardens, with shady trees planted at intervals, and the walks laid with turf.—Ceylon Times.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

The Gov. gen. in Council directs that the following be inserted as Clause [f] under Section 7 of the Civil Leave Code:—

[f] The words "Accountant General" when used in reference to a public servant applying for leave or on leave, mean the officer who audits the pay and allowances of such public servant.

The Gov. gen. in Council directs that the following note be inserted under the heading of Chapter V. of the Civil Leave Code:—

[Note.—Subsidiary leave of absence is intended only for the purpose of enabling an officer to make the necessary arrangements for breaking up or reorganising his household and for the journey to or from the seaport, as the case may be; and its duration should be limited to what is necessary for these purposes.]

H.E. in Council also directs that the following be substituted for Rule 3 of Section 18 of the Civil Leave Code:—

* Subsidiary leave of absence may be granted for more than thirty days whenever the Local Government is satisfied that an officer could not within

LORD NAPIER'S FAREWELL TO H.M.'s FORCES IN INDIA.

Head-quarters, Bombay, April 10.—In laying down the chief command of her Majesty's Forces in India and the special command-in-chief of this Presidency, it is expedient to advert to the circumstances of importance which have affected the army during the period of my command.

The improvements in artillery, and more especially in small arms, and the extension of the range of deadly fire, rendered necessary a change in the form of attack.

The Government of India liberally allowed the assemblage of troops on a large scale for manœuvres during the years 1871 and 1872; also, on a smaller scale, at Rourkee in 1873; and at Rawul Pindee, Umballa, and Peshawur in 1874; and, finally, at Delhi, for the inspection of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

These camps have afforded opportunities of practising on an extended field the new forms of attack, the principles of which were ordered by his Royal Highness Field Marshal the Duke of Cambridge. The army has adopted the change of tactics with intelligence and alacrity, and will be found very handy for attack or defence in whatever form the nature of the enemy, the country, or circumstances may demand. The labour and exposure entailed by the camps of exercise have been met by the officers and men of all arms with the best and most soldier-like spirit.

It is highly satisfactory to note that the discipline of the army has improved; 160 cases of insubordination, which occurred in 1869-70, have been reduced to 49 cases in 1875. This reduction may be attributed, in a considerable degree, to attention paid to the rational employment and amusement of the soldiers, to the occupation given by the camps of exercise, to the greater comfort in barracks, and to the action of temperance societies. An extension of all these points, for which there is ample room will produce still better results. A complete record of the offences committed by about 18,000 men in the last five years shows that the number of courts-martials annually has been reduced from 1,077 to 541. The offences of the temperance men compared with those of non-abstainers are as one to forty nearly. The progress of musketry instruction has been excellent; the figures of merit show great progress. The native army has also been affected by many important changes. The new forms of attack, the course of musketry, particularly when the native officers have been taught to aid in the training of the men; the system of schools, in which every man will learn to read and write his vernacular, and enough of English to enable him to communicate with his European comrades on outpost duties; these, together with the high standard of instruction of the young officers, are exercising a great and valuable influence in developing the intelligence and character of the native officers and men. In musketry training the figures of merit give great promise.

The period of my command has been rendered memorable by the review of the troops at Delhi by Field Marshal his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and his Royal Highness's favourable opinion regarding their high state of discipline and efficiency.

The facts herein mentioned show that the army during the past six years has made a steady advance in all essential points. But, in congratulating it on this result, I would earnestly counsel all concerned to press on in the endeavour to improve, so that, when the day of trial comes, that day for which the army has alone existed, its success may be complete, and be won with the least possible loss. I would strongly advise the captains of companies more generally to identify themselves with the men of their own companies; to devote much of their time to their training, instruction, and amusement, so that a bond of union and confidence may always exist between them.

To the officers of the native army where they do not already follow the course advised I would urge that they should lose no opportunity of studying the characters of their men, carefully instructing their native officers, and, by associating them in all general plans of regimental administration, and treating them with kindness and confidence, make them feel that their place is on the side of authority. The native officers and soldiers will never shrink from the strictest discipline provided their amour propre is respected.

I have to express my great obligations to the general officers commanding divisions and brigades for their endeavours to carry out my wishes in regard to the instruction and care of the portions of the army under their command. Also to the Medical and Commissariat Departments for the efficient performance of their respective duties. I cannot sufficiently express my obligations to the Adjutant-General, Major-General Lumsden, the Quartermaster-General, Major-General Roberts, and their departments, and to my Military Secretary, Colonel Dillon. It would be impossible to enumerate the many occasions on which I have been indebted to them for their opinions or suggestions for the benefit of the army. I am greatly indebted to the Judge-Advocate-General and his department. I have found Colonel Hatch a thoroughly sound and reliable legal adviser. I am much indebted to Brigadier-General Gay, Inspector-General R.A., and to Colonel Arbuthnot, Deputy Adjutant-General R.A., for their great assistance in all matters connected with their arm of the service. The devotion of Colonel Gordon, Musketry Instructor, and the able manner in which he has conducted his office, has raised the shooting of the army to an unprecedented standard. I am under deep obligations for their constant attention to all my personal staff. The cordial support of these officers has rendered my duty easy.

I part from the army with which I have been intimately associated during my military career with the deepest regret. Its general conduct has been admirable. Its honour, its well-being, and its success will ever be most dear to me.

NAPIER OF MAGDALA, Gen. C. in C. in India.

REORGANISATION OF THE ARMY MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

The Royal Warrant for the reorganisation of the Army Medical Department has been promulgated by direction of the Secretary of State for War:—

VICTORIA R.

Whereas we deem it expedient to alter the terms and conditions of service in the Medical Department of our Army: Our will and pleasure is that the pay, relative rank, allowances, retirement, and service of all officers who shall join the Medical Department of our Army on and after the date of our present Warrant, shall be governed by the following rules:—

1. The ranks and rates of pay of the officers of the Army Medical Department shall be as follows:—Surgeon general, £2 daily; after twenty-five years' service, £2. 5s. daily; after thirty years' service, £2. 7s. daily; after thirty-five years' service, £2. 10s. daily; Deputy surgeon general, £1. 10s. daily; after twenty-five years' service, £1. 12s. daily; after thirty years' service, £1. 15s. daily; after thirty-five years' service, £1. 17s. daily; Surgeon major, on appointment, £1 daily; after five years' service, £1. 5s. daily;* Surgeon, on appointment, £250 a year; after ten years' service, 17s. 6d. daily.

2. The pay of officers shall be issued monthly in arrear.

3. The relative rank of the officers of the Army Medical Department shall be as follows:—A surgeon general shall rank as major general, according to the date of his commission. A deputy surgeon general shall rank as colonel, according to the date of his commission. A surgeon major shall rank as major, according to the date of his commission; after twenty years' full-pay service as surgeon and surgeon major he shall rank as lieutenant colonel, but junior of the latter rank. A surgeon shall rank as lieutenant, according to the date of his commission; and after six years' full-pay service as captain, according to the date of the completion of such service.

4. The relative rank of these officers shall regulate the choice of quarters, rates of lodging money, servants, fuel and light, or allowances in their stead, detention and prize-money, as well as allowances granted on account of wounds or injuries received in action, and pensions and allowances to widows and families.

5. Forage shall be granted to officers of the Army Medical Department for such number of horses as are necessarily kept by them for duty.

6. Admission to the Army Medical Department shall be by competition.

7. Every candidate for appointment to the Army Medical Department shall possess two diplomas or licenses, one to practise medicine and the other surgery in Great Britain or Ireland, and be registered under the Medical Act in force at the time of his appointment.

8. A successful candidate who, having passed through a course of instruction at the Army Medical School at Netley, in military medicine, surgery, hygiene, and pathology, shall have proved, after examination, that he possesses a competent knowledge of those subjects, shall receive a commission as surgeon for a limited period of ten years' service on full pay. From the date of joining at Netley and up to that of passing his final examination, a candidate shall receive 5s. a day.

9. On the completion of ten years' commissioned service, unless the surgeon be specially selected for further employment in the medical department of our army, or if he be unwilling to continue to serve therein, his services shall be dispensed with, and he shall be entitled to receive, in lieu of all pension or retirement, pension for wounds excepted, the sum of £1,000.

10. A surgeon of less than ten years' service, disqualified for duty by ill-health, certified by a board of medical officers to have been contracted in and by the service, may, at the discretion of our Secretary of State for War, be granted half-pay at a rate not exceeding 8s. a day, if he have served five years or more, or 6s. a day if he have served less than five years, for a period not exceeding six months at one time.

11. At the expiration of that period of six months, if the surgeon be able to resume his duties, he shall be entitled to complete his term of ten years' service. If he be unable to resume duty, as certified by a board of medical officers, he shall be allowed, if he have not served five years, a further period of six months, without half-pay, at the expiration of which period, if still unable to resume duty, his services shall be dispensed with.

12. If the surgeon have served five years on full pay, and be unable to resume duty, as certified by a board of medical officers, his services shall be dispensed with, and he shall be entitled to receive, in lieu of all further pension or pay, pension for wounds excepted, a gratuity at one of the following rates, viz.: If he shall have completed nine years' full-pay service, £800; if eight years' full-pay service, £700; if seven years, £600; if six years, £500; and if five years, £400.

13. If a surgeon be unable to complete his ten years' service from any cause other than wounds or ill-health, certified by a board of medical officers to have been caused in and by the service, on reduction of establishment, he shall be allowed not more than six months' leave without pay, after which, if unable to resume duty, his services shall be at once dispensed with, and he shall have no further claim on the department.

14. If the service of an officer be temporarily dispensed with in consequence of a reduction of establishment, he shall be granted the rates of half-pay fixed by Article 10, until there be an opportunity of re-employing him, or, if he have served five years, he may retire from the service with a gratuity according to the rates specified in Article 12.

15. Every year it shall be competent for our Commander-in-Chief, on the recommendation of the Director-General of the Army Medical Department, to select, with the approval of our Secretary of State, a number of surgeons, not exceeding six, who shall be retained in the service, and shall be promoted after twelve years' service on full pay to the rank of surgeon major.

16. All promotion from the rank of surgeon major to that of deputy surgeon general, and from the rank of deputy surgeon general to that of surgeon general, shall be given for ability and merit upon the selection of our Commander-in-Chief, with the approval of our Secretary of State, and the grounds of such selection shall be stated to us in writing, and recorded in the department. In all such cases the amount of foreign service shall be expressly stated.

17. A medical officer retiring after full pay service of twenty-five years and upwards may, if recommended for the same by the head of his department, receive a step of honorary rank, but without any consequent increase of half-pay.

18. Good service pensions shall be awarded to the most meritorious officers of the Army Medical Department, under such regulations as shall be from time to time determined by us, with the advice of our Secretary of State.

19. Six of the most meritorious officers of the Army Medical Department shall be named our honorary physicians, and six our honorary surgeons.

20. Medical officers shall have a right to retire on half-pay after twenty years' service. Medical officers of the rank of surgeon-major or surgeon shall be placed on the retired list at the age of fifty-five, and all surgeons general and deputy surgeons-general at the age of sixty years.

21. Our Secretary of State may, when he shall deem it fit, employ medical officers on the half-pay list in special situations at such rates of pay, in addition to half-pay, as he shall from time to time determine; but such officers shall vacate their appointments on attaining the age of sixty-five years.

22. A medical officer who, having voluntarily resigned his commission, has subsequently been permitted to re-enter the Department, shall not, except under very special circumstances to be approved by our Secretary of State, be allowed to reckon his former service.

SERVICE ON THE WEST COAST OF AFRICA.

23. Service of medical officers upon the West Coast of Africa shall be voluntary.

24. Each year, or a portion of a year, shall be allowed to reckon double towards retirement or towards the gratuities fixed by Articles 9 and 12, but not towards increased pay, provided that the officer shall serve at least twelve months on the West Coast of Africa.¶

25. For each year's service on the coast, a medical officer shall be entitled to a year's leave at home, and for every additional period beyond a year he shall have an equivalent extension of leave.

26. Officers who may volunteer for service on the West Coast of Africa shall receive double pay while actually serving on the coast.

NON-EFFECTIVE PAY.

27. A medical officer of more than ten years' service placed on half-pay by reduction of establishment, or on the report of a medical board in consequence of wounds or ill-health, caused in and by the discharge of his duties, or on account of age (under Article 20), shall be entitled to half-pay in accordance with the following scale: Surgeon general, after thirty years' service, £1. 17s. 6d. daily; after twenty-five years' service, £1. 13s. 6d.; and after twenty years, £1. 10s. Deputy surgeon general, after thirty years' service, £1. 5s. 6d. daily; after twenty-five years, £1. 2s. 6d.; after twenty years, £1. 1s. Surgeon major, after twenty-five years' service, £1 daily; after twenty years, 16s. 6d.; after fifteen years, 13s. 6d.; and after twelve years, 11s. Surgeons, after ten years' service, 10s. per day.

* Charge Pay.—The principal medical officer of an army in the field, consisting of 10,000 men and upwards £1 daily; of 5,000 men and upwards, 15s, daily; of less than 5,000, 10s. daily; or the principal medical officer of a colony, where the number of commissioned officers and enlisted men is 1,500 and upwards, 5s. daily.

28. The rate of half-pay awarded to officers retiring for their own convenience, after twenty years' service on full pay, under Article 20 shall not exceed one-half of their full pay at the time of retirement.

29. Every medical officer who shall retire after a service upon full pay of twenty-five years shall be granted a rate of half-pay equal to seven-tenths of the daily pay he may have been in receipt of when thus retiring on half-pay, provided he shall have served three years in his rank, or shall have served abroad for ten years in all ranks, or for five years with an army in the field. An officer of twenty-five years' full pay service, whose service falls within neither of these conditions, shall be entitled to only seven-tenths of the daily pay he was in receipt of prior to his last promotion.

30. A medical officer of twenty years' full pay service, placed temporarily on half pay on account of ill-health, may, however, be allowed to retire on permanent half-pay at the rates fixed by Article 27, if, after one year on half-pay, he shall be reported by a medical board to be permanently unfit for further service.

31. In all matters not specially provided for in our present Warrant, the officers of the Medical Department of our Army shall be subject to the general regulations for the departments of our Army.

It is our further will and pleasure that the rules established by our warrant of the 1st March, 1873 (as amended by our warrant of the 23rd Oct., same year), Article 19 of our warrant of the 18th Feb., 1874, and by our warrant of 29th Sept., 1874, shall continue to be applicable to all officers now in the medical department of our army; but that Articles 4, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, and 20 of our said warrant of the 1st March, 1873, shall be cancelled, and the following articles shall be substituted in lieu thereof:—

1. A surgeon general shall rank as major general, according to the date of his commission.

2. A deputy surgeon general shall rank as colonel, according to the date of his commission.

3. A surgeon major shall rank as major, according to the date of his commission; after twenty years' full pay service as surgeon and surgeon-major, he shall rank as lieutenant colonel, but junior of the latter rank.

4. A surgeon shall rank as lieutenant, according to the date of his commission; and, after six years' full pay service as captain, according to the date of the completion of such service.

12. A surgeon shall be promoted to the rank of surgeon-major on completing twelve years' full-pay service in our army, if he be recommended by the Director-general of the Army Medical Department.

16. All promotion from the rank of surgeon-major to that of deputy-surgeon-general, and from the rank of deputy-surgeon-general to that of surgeon-general, shall be given for ability and merit upon the selection of our Commander-in-Chief, with the approval of our Secretary of State; and the grounds of such selection shall be stated to us in writing, and recorded in the department. In all such cases the amount of foreign service shall be expressly stated.

20. Medical officers shall have a right to retire on half-pay after twenty years' service. Medical officers of the rank of surgeon-major or surgeon shall be placed on the retired list at the age of fifty-five, and all surgeons-general and deputy-surgeons-general at the age of sixty years.

We do further direct that when an officer now serving shall, under Article 20 of our Warrant of the 1st March, 1873, as revised by our present Warrant, be compelled to retire at the age of sixty, he shall have added to his retired pay, as fixed by our said Warrant, such annual sum as our Secretary of State shall consider to be a just compensation for any net loss he may have incurred from the substitution of sixty for sixty-five as the age for retirement.

Until our further pleasure shall be made known, nothing contained in our present Warrant shall be held to change the existing system of promotion of the medical officers of our regiments of household troops.

Given at our Court, at Windsor, this 28th day of April, 1876, in the thirty-ninth year of our reign.

By her Majesty's command, GATHORNE HARDY.

THE QUEEN'S DRAWING ROOM.

Her Majesty the Queen held a Drawing Room yesterday afternoon at Buckingham Palace.

The following gentlemen, who returned with the Prince of Wales in the Serapis, were presented by his Royal Highness to her Majesty :—

Major-General Sir Dighton Macnaughten Probyn, K.C.S.I., C.B., V.C., on his receiving the K.C.S.I., and on his return from India.

Lieut.-Colonel Arthur Ellis, C.S.I., Grenadier Guards, on his receiving the C.S.I., and on his return from India.

Surgeon-General Sir Joseph Fayrer, K.C.S.I., M.D., on his receiving the K.C.S.I., and on his return from India.

Lieutenant Augustus Fitzgeorge, Rifle Brigade, on his return from India.

Captain the Hon. Henry Carr-Glyn, R.N., C.B., C.S.I., and A.D.C. to the Queen, on his receiving the C.S.I., and on his return from India.

Mr. Sydney Hall.

Colonel J. S. Macdonell, commanding 71st Highland Light Infantry, on promotion.

Lieut.-Colonel A. L. Annesley, 11th (Prince Albert's Own) Hussars, on promotion, and on his return from India.

Captain H. S. Gough, 10th Royal Hussars, on promotion, and on his return from India.

Sub-Lieutenant E. T. Rose, on his appointment to the 10th Royal Hussars.

Ressaldar Sirdar Anoop Sing Bahadoor, 11th (Prince of Wales's Own) Bengal Lancers ; Ressaldar Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, Khan Bahadoor, 11th (Prince of Wales's Own), Bengal Lancers.

Miscellaneous.

CEYLON.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Arthur N. Birch, Esq., C.M.G., Colonial Secretary of Ceylon, to be Lieutenant-Governor of that colony.—Gazette.

DR FAYRER.—Last night's Gazette announces that the Prince of Wales has been pleased to appoint Surgeon-General Sir Joseph Fayrer, K.C.S.I., M.D., to be an Honorary Physician to his Royal Highness.

SIR HENRY RAWLINSON.—In view of the retirement of Sir Henry Rawlinson from the Presidency of the Royal Geographical Society, which he has held for five years, it is reported that Sir Rutherford Alcock is likely to be his successor.

NATIVE INDIAN VISITORS.—His Highness the Thakore of Limree and suite has just arrived in London from India, and is now staying at 8, Bolton-gardens, South Kensington, on a visit to Major James Le Geyt Daniell.

THE ROYAL TITLE.—A Parliamentary Paper has been printed containing a list of the several descriptions of official instruments and documents of State issued under the authority of her Majesty, in which the full statutory style and title of her Majesty is customarily set forth.

MOYAR COFFEE COMPANY.—The report of the Moyar Coffee Company for the year ending March 31 last states that the net profit amounted to £9,547. 0s. 6d., which has been appropriated in payment of a dividend last July of 12 per cent., leaving £2,131. 12s. 6d. to be carried forward to the next account.

BISHOPRIC OF CALCUTTA.—The Metropolitan See of Calcutta has been offered by Lord Salisbury to the Rev. W. D. Maclagan, vicar of Kensington, but has not been accepted. Mr. Maclagan has already had experience of India, having in early life served two or three years in the army there, but the effects of the climate upon his health were so unfavourable that he was compelled to retire with the rank of lieutenant. It is upon medical advice that he has now declined the offered bishopric.

THE "STRATHCLYDE" AND "FRANCONIA."—On Tuesday Sir Robert Phillimore delivered the judgment of the Admiralty Court in the case of the Strathclyde and Franconia. The claim of the owners of the English steamer was for £45,000 ; the owners of the cargo making a further claim for £20,000, agreeing to abide the issue of the first action. The Court held that the Franconia was alone to blame for the collision, and that therefore the judgment must be for the plaintiffs.

BOMBAY GAS COMPANY.—The directors of this Company (Limited) have issued their report for the half-year ending 31st December last. It shows an increase in rental and a decrease in charges, but states that owing to the fall in exchange it has been thought right to place £1,200 on this account to profit and loss instead of only £600 last half year. The accounts show a net profit of £11,762. 16s. 8d., and after adding £2,000 to reserve a dividend of 4 per cent. for the half-year is recommended, making 7½ per cent. for the year.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA and the Marchioness of Salisbury had a dinner party on May 10, at the family mansion in Arlington-street. The guests included the Lord Chancellor and Lady Cairns, his Excellency the Spanish Minister, Lord E. Fitzmaurice, the Right Hon. R. A. and Mrs. Cross, the Right Hon. Sir Bartle and Lady Frere and Miss Frere, Colonel Yule, Mr. and Mrs. Max Muller, Mr. and Mrs. Sandford, Mr. Butler-Johnstone, Miss Mary Alderson, &c. Later in the evening, Lady Salisbury had a reception, which was numerously attended. The Empress of Germany graced the reception by her presence.

INDIAN APPEALS.—At the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council an appeal case, "Ranee Khujoorunissa v. Ranee Roushan Jehan," was partly heard. The property in dispute is about £90,000, and there has been litigation more or less in the matter over thirty years. The Rajah Deedar Hossein, who left the property, died in 1841, leaving five wives, five sons, and five daughters, and from that period up to a compromise before the year 1860 there had been, as described, "a most exasperated contention." The present suit, on which the appeal now came before their lordships, was commenced in 1860, and the object was to get rid of the compromise. Fraud and forgery were alleged. Among Mohammedans there are three kinds of marriages, and a question was whether one of the parties had a title to share in the estates. Some of the original litigants had died during the contention, and their representatives had continued the legal fight. Mr. Cowie, Q.C., and Mr. I. D. Bell were for the appellant ; Mr. Leith, Q.C., M.P., and Mr. Doyne for the respondents. Mr. Cowie opened the case on Monday.—"Bishewari Debya v. Govind Persad Tewari" was a suit to recover, by virtue of a covenant in the nature of a warranty of title, the consideration money paid by the shebait or priestess of a Hindoo idol. The deed containing the covenant was executed by the priestess, who was merely a trustee for her three sons, and the question was whether they could be joined as defendants. Their Lordships, having heard the case, decided the question in the affirmative, allowing the appeal, with costs.

INQUEST ON AN INDIAN OFFICER.—On May 9 Mr. Bedford resumed at St. George's Hospital the inquiry attending the death of Surgeon-Major Robert Pilkington Linton, a retired surgeon of the Madras Army, who died through being knocked down by a runaway brougham in St. James's-street, as reported in our last number. It will be recollected that the horse of Lord Helmsley's brougham bolted, and the carriage was overturned. The deceased was found lying on the pavement insensible near the vehicle, and he died in the hospital a few hours afterwards from a fracture of the neck. The coachman to Lord Helmsley said that he was directed to meet his master at Boodle's, with the brougham. On entering St. James's-street the horse kicked his leg over the traces, made a plunge, and bolted. Witness endeavoured to get him across the pavement and against the railings of the houses so as to stop him ; but the brougham came in contact with the kerb, and he was knocked off. When he recovered he found that the vehicle was overturned further down the road. The coroner said the case was somewhat a mysterious one. No one saw the deceased knocked down, and there was really no evidence that showed how the deceased received the injuries which caused his death. A juror remarked that it was very strange that at the time the deceased received the fracture of the neck he should lose his watch and money. The jury returned an open verdict that the deceased died from a fracture of the neck, but how that fracture was caused there was no evidence to show.

THE DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.—The Select Committee appointed by the House of Commons to consult on the above subject have now concluded their labours, and have adjourned in order to prepare their report, which will be issued shortly. At the last meeting the following gentlemen gave evidence :—Mr. Seyd, a gentleman well acquainted with Indian finance and the amount of silver and gold coin in circulation in the various countries in the world, stated that previous to the year 1870 the total amount in the world was, in money or bar gold, £700,000,000 ; in silver, £1,650,000,000. He considered that the depression of silver had not been caused by the low prices of Indian produce. With regard to the United States the old American dollar contained 4 per cent. more silver than the new ones, the consequence of which was that the old dollar was exported and melted down at a profit. Upon the new dollar the Americans gave 2 per cent. more, making a total of 6 per cent. The proportion elsewhere was 1 gold to 15½ silver ; the new dollar was in the proportion of 1 to 17. Thus the Americans had debased the Mint value of silver, while they had increased the absolute value of the coin. Mr. Bagehot, editor of the Economist, stated that he had not paid particular attention to the relation between the depreciation of silver and the Indian exchange. In answer to the committee, witness stated that if the depreciation of silver continued it would have a prejudicial effect upon the revenues of India, as a large portion of its resources consisted of land revenues, which were principally paid in rupees.

LECTURE ON INDIA.—A lecture was delivered at Sunderland on Monday, by Colonel Gourley, M.P., on his recent tour in India. Colonel Gourley said the consciousness of security afforded to the princes and people under our Government is the primary cause of our present strength. Our weakness, he fancied, rests in the possibility of an alliance between the Mahommedan and Hindoo princes, and he condemned the policy which permits Scindiah of Gwalior and other chiefs in part of our own territory to maintain large independent armies. It is of paramount importance that we should inaugurate a system by which we might place upon the shoulders of these men some of the responsibilities attached to self-government. There ought to be a representative council, composed of chiefs, leading natives, and Europeans, empowered publicly to discuss and deal with all questions affecting the welfare of the country. Unless a change in this direction follows, the visit of the Prince of Wales, he made bold to assert, so far as the princes and people are concerned, will yield but few, if any, permanent results. Reforms in this direction would have been a grander and nobler outcome of his visit than the barren exchange of the word Queen for Empress. The British people should not consider themselves absolved from responsibility, and the Prince of Wales should not be content with having performed a brilliant tour. The lecturer could not endorse the alarmist views as to the advances of Russia in India. Colonel Gourley considered that all we can or ought to do is to hold our own, and that our policy is to treat and deal with Russia as an ally.

CHRISTIAN VERNACULAR EDUCATION SOCIETY FOR INDIA.—The eighteenth annual meeting of this society, which is for training native teachers, instructing heathen children, and publishing educational works and a general Christian literature in all the principal languages of India, was held on Monday, the Earl of Shaftesbury in the chair. The report stated that the number of native teachers and mission agents trained was 300; the number of native Christians now under training as teachers was 128; the number of children under Christian instruction, 2,208; the estimated number of children receiving instruction from teachers trained by the society in schools of other societies was 7,500. The total receipts of the society in the last year amounted to £12,842, which was a larger sum than had been received in any previous year. Lord Lawrence, in moving that the report be received, said the society had established institutions in five different provinces in India, and had even attempted to do something in Ceylon. Till we had secured a sufficient number of well-informed native Christians as teachers and preachers of the Gospel we should never make an impression on the idolatry of India. Next in importance to what he had described was the translation into the vernacular of good moral books. Upwards of five million and a quarter copies of such books had been published in sixteen different vernaculars, which would no doubt have a great influence on the tone of native society. The Rev. W. J. Wilkins, a returned missionary from Calcutta, next addressed the meeting. The Rev. Dr. Murdoch said the society had issued 434 publications in all, and was becoming more and more self-supporting. Mr. Donald Matheson, Mr. Rudra, a native of India, General Sir W. Hill, and General Dobbs also addressed the meeting.

THE IRRIGATION OF INDIA.—On May 5, at a meeting of the Indian section of the Society of Arts, a Paper entitled "Irrigation Works in India, with especial reference to their Remunerativeness," was read by Mr. W. T. Thornton, C.B. The lecturer said that in India the State had within the last forty years done a very great deal of irrigation, and that by the works constructed water could be distributed over very large tracts of country. According to the latest official accounts the total of the capital which had been hitherto laid out on irrigation works in various provinces by the British rulers of India was no less than £13,260,295, of which £6,612,742 was obtained from ordinary income, and £6,647,553 consisted of borrowed money. With regard to the revenue from these irrigation works the statistics varied considerably, many provinces returning a large per centage on the capital outlay, while other works were carried on at a loss, as the canals did not pay their working expenses. For the whole of India, however, the net revenue of irrigation works was stated as £1,021,430 or 7·7 out of total expenditure. The figures of this total expenditure were somewhat open to revision, as they did not take into account the sums expended in many cases by the native rulers on ancient canals, and the interest which had accrued on the amounts expended during the time occupied in constructing the works. He considered, therefore, that in considering the question, it was fair to add to the official total of outlay a million and a half for loss of interest during construction, two millions as the extra cost in connection with the older works, and £400,000 for compensation to landholders and capitalisation of land revenue sacrificed, and these sums would bring up the total expenditure to (roughly speaking) £17,210,000. From this, however, a very important deduction was to be made on account of incomplete and partially abandoned works, and this (amounting with interest to £3,640,000) brought the total amount down to £13,570,000. Upon this sum the total revenue of £1,020,000 gave a return of 7·5 per cent., and this favourable result had, he thought, been fairly arrived at. Independent of this profit on the investment of capital, the benefits derived from irrigation on the recurrence of drought or famine in some provinces was incalculable. The community generally, as well as the Government, gained a profit from irrigation, as their land yielded more abundant crops where the works were carried out, although he would like to see brought about a fair method of the division of these profits between the landowners and the ryots who were the immediate occupants or tillers of the ground. In the course of the discussion General Sir Arthur Cotton said he considered that Mr. Thornton's figures constituted a fair statement of the cost and revenue of the irrigation works, although the accumulation of interest should not have been added to the cost of some canals. He agreed with the lecturer that the ryots should share in the profits derivable from the extension of the works, and the most important fact to consider was that of the benefits to the community at large, and not the mere profit on outlay, which went to the Governments. He believed, however, that there was not one canal completed which did not pay a profit on its construction. A further point of importance was the means of cheap transit which the canals afforded. At the conclusion of the meeting the chairman (Mr. Andrew Cassels, member of the Council of India) presented a vote of thanks to Mr. Thornton for his interesting paper.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, May 8.—INDIAN LEGISLATION.—On the motion of Lord G. HAMILTON, the order for going into committee upon this Bill was discharged and the Bill withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, May 9.—PROPOSED NEW INDIAN BISHOPRIC.—Mr. CUST asked the Under-Secretary for India whether he had read the proceedings of a large meeting held at Calcutta, and presided over by the late Viceroy, at which a resolution was come to in favour of establishing an additional bishopric in India, and whether the Government would give the matter their favourable consideration.—Lord G. HAMILTON: The meeting alluded to by the hon. gentleman has attracted the attention of the Secretary for India, and I have to state that the Government would give their favourable consideration to the division of the present see, provided that the necessary funds for the endowment of the additional bishopric should be furnished from private sources.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, May 11.—THE NATIVE ARMY OF INDIA.—Lord G. HAMILTON informed Sir H. HAVELOCK that despatches had been received in reference to the condition of the native army of India, which embodied the opinions of Lord Northbrook, Lord Napier, and other distinguished persons, and though no organic changes were recommended there were various suggestions for increasing the efficiency of the force.

THE ROYAL TITLES ACT PROCLAMATION.—Sir H. JAMES rose, amid loud cheers from the Opposition, to move his resolution. Prefacing his speech with an assurance that he should not refer to the policy of the Royal Titles Act, Sir Henry explained that the matter which he had to deal with had arisen since the passing of that measure, and that his motion sought to establish the proposition that the exercise of the power conferred by the Act had not been sufficiently regulated and controlled by the declarations made by her Majesty's Ministers. Two distinct engagements had been made on the part of the Government—one, that the use of the title of Empress should be excluded from the United Kingdom, except in relation to certain diplomatic documents; and the other, and more important one, that the title should be localised in India, and be borne and used only in that country. The hon. member next proceeded to discuss the manner in which these engagements had been carried out by the Proclamation. That document declared that "on all occasions, so far as conveniently might be," the new title should be used, save and except in certain specified documents. It was for the Government to explain what were the "occasions" on which the title should be employed, but he contended that these words would leave it to every individual subject to use the full style and title, and that within this country itself in three out of every four documents bearing the Queen's true style and title that of Empress must be used. The Premier had told them that the title was meant for external purposes only; but instead of that they left it "carelessly about," and it would be used for internal purposes as well. Then there was the use of the title in the colonies; and he called upon the Government to state what they meant to do with reference to them; for it seemed that that matter was left in uncertainty, and this would be worse than the employment of the title in the whole of the Queen's dominions. In drawing his speech to a close, Sir H. James justified the policy of submitting his resolution by saying that if it had not been moved and discussed a Parliamentary duty would have been unfulfilled, and the responsibility of the Opposition would have been evaded; but whatever the result of the debate benefit must accrue. He then moved, "That having regard to the declaration made by her Majesty's Ministers during the progress of the Royal Titles Act through Parliament, this House is of opinion that the Proclamation issued by virtue of that Act does not make adequate provision for restraining and preventing the use of the title of Empress in relation to the internal affairs of her Majesty's dominions other than India."—Mr. Secretary HARDY was somewhat at a loss to know what the exact charge against the Government was. If it were that they had wilfully broken their promises or violated their pledges, and repudiated in one House declarations made in another, that would be dishonourable conduct and he was ready to meet it; but then it should be put in plain terms, and not left in ambiguity, as the present motion and the speech of its proposer left it. Neither charge, he contended, was applicable to the Government. They had, throughout, pursued but one course; and the only dispute between the two sides of the House was whether they had fulfilled what was expected on the one side, and whether on the other they had fulfilled what they intended. The hon. member had charged them with making declarations in a certain sense and not fulfilling them; and if that were true it might be a fair subject of criticism and censure. But the point was not what he understood those declarations to mean, but what the Government intended by them. A statement of the Lord Chancellor had been quoted, and Mr. Hardy argued that the Proclamation was precisely in accordance with what Lord Cairns said it should be, and that the Ministerial promises in this House had been literally carried out by it. With regard to the title in the colonies, Government had always consulted their wishes, and would do so in this instance; but in such dependencies as Ceylon and the Mauritius, seeing that the inhabitants were so closely allied with India, there was no reason why the title of Empress should not be used. Ministers had done by means of the Proclamation what they intended to do and what they promised to do both in the letter and in the spirit. As to the motion itself, it was a stick so rotten, without sap or substance, that it must break in the hands of those who used it.—The motion was supported by Mr. CHILDERS and Mr. PEASE, and opposed by Sir H. WOLFF, Mr. LOPES, and Mr. GRANTHAM.—Mr. BUTT announced that he would not take part in the division, adding that whatever the result of it might be, both the Act and the Proclamation were now irrevocable.—Dr. KENEALY opposed the motion, because it was dictated by a factious object, as did also Lord ELCHO and Sir R. PEEL.—Sir W. HARCOURT argued that whilst the Government had promised that the title of Empress should be localised in India, they had, by their Proclamation, really made it universal throughout the Queen's dominions, with certain exceptions in the United Kingdom; in fact they had partially localised it in England. What he wished to do was to record upon the journals of the House, which constituted the traditions of the nation, a final protest against what was a dangerous and mischievous innovation.—Mr. DISRAELI rejoiced to hear that the protest was to be a final one, but he, too, must protest against a single word like "localisation" being selected from a number of speeches to build a charge of breach of faith upon. His contention was that the language of the Proclamation did agree with the declaration of Ministers. They declared that the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland in her United Kingdom should always be styled officially and publicly by her ancient title, and that they would ensure that result by means which should not be baffled; and the terms of the Proclamation were in perfect consistency with that declaration. He maintained that the Government had given advice to her Majesty which was justified by every political consideration; and he should ask the House to decide that night the broad question whether they believed or not that the language of the Proclamation honestly and completely expressed the declarations that Ministers had made. Referring to the conduct of the Opposition, Mr. Disraeli said it had been described as "factious;" but if it were factious and the consequence of deep devices of many leaders and meetings, and even of round robins, all he could say was that the result of this opposition to the Titles Bill, which had now raged throughout the session, had not terrified or weakened the Government. Though he desired to live on good terms with his opponents, they would not be offended if, at a trying moment, he confided more in his friends of thirty years' standing. It was to them he now addressed himself; and he called upon them to vindicate the honour of the Ministers whom they had hitherto supported. (Mr. Disraeli then sat down amid loud and protracted cheering.)—The debate was closed with a speech by the Marquis of HARTINGTON, who vindicated the action of the Opposition.—A division was then taken, which resulted in the defeat of the resolution by 334 to 226, or a majority of 108 for Ministers.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, May 12.—TREATMENT OF COOLIES IN THE MAURITIUS.—Lord CARNARVON, in reply to Lord KIMBERLEY, made a statement as to the treatment of the coolies in the Mauritius, which Lord CARDWELL and Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY united in regarding as "highly satisfactory."

CALCUTTA STATUES.—Some remarks which appeared in a recent issue of this paper have called forth the following, for the most part, protests :—

I do not agree with you. I am very comfortable where I am—considering—and if I don't know why I am here the fault is more yours than mine. The sun does not affect me, and as to the crow and kite dirt, it is periodically removed by a liberal Government.

P.S.—An umbrella would be acceptable in the rains.

HARDINGE, late Governor-General.

If a grateful public would only remember my name, and put me in some conspicuous place, I should never tire of admiring myself, and the manner of making me famous. Let no one say a word against statues. What should I be without one? BENTINCK, late Governor-General.

It is hard to be boxed up like this, as though the public were afraid I might bring about another revolt if put in the open. And such a box! Why not bring my wretched statue, as they have my body, rather than thus insult the memory of CANNING, late Governor-General.

I fought hard to make a name, and some d——d fellow in the P.W.D. has damned it with a P.W.D. monument.*

OCHTERLONEY, late General.

With the exception of a certain carnal desire to be once more inside the Government House, opposite to which I am posed, I am happy and perfectly satisfied with my general resemblance to an itinerant preacher. Let those who sneer at this means of perpetuating a name suggest a cheaper and more durable one. LAWRENCE, late Viceroy.

If I don't feel that I belong to Cook's Circus my name is not plain James Outram. Artistic! there is not a bone in my body that does not ache, and the humiliation of having to sit on nothing, looking round to find the proper thing to sit on. It's monstrous. Take me off the cursed beast, or I'll join Madame Tussaud's wax-work exhibition. I will.

OUTRAM, late General.

It is not true that I am pointing nowhere. I am pointing at—never you mind what—not very far below Budge-Budge, where public business sometimes took me on Saturday. MAYO, late Viceroy.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.
SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 76 years for
INDIGESTION.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

LAMPLOUGH'S
PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.
Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."
SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.
SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.
For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 1; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, April 29; Calcutta, April 28.

THE latest mail news from Major Sandeman's party reported him as encamped at Kirta, a place in the Bolan Pass, about fifteen or twenty miles beyond Dadar. At that time the troops and the kafila people were suffering from cholera, which had been caught, it seems, not from the caravan, but in Kachchi. This served, of course, to detain Major Sandeman at Kirta for some little while, but in every other respect he had been very fortunate. The Bolan people were friendly, and the Khan of Kachchi's officials have been of great service. The caravans had been sent on to Kandahar with a good escort, together with their followers and a party of Marris and other Beluchis. They reached Quetta on the 17th April, and proceeded next morning to Kandahar. By that time the cholera had been left behind, after slaying more than thirty of the 800 men on escort.

THE arrangements for the conduct of affairs, owing to the Rajah's death, were progressing quietly in Patiala. Mr. Lepel Griffin, who had already returned to Simla, had left the existing machinery of the State working with perfect smoothness, although the question of a native regency or an English supervisor can only be settled finally by the Supreme Government. It seems unlikely, says the Pioneer, that there will be any European Superintendent appointed, nor will there, for the present, be any ceremony of installation. The young Maharajah can hardly be proclaimed in regular form—by name at least—because, for the present, he is without a name. According to Sikh custom, it appears that for the first five or six years of life a Sikh child is merely the baba, or at best is distinguished from other baba log by some nickname, afterwards dropped. Only when he is made a true Sikh by drinking some water that has been stirred with an iron knife, and eating certain mysterious sweetmeats of goor, and such like, is it thought worth while to mark him by a name. So for the present the princely power and wealth of the late Maharajah are the property of a little personage whom his friends may know to be the rightful heir, but would be puzzled how else to describe.

THE Englishman states on "authority which we cannot refuse to accept," that Sir Richard Temple has written to a member of the Civil Service, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the authorship of the Black Pamphlet, asking whether he is not its author. "We have not heard"—it continues—"that this gentleman has replied, and think it not unlikely that we may have to wait some time until we do hear." It is supposed that Sir Richard Temple has not moved in this matter without first conferring with the Government of India, but even if he has committed himself to such a piece of incredible folly, we may be sure that the Viceroy, at least, will take care to keep himself as clear as he can from the responsibility and odium of the prosecution said to be fixed upon by the Lieutenant-Governor.

ALL the members of the Viceroy's Council had arrived at Simla. Sir Henry Davies, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, was also there. It is understood that Sir Fred. Haines, the new Commander-in-Chief, has taken up with him to Simla the new scheme of reform for the Native Army, as amended in this country. This scheme provides, we hear, for the appointment of two additional English officers to each regiment, for raising the status of the native officers, and for a certain increase of the Sepoy's pay. When effect will be given to the new measure, if it has indeed been finally sanctioned, we are not informed, but everyone concerned was anxiously awaiting the needful announcement.

AN attempt, we learn, is being made at Indor to form an Eton for the sons of the Chiefs of Central India, like the Rájkumár College established a few years ago in Katiawár. Already there is a capital school in Indor, attended by a large number of young Thakurs and native gentlemen. In this school a separate class has now been formed for Chiefs, and it seems to be fairly appreciated. Holkar's eldest son, the Rajahs of Dewass, and Ratlam, the Nawab of Banda and his brother, and the Maharajah of Amjhira already attend this class; and there can be no doubt but that other young Princes will soon follow their example.

WE hear that urgent private affairs have suddenly called Mr. A. Colvin to Europe. During his absence, Mr. Bazett Colvin, the Sessions Judge, will officiate as Secretary to the Government of the North Western Provinces.

CHOLERA has been raging through Kashmir, especially in Srinagar, where a hundred and sixty-five cases, ninety-two of which ended fatally, had occurred in nine or ten days. It appears to be a bad feature in the present outbreak that the disease broke out in all parts of the valley almost simultaneously. The Maharajah had issued stringent orders for the cleansing of the city of Srinagar, and for the observance of such sanitary precautions as it was possible to carry out. Medicines and additional medical aid were despatched to Srinagar, and it is to be hoped that the measures adopted may be successful in staying the further progress of the disease. The Maharajah has further issued orders to prevent all egress into the Punjab from Kashmir. On our side also the road to Marri has been closed by the police, and a guard and native doctor posted there for the treatment of suspected cases.

ON the 20th of March last Trooper Rám Parsád, of the 1st Bombay Light Cavalry, was tried at Puna by court-martial for having "on or about the 28th day of May, 1857, at the mutiny of the Bengal troops at Nasirabad, shamefully abandoned the garrison of that station, which it was his duty to defend." Nothing more than this was proved against the culprit, but sentence of death was recorded against him nevertheless. Of course the sentence has been commuted by the Commander-in-Chief of Bombay, and Rám Parsád, during his fifteen years' seclusion in the Andaman Islands, will have leisure to brood over the relentless character of English justice, and to wonder if any lapse of time will ever avail to soothe the yet unslaked Nemesis of an epoch already nineteen years old. Surely there is something paltry and un-English in this hunting down of such very small game as an old Sepoy who, under sore temptation at a critical moment, abandoned his post. After nineteen years we can at least afford to forget old grudges against the rank and file, if not the leaders themselves of the mutineers and rebels of 1857.

"To remove all misapprehension" as to the meaning of the regulations which prohibit military officers from "making arrangements" amongst themselves in the matter of resignations of appointments, &c., the Governor-General in Council has now notified that "the offer and acceptance of any pecuniary consideration for the resignation of an appointment in the army, of whatever nature, is prohibited and illegal." Any infringement of this order, which applies to all officers of all Presidencies alike, will be punished by immediate suspension from employment of the officers concerned, "pending the result of a reference to her Majesty's Government, who have intimated their intention to deal with such infringements of the law and regulations of the service with the utmost severity."

Sir Richard Temple recently presided at the Family Literary Club in Calcutta, when a lecture was delivered by Miss Brink, a lady doctor, on "Women as Physicians." Some native speakers commenting on the lecture, held that Providence has ordained the inferiority of women. Sir Richard however expressed a manlier, if not a juster, view of woman's possibilities. He argued that it would be a happy thing for India if the women were educated. It had been said that "women excelled in many walks of science." This, in his opinion, they certainly did; but "he believed that, curiously enough, woman was found to excel in the art of government; and by the art of government, he meant public administration in the severest sense of the term." That women excel in petticoat government, is a fact which nobody can deny; and some women, especially in India, have governed their own dominions with remarkable success. But for the sake of all concerned, we hope that the ladies generally will be content to govern us indirectly, and leave "public administration" to get along as it can under the management of those inferior beings, men.

It was rumoured in Calcutta on Sunday week that the plague, which is raging in Baghdad, had appeared at Maskat, and fears were expressed that it may reach India through Bombay, which drives a considerable trade with the Persian Gulf. In that case it might make its way to Calcutta. Strict rules have been laid down regarding the quarantine of infected ships, but if the disease once gets a footing at the seaports, there seems reason to fear that it will spread like wildfire through the country, while the work of stamping it out will be difficult, if not impossible.

The accounts received at Rangoon on May 14 of the progress of the Grosvenor Mission state that the British escort proceeded beyond Bhamo on the 4th, and was expected to reach the frontier on the 9th current. A week's later advices state that the escort reached Manwain on the 11th, and met Mr. Grosvenor and his party there. All were well, and the health of the troops was good. The party were to leave Manwain on the 16th, and were expected at Rangoon on the 1st of June. The Burmese gave efficient help. The Hill tribes offered no opposition, and the Chinese Special Commissioner, seven Mandarins, and 400 Chinese troops escorted Mr. Grosvenor to Manwain. Colonel Duncan is at Bhamo.

The King of Burmah is said by latest advices to be employing a great number of people on earthworks at Mandalay. The cholera is raging fearfully among them. Rangoon papers say that the King's project of a railway from Mandalay to the British frontier is likely to be accomplished soon. An Italian company is to find the necessary capital and work the line till the King takes it over, he meanwhile guaranteeing interest at 12 per cent. The engineers are expected out next winter.

According to the Times telegrams from Calcutta, the Punjaub frontier was quiet up to May 14, and there was reason to hope that the disturbances in Kohat are now finally ended. General Pollock has returned to Peshawar. The Afridis lost several men in skirmishes with the troops. The Chiefs of the Hassankhel and Edurkhel tribes have pledged themselves to behave peaceably towards British subjects. Mr. Sandeman's Mission to Khelat seems to be producing a good effect, as another caravan has safely traversed the Bolan Pass without an escort. The Khan of Khelat has consented to meet Captain Sandeman at Mastang, and is believed to be anxious for a friendly settlement of all disputes.

From the same source we learn that the Survey party under Lieutenant Woodthorpe has returned to Calcutta, after successfully completing its work in the Naga Hills. The extent of territory now surveyed is 1,200 square miles. Owing to the savage nature of the tribes, and perhaps in part to their mistrust of our intentions, the work has been most difficult and dangerous, and has cost the country the lives of two able officers, Lieutenant Holcombe and Captain Butler, who were both murdered last year.

The Times Calcutta correspondent telegraphs the publication of some important correspondence between the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the Government of India. The Chamber argues that the critical state of the Money Market is mainly caused by the Secretary of State's suspension of monthly drawings and the uncertainty regarding his future financial measures. It therefore asks for a prompt resumption of Council bills, or the release of the Government Treasury balances, and an immediate declaration of a definite purpose, instead of the irresolute and fluctuating procedure of which it complains. The Government replies that the greater part of the bills lately drawn on Calcutta and Bombay are already paid under telegraphic advice. It points out that a large balance is maintained with the Bank of Bengal, which the Bank actively employs to the advantage of trade, and it adds that the Secretary of State does not think it convenient to announce future arrangements more definitely than he has already done.

A Bombay telegram of May 17 states that the Bombay Corporation has resolved to send an Address to the Queen congratulating her upon the assumption of the title of Empress of India.

The Times correspondent telegraphs from Calcutta that the Resident of Zanzibar has negotiated a Treaty for the abolition of the slave trade throughout the Saiyid's dominions. The slave routes are to be abolished, and the caravans for the purchase of slaves and slave-hunting in the interior are prohibited. Slavers coming to the coast and slave caravans arriving from the interior are to be seized, and the slave-dealers to be imprisoned.

From the same quarter we learn that a mail steamer recently brought to Bombay a number of cases invoiced as containing agricultural implements for China. Suspicion was excited at the Custom-house, and the cases, on being seized and examined, were found to be filled with munitions of war. The same Custom-house lately detected another extensive fraud—namely, that native dealers have been in the habit of procuring brandy bottles bearing well-known trade marks, filling them with country liquor, and shipping them to Calcutta and Madras as genuine goods.

Attempts are being made, according to the the same informant, to get up a public meeting in Calcutta, to urge that a Commission be appointed to inquire into the recent Famine Relief measures. The requisition to the Sheriff is said be largely signed. The subject has been much discussed lately, owing to the appearance of the now famous Black Pamphlet.

The following items were also telegraphed home yesterday:—

It is rumoured that Mr. Rivers Thompson, Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, is about to take leave, owing to ill-health, and that Lord Ulick Browne will succeed him.

The mail which arrived yesterday brought the Proclamation by the Queen on her assumption of the title of Empress. A meeting to vote an address of congratulation is to be held at Bombay on Wednesday. Elsewhere the announcement has been received without excitement. The natives appear to be profoundly indifferent.

Sir R. Temple arrived at Darjiling on Thursday after visiting Nepal. It is stated that Sindia will visit the Viceroy at Simla in June.

Owing to continued drought some fear has been felt of a failure of crops in Bengal. Timely showers last week removed all cause for alarm except in Orissa and Chota Nagpur, where rain is still wanted.

SIR SALAR JUNG, who arrived last Monday at Paris on his way hither, met with a fall on the staircase of his hotel, which has detained him for some days longer than he intended in the French capital. On Thursday he was still confined to his bed, but hoped to be able to leave for London at the beginning of this week. It is given out that he greatly regrets being detained in Paris, and thus debarred from accepting the invitations which had reached him from the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Sutherland, and other quarters. The various entertainments in his honour which were fixed for the latter days of last week have been postponed for the present.

FEW Native Statesmen have deserved so well of the English nation as the wise and able Minister who has so long guided the fortunes of the Haidarabad State. For twenty-three years the Nawáb, Sir Salar Jung, has governed the Nizam's Dominions with a firmness, energy, and prudence that merited the success they won. In 1853, when the affairs of Haidarábád were in the worst state of entanglement, Salar Jung was called to the helm of State. To him was owing the treaty by which the Nizam, Násir-ud-daula, ceded Berar to the Indian Government in pledge for the maintenance of his Contingent. To restore peace, order, and financial wellbeing throughout his master's realm was the difficult task which Salar Jung had, if possible, to achieve. In the midst of his efforts broke out the Mutiny of 1857. A new Nizam had just been seated on the Gadi, and Afzal-ud-daula bore us no goodwill. Haidarabad was filled with turbulent soldiers, plotting fanatics, and a rabble ripe for any mischief. In July an attack was made upon the British Residency, and the Prime Minister himself was threatened by armed mobs. But his courage and cool foresight — may we call it loyalty? — carried him and his country safe through an alarming crisis. Throughout the worst days of the Mutiny he kept the Nizam's unruly subjects well in hand, and his influence over the Nizam himself averted an outbreak which might have spread over the whole of Southern India. A part of the Nizam's contingent shared in the hardships and victories of British troops in Central India. For the services thus rendered to our cause Salar Jung was made a Grand Commander of the Star of India, and the Nizam, besides getting back a part of his ceded provinces, obtained the full remission of a heavy debt due to the Indian Government. The Nizam's attempt to remove his Minister from power in 1861 was baffled by British interference, and since then Sir Salar Jung has continued to fill the first place in the government of Haidarabad. His narrow escape from assassination in 1868 was hailed with joy by the nobles and people who had learned to appreciate the benefits of his rule. On the Nizam's death, in 1869, Sir Salar Jung became a leading member of the Council of Regency which still governs the State in the name of the present Nizam, now a boy about eleven years old. That Haidarabad has ceased to be a byeword for misrule and anarchy is mainly owing to the successful statesman who now for the first time has come across the seas to enjoy, we trust, a hearty welcome from his English friends.

IF Sardár Narain Singh has not been sufficiently punished for political offences committed in 1849, by twenty-seven years of forced residence in a remote corner of British India some 2,000 miles away from his native land, he must either have been a very black offender indeed, or else the Government must have very special reasons for not letting him go free. From Lord Selborne's statement of his case the other night, it appears that the Sardár must have been one of those Sikh leaders who paid the penalty of taking part in the war waged by Mulráj and Sher Singh against the English protectors of the Lahor Government. He appears at any rate to have been among the State prisoners who were removed from Lahor to Calcutta and afterwards to British Burmah. His first request for leave to return home in 1863 was refused, it seems, by the Punjáb Government on the simple plea of political inexpediency. The hope of release held out to him in 1872, in answer to his second application, was quenched two years later by a flat and final rejection of his renewed prayer. Meanwhile his behaviour in British Burmah seems to have won for him the good opinions of successive Commissioners and their subordinates, and for some years past his freedom has been limited only by the conditions of compulsory "internment" in Maulmain. It has even been proposed to make him a grant of land in British Burmah. But time and good treatment have not apparently diminished the exile's natural longing for his native land; and Narain Singh has therefore appealed to the generosity of the British Parliament. Lord Salisbury's answer suggests the hope that the Indian Government will yet reconsider their late refusal. Unless something heinous can be alleged against the Sardár, it is surely time to let him go wherever he pleases. It seems absurd to imagine that, after twenty-seven years of absence from his own country, he can any longer be a source of disquietude to the powerful and firmly seated masters of the Punjáb. Our tenure of India must be weak indeed if we are afraid to let a former insurgent, after so many years of certified good behaviour, spend the brief remainder of his days in the land from which he has so long been banished.

WE insert with pleasure the following record, furnished by a correspondent, of a long and worthy military career:—

Another of England's veterans has lately closed his eyes on this restless world, after seeing the changes of well nigh a century. Robert Joseph Debnam, Major, late of H.M.'s 13th Light Infantry, was born in 1781; obtained his Ensigncy in H.M.'s 65th Regiment in 1803; was in the campaign of 1804 in Gujeraut and Malwah under Colonel Sir John Murray; at the capture of Indore in September, 1804; at the siege of Bhurtpore in February, 1805; served in the campaign of 1812 in the Kattywar under Colonel Smith; at the siege of Noa Nugger; in the campaign of 1815-16, under Colonels East and Holmes, in Kattywar and Sind; Brigade Major to Colonel Milnes in this campaign; in the campaign of 1817 in the Deccan under Brigadier General Sir Lionel Smith; at the capture of Rangoon in May, 1824; and on the 11th of June at the capture of the stockade of Kemmendine under Sir Archibald Campbell. An early happy marriage in 1805 issued in a large family, whose requirements while at home obliged an exchange effected into H.M.'s 13th Light Infantry in 1822. Military prospects thus marred, having, with his regiment, joined Sale's Force in Affghanistan in 1840, at the surrender of Dost Mohammed and apparent close of the war, he retired. After nearly fifty years' residence in India he has died in his native land, beloved and revered, at a ripe old age, in perfect possession of strong mental powers and full of faith in the Word of God. The blessing of life was granted him to see his children's children to the fourth generation.

IF Sir Henry Havelock happens to have read the last number of Fraser's Magazine he will be able to take comfort under the outcry raised by his recent utterances in Parliament, from the support which an independent writer who has seen things for himself has there given to his own views about the rotten condition of the Indian Army. Mr. Meason-Laing, like Colonel Cory, does anything but confirm the official view that all is well from Dan even to Beersheba. He, too, witnessed those parades at Delhi of which the Special Correspondents wrote so glowingly, and he for one was not satisfied with what he saw and heard on that occasion. Even the English regiments, horse and foot, struck him as under-officered and under-manned. As for the native troops, to whose efficiency on parade the Prince of Wales and Lord Napier alike bore open witness, the writer in Fraser, as an independent critic with no special motive for prophesying smooth things, does not regard them as really fitted for any other purpose than parade show. Their few officers may by dint of hard work have brought their regiments into a high state of outward efficiency; but they are more than doubtful as to what would happen during a tough campaign. "They know," he says, "that the native regiments are much under-officered, and are fully aware that if they had to endure a severe campaign there would be no margin for casualties," while the Sepoys, for want of efficient leading, "would probably not go through the ordeal with much credit to themselves." Nor is the deficiency in white officers made up by the quality of the native officers who still, as a rule, by the time they have risen into the commissioned ranks, are fitter for a pension than for service in the field. As if to intensify the evils of the present system, the English officers are not only far too few, but they are continually shifted, through the working of the Staff Corps rules, from one regiment to another; "here to-day and gone to morrow." The older officers are often compelled to choose between mere subaltern s work and general idleness, while there is no reserve of young men to fill up the places that may soon be vacant. The whole system, in fact, is a miserable sham, which must fall to pieces under the first pressure of real need. And yet we are officially assured that no organic changes are required or contemplated in the working of the Indian military machine!

AT the meeting of the East India Association, fixed for tomorrow afternoon, a paper on "Indian Manufactures and the Indian Tariff" will be read by Mr. R. H. Elliott, at the Westminster Palace Hotel; Sir George Campbell, Bart., in the chair.—On Friday, the 26th inst., at eight P.M., Dr. George Birdwood will read a paper on "Competition and its Effects on Education," with especial reference to the Indian Services, in the rooms of the Society of Arts.

NATIVE COURT-MARTIAL.—On March 20 last a native general court-martial was assembled at Poona, to try Trooper Ram Pursad, of the 1st regiment of Light Cavalry, on the charge of having, on or about May 28, 1857, at the mutiny of the Bengal troops at Nusseerabad, shamefully abandoned the garrison of that station which it was his duty to defend. Every sepoy or trooper about to be tried has the option of choosing whether he will be tried by European or native officers. Trooper Ram Pursad naturally chose the latter, but it availed him nothing, for they found him guilty, and awarded the extreme penalty—death. This sentence, however, has been commuted by the Commander-in-Chief to transportation for fifteen years, as he is not shown to have taken part in any of the atrocities then so common.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE LATE COLONEL MEADOWS TAYLOR.

THE death at Mentone on May 13 of Colonel Meadows Taylor, on his way home from a short visit to India, is an event which none of his many friends or distant admirers can hear of without some feeling of regret. As soldier, statesman, scholar, and novelist, Colonel Taylor had long filled a leading place among our Anglo-Indian worthies, although the chief part of his Indian career belongs to neither of the Covenanted Services. It was not even as a soldier that he began the world. Born in 1809, young Taylor was trained to follow his father's mercantile calling. A good opening seemed to offer itself at Bombay, whither he sailed in 1824, a boy of fifteen. But when he landed, the firm was in difficulties, and a kind friend enabled the young clerk to exchange the pen for the sword by procuring him a commission in the Nizam's Contingent. Lieutenant Taylor's zeal and ability in his new service soon opened the door of civil preferment. In 1832 he was engaged in hunting down the Thugs in the Dakhan, a task for which his acquaintance with the people of the country and his mastery of their language especially fitted him. The knowledge he gained of that murderous brotherhood and their ways in the next few years bore literary fruit in magazine articles, followed by his first novel, "The Confessions of a Thug," which delighted a large circle of readers with its artistic handling of a repulsive theme, and its evidently truthful pictures of Indian life and scenery. During his stay in England, about 1840, Captain Taylor's pencil was not less fruitful of good things than his pen. To one of the illustrated annuals of that year he contributed some excellent pictures, while his turn for natural science enabled him to take part in the meetings of more than one scientific body. A second novel, "Tippoo Sultaun," appeared before his return to India in 1841.

In the following year Captain Taylor was placed in charge of the little State of Shorápur, a vassal of the Nizam, during the minority of the new Rajah. Under his wise management the old disorders soon died away, the most lawless tribes were tamed, the revenues of the State were doubled, and many large irrigation works completed. In 1853, when Shorápur was handed over to its Rajah, Captain Taylor became Deputy Commissioner of Naldrúg, one of the districts assigned to the East India Company, to whose service he thenceforth belonged. During the troublous times of 1857-58 he had political charge of all Berar. To keep order in that large province with no European troops at hand, and rebellion surging round him, was a task of no ordinary difficulty; but Captain Taylor proved equal to the occasion, and had energies to spare for aiding the advance of General Whitlock's column into Central India. After the defeat and capture of the rebellious Rajah of Shorápur, Captain Taylor was appointed to restore order on the scene of his former labours, and right well did he discharge his errand. But ill-health drove him to England in 1861, sped by the farewell prayers and blessings of those Marátha people among whom he had dwelt, wandered, and worked unceasingly for twenty years past. If his merits as a public servant were continually recorded in official papers, still more grateful to Colonel Taylor's feelings must have been the addresses in which his native friends and clients poured out their praises and thanksgivings, for the good work done among them by the Sahib whose help had certainly been granted by Heaven in timely answer to their prayers.

Thenceforth Colonel Taylor lived at home on the pension of his rank, devoting to literary and scientific studies the time and energies which his impaired health and the duties of a Dublin magistrate left at his disposal. His fertile and graceful pen produced from time to time a series of romances dealing with Indian history and native character, of which "Tara" and "Seeta" are the most noteworthy specimens. The former especially is a beautiful story, gracefully and dramatically told in a style that recals something of the classic purity of Walter Scott. To the splendid volumes of "The People of India" he contributed largely from his full stores of learning and practical knowledge, while other of his papers, written for magazines, displayed a thorough acquaintance with the art and archæology as well as the peoples of Southern and Western India. His "Day in Camp and Cucherry," which lately appeared in the Oriental Magazine, gives a full and interesting picture of the life which a hard-working Political has to lead from day to day, in the process of ruling a district many thousand square miles in area. His "Student's Manual of Indian History" is in many respects among the most useful books of its class.

In 1869 Colonel Taylor received the honour of a Companionship of the Star of India, a clear, if hardly adequate, acknowledgment of his high deserts. Towards the end of last year he set out on a kind of farewell visit to India, and had got so far as Mentone on his way home, when death unexpectedly closed his useful and exemplary career at the age of sixty-five.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—We have spent many millions upon unsound irrigation and navigation schemes in India, and burdened her people with taxes, in order to make good the money we had squandered. For a long time the public was kept in the dark as to the actual results of our schemes; and statements were made showing profits where losses had occurred. Official witnesses told the Indian Finance Committee, in 1871, that the Ganges Canal yielded 7 per cent., and works in Madras as much as 70 and 80 per cent. of their capital, annually. Later, however, these assertions were discovered to be incorrect and groundless; but as nobody was reprimanded for having made them and for having misled Parliament and the public, surprise can scarcely be felt at attempts being again made to create the impression that the works constructed by us have been financially successful, and that it is advisable to spend more public money in the same manner. But, after Lord Salisbury's declaration that his former opinion, as to its being justifiable and wise to go on spending money on similar works, was erroneous, and that the Viceroy of India and his councillors were of the opinion which he now entertained, we have, perhaps, a right to find fault with the attempts alluded to being made through a lecture delivered by an official of the India-office, and at a meeting presided by a member of Lord Salisbury's Council, as was done on the 5th inst. at the meeting held by the Society of Arts.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, DELTA.

AFFAIRS IN KHELAT.—III.

After this unhappy exploit Khelat was dismembered, as before mentioned. Shah Newaz was placed upon the throne, on the plea of legitimacy, as being the descendant of the senior branch of the family, viz., Mohubbut Khan, deposed a century before—and a British agent, Lieutenant Loveday, was posted at Khelat. The first efforts of the new Khan and the agent were devoted to the capture of the son of Mihrab Khan—who was actually then being sheltered by the very chiefs of Nooshky, Khasan, Mushki, and Baghwan, whose hostility had embarrassed his father throughout his reign. This was partly owing to the strenuous exertions of Gul Mahomed, and partly to the fact that the chiefs' hostility was not so much against Mihrab Khan personally as against constituted authority generally. The cause of Hoossain Khan was also greatly favoured by the injudicious severity exercised towards those tribes who at different times sheltered him. This materially conduced to the rebellion, in which the general discontent of the Beloches shortly culminated.

The Murrees and Boogtees are the most warlike of the Beloch tribes of the border. We first came in contact with them in 1838, when they harassed the march of our army across Gundava. In retaliation for this a force, under Colonel Bellamore, swept through their hills and cowed them for a time. Nevertheless, this renewed hostility necessitated the permanent occupation of their country in 1840, and thus brought about the explosion in Belochistan. For in May, 1840, Lieut. Clarke, who was returning with a small body of cavalry in convoy of the camels of a detachment under Captain Brown, that had occupied Kahun, the Murree capital, was attacked, and his command destroyed at the Sartoff Pass. Captain Brown was then besieged, and, after the disastrous failure of an attempt for his relief by Major Clibbron (who was entirely defeated at the Pass of Nuffoosk), was compelled to surrender, though on honourable terms. In the following month the Political Agent at Quetta, who was negotiating to engage the services of the Kakurs for the chastisement of the Murrees, was suddenly attacked at night by that very tribe, and beat them off with considerable difficulty. Almost at the same time the Brahoe chief of Mustoong, who was governing that district for Shah Shuja, initiated the revolt in Sarawan by cutting off the head writer of the Khelat Agency and twenty-five sepoys of his guard. He then called in young Hoossain Khan, who was accompanied by the chief of Karan, with whom he was then in hiding, and by the Darogha Gul Mahomed. The latter now took the management of the rebellion. He laid siege to Quetta in July, 1840, but, being beaten off after seven days' investment, turned his attention in August to Khelat itself. This was surrendered to him, together with the British agent and the British nominee, by the Jhallowan levies after a half hearted defence; and the young Khan thus again obtained possession of the throne of his ancestors. In this we only received the natural recompense of favouring and trusting rebels. Most justly does Mr. Masson remark, "It was peculiarly unfortunate, and what might and ought to have been avoided, that both in Belochistan and Affghanistan the traitors to the old order of things became the favoured and trusted adherents of the new."

The Beloches now proceeded to make a series of attacks upon our posts in Sind, and upon detachments of our troops marching across Gundava or through the Bholan Pass. Their defeats were, however, frequent, and their advantages slight and temporary. In one of these affairs the body of Lieutenant Loveday, the Khelat Agent, was recovered still warm, having just before been murdered, by Gul Mahomed's orders, to prevent his release. It was not till November, 1840, that we were able to assume the offensive, when General Nott reoccupied Khelat without resistance, Hoossain Khan taking refuge in the hills bordering on Gundava, whence he maintained his guerrilla warfare. He was at last surprised and utterly defeated at Kotrah in December, 1840, with the loss of 500 men; after which blow the Brahoes and Murrees of his following dispersed to their respective hill retreats. After long negotiations the Beloches were eventually induced to give in their adherence to the new order of things; and, in July, 1841, Hoossain Khan surrendered himself to Colonel Stacey at Khelat—on the hope being held out to him of eventual restoration to the throne. Before this result was attained, however, one more disaster had been experienced by our arms in the failure, with considerable loss, of an attack on the fort of Sebee, north of the mouth of the Bolan Pass.

On the 6th October, 1841, Hoossain Khan, who now assumed the style of the Nusseer Khan the Second, acceded to the throne, under a treaty which restored to Khelat Gundava and Mustung, on condition of allegiance to Shah Shuja (Shâl still remaining annexed to Cabul), and provided for Nusseer Khan's subjection to a British agent, for the admission of British garrisons and for the support of the pretender Shah Navaz. The death of Shah Shuja and our withdrawal from Cabul in the following year rendered this treaty a dead letter, and restored Shâl to Khelat, and our connection with Khelat affairs then ceased for a time. Nusser Khan being, however, but a boy, was no better able than his father to restrain the marauding tribes, and when the conquest of Sind brought us again in contact with the Murrees and Boogtees on our new trans-Indus frontier it soon became necessary to coerce them without reference to the Khan. In 1845, therefore, Sir Charles Napier penetrated to Kahur, the Murree capital, before mentioned, and Deyra that of the Boogtees, and thoroughly humbled these predatory tribes. Nevertheless, after 1847, when a regular administration was established on the Sind border, under General (then Major) Jacob, these tribes again became so troublesome that in 1854, when the Russian war was impending, and it was thought desirable to strengthen our influence on the western frontier, a treaty was concluded with Nusseer Khan, abrogating that of 1841, but renewing so much of its stipulations as provided for subordination to the British Government and admission of British troops. Nusseer Khan further engaged to (1) keep his subjects from plundering in our territory; (2) protect traffic through his territories; (3) reduce transit duties on merchandise by the Bolan and other routes to one shilling on every eighty pounds weight. In consideration of the "fulfilment of these obligations" a subsidy of £5,000 per annum was to be paid to Nusseer Khan.

Nusseer Khan was an able ruler. Warned by his father's fate, he remained on good terms with his chiefs, towards whom he exercised a judicious liberality, distributing among them, in compensation for transit duties he no longer permitted them to levy in accordance with the treaty, the subsidy received from the British. This subsidy was soon found by General Jacob to be quite insufficient both to compensate for the reduction of transit and safeguard dues, and to meet the outlay in stipends and jagers bestowed by the Khan, at General Jacob's instance, on the Murree and Boogtee chiefs, and the cost of posts established by him, under the same advice, at the headquarters of those tribes. General Jacob therefore applied that the subsidy should be doubled, but this was not done till after the lapse of some three years.

The ascendency obtained by General Jacob over the Khan raised the old jealousy in the mind of Gul Mahomed that had prompted him to the course of action resulting in Mihrab Khan's ruin and death. Times being now changed he could not inflame the Khan and the country against the British, but he could put Nusseer out of the way and replace him by a Khan with less British proclivities, so he poisoned Nusseer Khan in May, 1857, and procured the election of the Brahoe chiefs of Khodadad, the present Khan, half-brother of Nusseer—the rival candidates being his uncle and cousin, brother and nephew of Mihrab Khan, and Futteh Khan, brother of our nominee in 1839, Shah Newaz Khan—who was supported by the Chief of Kharan. We extended our support to the new Khan, without which he could not have long maintained himself against these rivals. In return for our support we claimed the right to advise, and caused the expulsion from the State of Darogha Gul Mahomed and the nomination as Minister of Shahghapi Wallee Mahomed, son of the Shahghapi (Chamberlain), who fell by Mihrab Khan's side at the storm of Khelat.

Before Gul Mahomed's expulsion he rendered the Khan a service after his own fashion—a repetition of his coup d'etat of 1825, in favour of Mihrab Khan, with the same result of putting the Khan and the chiefs in an attitude of permanent mutual hostility. In September, 1857, the chiefs who had recently elected Khodadad Khan assembled at Khelat, in pursuance of what is, at any rate in the Brahoe polity, a constitutional method of interference in the affairs of State. They wanted, no doubt, to obtain concessions from their nominee. Gul Mahomed, however, closed the gates of the town and bombarded them till they dispersed; and it was for this feat that he was promptly banished, under instructions from the the Bombay Government, and Wallee Mahomed nominated in his place. His influence, however, survived (and, indeed, he himself contrived ere long to return privately), and the breach between the Khan and the chiefs became irreparable.

The young Khan, before his accession, had never been beyond the limits of the private apartments; he naturally, therefore, gave himself up to the unrestrained gratification of his passions, whether for pleasure, oppression, or revenge. He led a debauched life, and took a violent dislike to the whole of the Chiefs, as their power imposed limits upon his own. He withheld the presents which his brother had given them yearly, both in accordance with old custom, and to recompense them for the loss of the transit and safeguard dues upon traffic they could no longer levy under the British Treaty. He rendered himself to some extent independent of their support by entertaining, with the subsidy received from us, a body of foreign mercenaries. In fact, the Khan gave the Chiefs undoubted grounds of complaint, and showed an utter want of tact and judgment in his manner of dealing with their untenable claims based upon an impracticable constitution.

Gul Mahomed gradually disappears from the scene after the date of his exile; he was very old, and probably withdrew himself from public life. As he did so the Shahghapi Wallee Mahomed, a very different man, came to the front. He, like the Darogha, was a Khanehzad, entitled hereditarily to high office, but not to the Ministry. Nevertheless, no hereditary minister was available—Mulla Hassan having died, apparently without issue, in the prison to which we consigned him in 1839, after the storming of Khelat, where full proofs of his treachery had been discovered. Consequently, the hereditary office having lapsed, the constitutional incapacity of Wallee Mahomed to hold the ministry did not affect him with the Brahoes, and, if the Khan could only have been persuaded to follow his guidance, British interference would not now be necessary.

The Murrees and Boogtees, for some years previous to 1857, had been kept quiet, partly by the terror of a coup made by the Sind

Horse, who slew or captured an entire body of 600 Boogtee raiders, and partly by the influence of Nusseer Khan the Second, exerted under the Treaty of 1854. In that year, however, they took advantage of the withdrawal of the garrison of the Punjab force upon their border which had been despatched to Hindoostan to aid in quelling the great rebellion, to ravage the southern portion of the Derajat. In 1858 the chiefs of Sarawan and Jhallawan, then in rebellion, were induced by the Political Agent's mediation to accept a promise of consideration of their grievances and to march for the reduction of Mekran then also in rebellion. On their return, no satisfactory settlement being afforded by the Khan, the Bombay Government determined to leave him to his fate. He, however, succeeded in tiding the matter over, and in inducing those chiefs to accompany him in an expedition against the Murrees, whom the Khan had been called upon by General Jacob to coerce after their raid above referred to. General Jacob at the same time urgently brought to notice that the subsidy of £5,000 had hardly enabled Nusseer Khan the Second to fulfil his engagements regarding the reduction of transit dues and the protection of traffic—much less was it adequate to enable the Khan to coerce his nominal subjects, the Murrees and Boogtees.

General Jacob died in December, 1858, but, the Khan having brought his expedition against the Murrees to a successful issue in March, 1859, his recommendations bore fruit shortly after in the concession by the British Government of an additional subsidy of £5,000. This was employed by the Khan, under direction of the Political Agent, in renewing with the recusant tribes the arrangements made by his predecessor, which had fallen through for want of funds. At the same time, the Khan was warned to keep on better terms with his chiefs, and not to waste the subsidy, which should be shared with them, in maintaining lawless mercenary troops. Matters now began to look promising, but ere long the hostages taken by the Khan from the Murrees and Boogtees, being neglected and ill-treated, fled suddenly one night to their hills. The tribes, notwithstanding, continued to behave fairly, with the exception of some outcast sections of the Murrees settled beyond the Murree hills, who had not been reduced to submission in 1859.

OUR FRONTIER POLICY.

The Pioneer does not deny that the Sind frontier officers, Sir Henry Green, Sir William Merewether, and others, have explored the country to the east and west of Jacobabad, as far as Kahan, the Murree headquarters, and that the Bolan Pass was perfectly explored and surveyed during the occupation of Kandahar in 1839-42. But this fact in no way lessens the value of the explorations recently made, which have proved that the Harand and Sakhi Sarwar Passes, dividing the Suliman Range in the Dera Ghazi Khan district, open out direct and easy routes to the countries lying west of that district, and to Dadar at the foot of, and Kirta half way through, the Bolan Pass. This discovery is valuable, because two large armies could leave the Bolan Pass at Dadar and Kirta, and march direct on the Punjab. A third army, taking the route from Pesheen to Tull Chotiali, could enter the Khetran Valley by the Hun Pass, and debouch on the plains of the Punjab at Sakhi Sarwar and Harand. A fourth army might take the straight road through Katchi from the Bolan Pass to Shikarpur and Sukkur. Hitherto it has been a popular belief that an army adequate to the invasion of India must pour its masses through the Khyber or Bolan Pass, or both, and that the passes leading into the Punjab at Dera Ghazi Khan were very difficult. The explorations made by Major Sandeman have proved that the routes to Shalkot (Quetta) and to Tull Chotiali from the Punjab are perfectly open. In fact, the route to Tull Chotiali from Dera Ghazi Khan, and thence to Pesheen and Kandahar, is as accessible and as easy as any other route, not excepting the one from Sukkur to Quetta. On a former occasion an exploring party marched from Dera Ghazi Khan to Tull Chotiali. When the party were in the hills, minute inquiries showed that the route from Tull Chotiali to Kandahar is through a very open and well-cultivated country; while from Harand to Tull the country is not only open, but part of the route lies through the prolific Khetran valley. Along the whole of this route there is plenty of grass, water, and wood for a large army or armies. Certainly it seems worth while to try and obtain a perfect knowledge of the country lying between us and Kandahar. We ought to be hurried into no hasty occupation of the Khelat highlands, because there is not a more independent people in all the East than the Afghans, or one with a stronger country. We believe no foreign Power, whether English or Russian, can hold Afghanistan without being hated by the Afghans. We should not therefore anticipate an advance beyond our present frontier, but we should be strong within it, and ready to move anywhere in advance should urgent necessity arise for it. We have told our neighbours that our policy is not to advance or make additional conquests. Let us prove the fact by avoiding any enlargement of our boundaries. Our permanent establishment at Quetta would make our neighbours in Afghanistan and Beluchistan, and Persia and Russia, feel that British professions were insincere. Let us help the Afghans and Beluchis to believe that our interests, as regards invasion from the west, are really one with their own. This once felt and believed, they will allow us free intercourse with their countries, and we shall then be in a very far stronger position than the possession of such barren spots at Quetta would make us. It is not difficult really to steer a safe course between the policy of the Russophobists—who would have us launch our power into Central Asia to avert contingencies of a very remote nature—and the policy of indifference to anything taking place beyond our own ring fence.

NATIVE FEELING ABOUT LORD NORTHBROOK.

The Pioneer asks why it is that, as was truly stated by Mr. Inglis in the course of an able speech, the retiring Viceroy possesses the confidence and the esteem of the native community to a greater extent than any of his predecessors, not excepting—so far as Bengal is concerned—Lord Canning himself, while his own countrymen in India generally feel no enthusiasm about him. We use the word enthusiasm advisedly. It is not that Lord Northbrook is unpopular with the English community in Calcutta; his merits as a man of business, as a hard conscientious worker, are fully recognised; his financial administration is held to have been a success; his retirement at the present moment is regretted as likely to be injurious to the financial interests of the country; but there is no strong feeling about him, and men do not consider that a memorial in his case is called for. The natives, on the contrary, would give him, and probably will give him, two memorials instead of one; their admiration for him is unbounded, and their gratitude deeply felt and thoroughly sincere. Who are right, and why this difference? We incline to the belief that, on the whole, the natives are nearer to the truth, and that their conception of the merits of Lord Northbrook's administration is the juster of the two. One fact stands out patent. When the present Viceroy came to India, and for some time before, the country was in a condition of disquiet. The income-tax, whether owing to inherent defects, or to the manner in which it was worked, had produced very great discontent. The announcement by Lord Mayo that a sum of 80 or 90 millions sterling would have to be borrowed for public works of kinds, had added to the feeling of alarm. There was a vague impression among the people that they were driven too fast, that they were being experimented on; there was apprehension of fresh taxation, and worse than all, there was a want of confidence in the financial administration. The doubling of the income-tax in the middle of the year, one of those blunders which are worse than crimes, had given rise to sentiments of much doubt and suspicion, not to be easily allayed. Lord Northbrook leaves India in a state of perfect calm and contentment. The difference in the condition of public feeling as existing at his advent and at his departure, is in itself an incontrovertible proof of the general success of his home administration. We are not imputing blame to Lord Mayo or to his acts; we are not reviewing his reign, or we could show that the state of feeling existing in India four or five years ago was the outcome of a policy which had been followed for many years. We are merely stating facts which cannot be gainsaid. Lord Mayo himself had declared that "a feeling of discontent and dissatisfaction existed among every class, both European and native, on account of the constant increase of taxation which had for years been going on." If he, from his position the best judge, was right in his belief that "the continuance of that feeling was a political danger, the magnitude of which could hardly be over-estimated," we defy impartial man to say that great, very great credit is not due to the Governor whose four years of administration have resulted in the complete extinction of that feeling. Why, then, has not the European community recognised this truth as well as the native? The answer is, it has recognised it but vaguely, unconcernedly, as one recognises a truth in which one is not directly interested. The alarm felt by Europeans referred to in the above quotation from a writing of Lord Mayo's was not a personal alarm, so much as the counter effect of the feeling known to exist among the people. The distinction is great between the man who apprehends a disagreeable contingency to himself and the man who apprehends merely the effect which such contingency may have on his neighbour's mind and temper. It is the distinction between a first and second cause. Besides, the European looks further than the native. To him, the removal of the income-tax in India is not a subject of unmixed congratulation. He knows and laments the injustice of the comparative exemption of the moneyed classes from all taxation, and he sees therefore a good side to the one tax which these classes cannot escape. The abolition during Lord Northbrook's tenure of office, of the hated non-agricultural cess in Bombay and of the obnoxious house tax in Madras, in no way affected the European community of Calcutta, who as a body are even ignorant of these changes; but the educated natives of Bengal recognised the influence of the new principles of financial administration, and felt increased confidence in the man under whose sway the most obnoxious taxes in each part of the country were being given up one after another.

STATION TALK.

LAHOR, April 17.—It is with sincere regret that I have to confirm my telegram despatched on Saturday, and to tell you of the death on Friday, April 14th, of Mohender Singh, G.C.S.I., Maharajah of Pattiala, a young prince of good parts, of considerable power of character, and, on the whole, a ruler of great promise. On Sunday week, Mr. Lepel Griffin, Secretary to the Punjab Government, was at Pattiala on a visit to the Maharajah, and it is stated that at that time his Highness was not well, and his liver was supposed to be somewhat out of order, though no dangerous symptons were either observed or apprehended. On Thursday he went out on a hunting expedition, and early on Friday morning he was seized while out on his elephant with a fit of epilepsy, and before any competent medical assistance could be obtained, died at a small village about nine miles from the capital. The whole affair seems to have been very sudden, and had it taken place in less civilised times, would certainly have been regarded with much suspicion. As it is, I fancy the Government will think it right to have an inquest under the superintendence of an English surgeon. The late Maharajah was too liberal in many of his views, and took upon himself too large a share of the administration of his State to have been popular with those who usually possess, and more usually abuse, the chief power in a native State. He was a fine, powerful-looking man, erect and well-built, a keen sportsman, a good shot, and four-in-hand driver, and unusually liberal in most of his views. Under any circumstances, his sudden death is much to be deplored. He had always been willing to co-operate with the Local Government in any scheme for improvement; he contributed largely to canals, established a line of telegraph from his capital to the nearest railway station, planned a line of railway of similar extent—about twenty miles—established factories under European superintendence at Pattiala, contributed nearly four lakhs of rupees to the Punjab University College, and took a great interest in his own Educational Department, which flourished under the well-known master, Ram Chunder. Christians or Mohammedans were held equally eligible for office by this liberal-minded Sikh, who was in this respect a model for many more civilised rulers. Mr. Gore Ouseley, Commissioner of Umballa, and ex-officio political officer attached to the Pattiala State, went to the capital on Sunday, and Mr. Lepel Griffin left Simla for Pattiala shortly after the receipt of the news on Sunday. Mohender Sing was only twenty-four years of age, and his eldest surviving son, who was born in May, 1872, will not accordingly complete his fourth year for a few days. Under these circumstances, with a minority of some ten or a dozen years to look forward to, it becomes extremely important to make suitable arrangements for a regency. Apropos to local papers, I see we are to have another at Lahor. We have indeed heard vaguely for a long time, more definitely of late, about an invasion from Simla, and now I see we have received a prospectus of a limited company to establish a new Civil and Military Gazette "here below," with a capital of Rs. 150,000, in fifty-rupee shares. I fancy it will be somewhat difficult to collect the money, though of course it is rather premature as yet to offer any opinion upon the subject, the whole thing being still pretty nearly in nubibus, if not in montibus. The weather is still holding up, and though most of us have hung our punkahs, very few of them have yet been pulled, and our ice, which has been distributed since the 15th, is scarcely wanted. I am sorry to say I can hear no further trustworthy news regarding the cholera in Kashmir; and I think, considering the time of year, when so many people are about to visit the Valley, they must be at present in a state of unhappy uncertainty as to the prudence of starting—fearing to advance, and just unwilling to give up so pleasant a holiday trip—that the authorities who have an English political officer in Kashmir and a Kaskmir Vakil at headquarters might let the public know something about the sanitary condition or prosperity of the Valley. Mr. Lepel Griffin returns to Simla to-morrow. Mr. Baden Powell has arrived at Bombay, and returns to Lahor in a few days to again take up his duties as Conservator of Forests. Mr. Boulnois, Judge of the Chief Court of the Punjab, will probably take his leave from the 1st of July; the changes consequent upon his temporary absence are still uncertain. Colonel Young, R.E., will probably take leave in June, in which case Lieutenant-Colonel Hall, now Deputy Commissioner of Amritsar, will probably officiate for him.

CALCUTTA, April 16.—To the two public meetings which have recently been held here in honour of the living, there succeeded one this week to evince respect for the memory of our late Bishop, and to commemorate his life and labours by something more useful than a statue. Bishop Milman's physical ordinance and strength, and his capacity for work, had passed almost into a proverb; yet even he succumbed at length in the conscientious discharge of the duties of an overgrown diocese. Sir Richard Temple, in his speech at the meeting, showed by a forcible illustration the absurdity of expecting one man to do the work imposed on the Bishop of Calcutta. "I would ask," he said, "what would be thought if the Bishop of London had at one time to proceed to St. Petersburg to hold a confirmation, and thence to proceed to Constantinople to consecrate a church, and from there to Sicily to hold an ordination and thence again to Seville to inaugurate a public charity. These may be considered impossible suppositions and analogies, but they are not really absurd when applied to the Bishopric of Calcutta, for they express without exaggeration the extreme character of the travels which the Bishop has to undergo." This should bring home to those in England, who are interested in Church matters, the necessity of supplying funds to carry out the purpose for which the meeting here was held—the establishment of a Bishopric at Lahor—especially as it appears to have been the late Bishop's favourite scheme, for the furtherance of which, as much as, if not more than, the sake of his own health, he was about to visit England. The meeting at which Lord Northbrook presided was well attended, and the speakers were, besides the Viceroy, Mr. Justice Macpherson, the Rev. Edgar Jacob, the late Bishop's Chaplain, Sir Richard Temple, and Archdeacon Baly. The committee appointed to carry out the resolutions passed, ensures all being done that can be done by the limited Christian community in India. Lord Lytton's assumption of the office of Viceroy and Lord Northbrook's departure are things of the past. I see you have already had a full account of the coming, so I need say nothing about it. There seemed to be singularly little enthusiasm or excitement; at least where I was, near the High Court, there was not a sound, and one could have counted the native spectators without much trouble. Lord Lytton's unexpected speech has been a good deal commented on, but always with expressions of satisfaction at its frank and open tone, and the earnestness which runs through it. After the first feeling of surprise at the innovation, one wonders that no previous Governor-General or Viceroy should have met his future colleagues with an outspoken greeting, and an expression of his feelings in the present and his hopes for the future. Lord Northbrook, Miss Baring, and suite left yesterday morning without much demonstration save from the guns in the Fort. They started from Prinsep's Ghat in the Sir William Peel, which took them down to Diamond Harbour, where the Tenasserim awaited them. May they have a pleasant voyage! —Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR R. TEMPLE.—The tour establishment of the Lieutenant-Governor's camp has left for Darjiling. Mr. Mangles, Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the Judicial Department, left on the 20th April; the Lieutenant-Governor himself followed on the 24th.

LIGHT RAILWAYS.—The Himalaya Chronicle says the Government are so satisfied with the success of the light railway to Hattras that a similar line viâ Roorkee and Hurdwar to Dehra has actually been sanctioned. It has not been determined whether the line will join at Deobund or Saharunpore, but a line is to be constructed.

PROMOTION IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—A meeting of Civil Engineers in the Public Works Department was held at Agra on Monday, April 17, to discuss the state of promotion in the service. The general opinion was in favour of action through the standing committee in Calcutta; and that the Government should be requested to obtain an early decision from the Secretary of State about the memorial of 1871, which asked for improved rules for pension. If these were granted, it was thought that a steady flow of promotion would be the wished-for result.

A FREE HOSPITAL IN BHOPAL.—On the 6th April, at the request of her Highness the Begam of Bhopal, G.C.S.I., Colonel Willoughby Osborne, C.B., laid in the city of Bhopal the foundation-stone of a free hospital, to be built in commemoration of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's visit to India. The site is an excellent one, healthy and convenient, and the building will be a two-storied one, one wing being for males, the other for females. The ceremony of laying the stone took place in the presence of the Nawab, Sadik Husen, husband of the Begam, and one of the principal nobles. The estimated cost of the building is Rs. 30,000, and the Begam has signified her intention of having a duly qualified lady doctor at the head of the female department as soon as it shall be completed.

FORGING COINS.—Certain kanjars residing in the district of Barabunki have been in the habit of forging false coins, and passing them for genuine ones in different parts of the country. Some time ago a number of these men went towards the Nepal terai on the pretence of selling goats, &c., and passed for lawful currency a number of these coins, which gradually found their way into the Nepal territories. The matter gradually attracted the notice of the Nepal authorities, who, we read, made a representation on the subject to the British Resident. The latter wrote to the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, who issued orders for strict and careful investigations to be made and offenders to be brought to justice. The delinquents were traced to a village in the district of Barabunki, and both men and women were caught red-handed in the act of forging coins by a policeman in disguise. Some arrests were immediately made, and, after trial before the Commissioner of Lucknow, one sonar and one brahmin were sentenced to ten years' rigorous imprisonment each.

SCHOOL FOR INDIAN GIRLS.—Lord Northbrook has given a donation of Rs. 250 in aid of the proposed school for young Hindu ladies, which is intended to fill up the void created by the closing of Miss Akroyd's school on the departure of its honorary secretary, Mrs. Phear. His Lordship, in the letter enclosing the amount of his donation, expressed his deep interest in the movement to establish the school.

LORD NORTHBROOK'S ADMINISTRATION.—The late Viceroy is said to have taken away with him printed copies of the correspondence and proceedings relating to the Baroda affair, the Burmah mission, &c. It is inferred that he intends, on reaching home, to make some attempt at answering the criticisms, public or official, to which his share in these transactions exposed him while his mouth was closed by the responsibility of office here. If he really entertains such an idea, we think that a recommendation to abandon it would be the best counsel that could be given him. His Lordship, to his credit be it said, has very little of that kind of skill which can make the worse appear the better reason—the errors of his administration are patent—and in the Secretary of State he will find an opponent who, if provoked by any attack upon himself, may be depended upon to expose them with merciless severity.—Friend of India.

SIR R. TEMPLE AND THE "BLACK PAMPHLET."—The Englishman states that Sir R. Temple is about to take some very unusual proceedings, which our contemporary describes in the following paragraph :—It has been said for some time that Sir Richard Temple had it in view to take proceedings against the writer of the "Black Pamphlet," but we could not bring ourselves to credit the rumour. Now, however, we have authority, which we cannot refuse to accept, for saying that his Honour has written to a member of the Civil Service, whose name has been of late mentioned in connection with the pamphlet, asking whether he is not its author. We have not heard that this gentleman has replied, and think it not unlikely that we may have to wait some time until we do hear, but our readers will be interested to know so much as we have told them. It is supposed that Sir Richard Temple has not moved without having first communicated with the Government of India, but we may be sure that the Governor-General will take care to keep himself as clear as he can from the responsibility and odium of such proceedings as the Lieutenant-Governor is seeking to initiafe. Nor must it be forgotten that—to quote the analogy of an earlier famine—another Pharaoh has arisen, who knows not our Joseph. It is not unlikely that he may see things in a different light from his predecessor, who was so fully identified with the whole famine policy.

CHOLERA IN KASHMIR.—"I am sorry," says the Lahore correspondent of a contemporary, "to be obliged to give a decidedly bad account of affairs in Kashmir. The cholera, which at first seemed to be confined to Srinuggur, has now made its appearance in every part of the valley, and is of a somewhat virulent type. The Maharajah is said to be making such endeavours as he can to check the disease, but Kashmir would take a good deal of cleansing, and the cholera is a rude foe to fight. Unfortunately Dr. Morice, the English Civil Surgeon, has not yet arrived, though I hear he has started, or is about to start. Considering that it is over a fortnight since the sanitary condition of the valley has been known here, and especially as there seemed at first to be, for want of a competent medical authority, a doubt as to the real character of the disease, one would think the Government might have hastened Dr. Morice's movements. Meanwhile egress from the valley into the Punjab in the direction of Murree has been stopped, and a police guard and a hospital assistant stationed on the Kohallut bridge. I do not know if anything has been done at Bhimber or Sealkote. I am sorry to say that the cholera is not entirely confined to Kashmir, for there have been one or two fatal cases in the Delhi and Gurgaon districts. These, however, it is to be hoped, are merely isolated cases, and I believe there have been no others in the province. But holiday trips to Kashmir are clearly out of the question."

HOLKAR'S LAST FREAK.—Students of political economy have always something to learn. We commend the following wrinkle to the notice of those in high places who contemplate startling designs for the financial policy of the new régime under Lord Lytton. A rumour reaches us from Indore that H.H. Maharajah Holkar, reviewing his late reckless expenditure in the entertainment of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales with that feeling of remorse which is the offspring of extravagance, has hit upon a plan which, while it promises to repair his shattered resources, is not calculated to promote unmixed sensations of joy among those who are destined to be the recipients of his generosity. It is said that H.H. has determined to give all his establishments, his revenue, judicial, and ministerial officers, his army, his household servants, in fact, every one employed in his State, an advance of six months' pay. No great hardship in that—no ; but mark the clause attached to the boon : the acceptance of this advance is compulsory, and it is subject to a deduction of ten per cent. for interest. Here is a master stroke of financial acumen ! Half a year's payments advanced, ten per cent. interest secured. We believe that this proposal is made with many protestations of benevolence and consideration on the part of the wily monarch of Indore. For ourselves we can only hope that the report is untrue, for we should regret to see H.H. Maharajah Holkar, G.C.S.I., sinking the Prince in the bunnia, and laying himself open to a charge of extraordinary meanness despotically enforced.—Pioneer.

ARRIAN'S BLUNDERS.—The translation of the "Indica" of Arrian is concluded in the April number of the Indian Antiquary. We wonder whether any special correspondent, who for the last six months may have been engaged in getting up India, and putting it in a popular form for credulous English readers, ever thought of gleaning information from the old Greek writer. Arrian would have supplied abundant material for sensational descriptions, not much inferior in point of accuracy to the ordinary run of facts and real occurrences which are picked up by unwary visitors from obliging informants. He could have told, for instance, a good deal that was remarkable about the fauna of India. Concerning elephants, he recounts that some have been known, when their riders were slain in battle, to have taken them up and carried them away to burial ; others have covered them when lying down with a shield ; and others have borne the brunt of battle in their defence when fallen. The prescription for the cure of an elephant's wound is, according to Arrian, to apply roast pork. As to tigers, Arrian has gathered from the writings of Nearchus a wonderful notion of their size and power. Nearchus, we cannot help fancying, was somewhat of a simpleton to believe all that, as he says, "the Indians told him." He learnt, for instance, that tigers equal in size the largest horse ; that they are in the habit of leaping upon the heads of elephants, and strangling them with ease. Nearchus himself never saw one of these marvellous beasts, any more than he did the gold-digging ants, which he learnt were bigger than foxes, and regularly dug for gold. When he touches on snakes he is not much more accurate. He says that it is certain the Indians can cure snake-bites, although none of the Greek physicians could. Alexander accordingly kept Indian doctors in his camp, and ordered anyone who was bitten to repair to the Royal tent and be healed. He gives, however, no statistics about the number thus cured, and we fancy Dr. Fayrer would not be convinced by these positive assertions.—Pioneer.

CHOLERA AT BELLARY.—We hear from Bellary that cholera has appeared among the 43rd Regiment there. It is hoped that it is not of the virulent Bellary epidemic type. Probably they are sporadic cases, imported from Kurnool or elsewhere. The heat at Bellary, we are told, is intolerable, and, adds our correspondent, "everything is dried and burnt up." The Bellary people have been importing ice from Bombay at three annas a lb.—Madras Times.

DEATH OF MR. BAINBRIDGE.—Mr. A. C. Bainbridge, C.S., Assistant Commissioner, Rangoon, and lately officiating as judge of the Small Causes Court, died, after only two days' illness, on the 11th April, of "black fever" with choleraic symptoms. He was only twenty-six years of age, was greatly respected by all with whom he came in contact, and his sudden decease, the Rangoon Mail says, has cast a gloom over a large circle of acquaintances and friends.

SUDDEN DEATH OF AN OFFICER.—Major A. R. Oakes, of the Madras Staff Corps, on general duty at Bangalore, died suddenly at that station on Monday, April 24, and was buried on the Tuesday following with full military honours. Major Oakes had been ailing for some time, but such a speedy end was not anticipated. He died of an attack of apoplexy. Major Oakes entered the army in December, 1855, and the Staff Corps in September, 1866.

A FATAL MISHAP.—A murder, arising out of an innocently committed outrage upon native superstition, is reported by a contemporary from Akyab. Three Europeans, engineers in the employ of Messrs. Bullock Brothers, were on their way to see a friend, and while walking along found a thread across their path. This thread the villagers supposed would keep cholera from their hamlet so long as it remained intact; but being ignorant of the superstition, the Europeans in question thoughtlessly broke it; the result was that the villagers attacked them, and though two escaped with only a few bruises, the third, Phillips, received such terrible wounds that he was carried into Akyab insensible, and died next day.

NATIVE RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS.—The Madras Athenæum states that the Government have appointed a committee to frame a Bill for regulating Native Religious Endowments in the Madras Presidency, with a view to prevent misappropriation of the proceeds of such endowments. Sir W. Robinson, K.C.S.I., has been appointed President of the Committee, and he is associated in the work with the Advocate General and several native gentlemen. The subject is a very important one, and if the work of the Committee be properly performed, the result must be conducive to the protection of a good deal of property which, it is believed, is now being frittered away

BASTAR.—We learn from the Madras Mail that the so-called Dewan of Bastar, who has been the great cause of the quarrel now going on in that country between the Rajah and his people, went for a long while under the name of the Kabadar. He is a comparatively young man, of the Golla (shepherd) caste, and was brought up in the palace of the Rajah. The latter has always shown an extravagant affection for him, and has treated him with such an amount of respect as to greatly offend his own family. The result has been that the half-educated young fellow has had his head turned and has committed numerous acts which would not be tolerated in a well-governed country.

MYSOR.—The official report on the probable scarcity in the Mysor province states that unless there be a failure of the early rains of the present year the scarcity is not likely to be very severe. The report continues as follows:—"At the same time it must be expected that the present prices, which are high, will rise still higher during the next three months, and much difficulty must necessarily be felt among the poorest classes of the people who are dependent upon daily wages for their support. It will, however, probably meet all the requirements of the place if relief works are opened wherever pressure is felt in this direction, and application will accordingly be made to the Government of India for a special grant of funds to be devoted to this purpose."

LATEST FROM THE ANDAMANS.—In the absence of other news I may as well give you a rather good anecdote from the "Andamans," which you may rely upon as authentic. Some months ago (it is well not to be too particular) a certain civilian, residing there in Government employ, and holding a very fair position, realised the truth that "it is not good for man to be alone," and in the absence of other eligible maidens pitched upon a "dusky daughter of Ind." for his future partner. Nothing loth, the lady paid a ready ear to his wooing, and arrangements were speedily made for marriage in church according to orthodox form. Everybody within reach attended the interesting ceremony, and during the service the minister asked the lady in due form "wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" to which she audibly replied, with a most expressive shake of the head, Bahutal achcha sahib—a reply which was too much for many of the congregation, who had to beat a precipitate retreat. It is almost superfluous to add that the minister gently corrected the gushing damsel, and under his guidance the ceremony was brought to a successful conclusion. Not so bad for the "secluded Andamans," eh!—Madras Times Correspondent.

THE LATE CAPTAIN MORANT.—The Sikandrabad correspondent of the Times of India, speaking of Captain Morant, who committed suicide the other day at Vellor, says:—"He commenced life as a Subaltern in the Royal Scots, otherwise designated Pontius Pilate's Guard. Demortuis nil nisi bonum is an excellent motto when no possible good can be served by violating it. For some reason or other Mr. M. retired from the regiment, and simultaneously from the service. He then came to Hyderabad, as many an ex-British officer has done before him, and entered the service of 'Our Faithful Ally the Nizam.' He held the office of Judge Advocate-General of the Reformed Troops. The pay was fair and the work by no means severe. But a difference of opinion arose between the old Judge Advocate-General and the new Commander-in-Chief, Major Neville. Naturally, and very justly, I believe, the subordinate went to the wall. Deprived of the means of earning his daily bread, Mr. M. cast about for some other form of employment. But he was pretty much in the position of the ex-steward mentioned in Scripture, and a more distressing position for a man of education and presumed refinement to be in it would be difficult to imagine. At length, through the kind exertions, it is said, of the General commanding the station, a situation was found for him, though of what nature I have no information, He was on his way to take up the appointment when the catastrophe we are now lamenting occurred. Poor fellow!! La farce est jouée, tirez le rideau may have been among his last words. His fate has thrown a feeling of sadness over all here who knew him even by sight only. Mrs. Morant died a few months ago at Saugor, we believe.

THE LATE FATHER F. MONCOURIER.—We regret to announce the death, at Vellore, early on Easter Sunday morning, of the Rev. F. Moncourier, S. J. of the Pondicherry Mission. Father Moncourier had been for some time past in indifferent health and latterly a low fever supervened, to which he succumbed. His death took the people of Vellore quite by surprise, for only on the day previous, though apparently very weak, he performed service as usual, and his appearance then did not give sign that death was so near at hand. Father Moncourier, a native of France, has been for thirty-one years in India, having arrived in 1845, and was consequently at the time of his death one of the oldest, if not the oldest, priest in the Indian mission, though his age was only fifty-four years. He had served almost all his time in Vellore, where he had by his energy built a neat little chapel, and established a convent, which was only recently shut up after the last outbreak of cholera, and where his good and amiable qualities, his unaffected piety and charitable disposition endeared him to one and all, Catholics and Protestants alike. So simple was he in his habits, and so scrupulous in adhering to the ordinances of the Church to which he belonged, that even in the latter period of his illness, during the season of Lent, he persisted in rigorously observing the quadragesimal fast, living but upon one meal a day, which consisted of nothing more than a little bread and onion soup or broth, and this he did in spite of the remonstrances of his medical attendant, who invariably urged upon him, but in vain, the necessity of taking good nourishment as the only means of prolonging life; and this rigorous fast, it is believed, must have hastened his death. Father Moncourier was buried on last Sunday evening in the chapel in which he loved to officiate, at the foot of the Vellor Hill, amidst a large crowd of persons of all classes and creeds, and numbers of the weeping poor whom in his lifetime he charitably supported.—Madras Athenæum, April 22.

COTTON IN GUJARAT.—The cotton season in Gujarat is now nearly over. The crops to the north have barely been a 50 per cent. crop, or half the full crop. South, not more than 25 per cent., or one-fourth. Ginners and pressers this year have barely covered their current expenses, and several companies must have been working at a heavy loss.

A MYTHICAL COBRA.—A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette writes of a cobra 7ft. 11in. in length, and about 1ft. in girth, having been killed in Guzerat. As far as we remember, Dr. Richards, "who probably knows more about snakes than any member of the Snake Commission," says he has never known of a cobra over six feet.

CAMP OF EXERCISE AT CHINCHWAD.—Sir Charles Staveley has evidently a camp of exercise for next cold season on the tapis, for Major Pottinger, Assistant Quartermaster-General, has been, we learn, out at Chinchwad for the last few days surveying the country thereabout, and will return to Puna to-day.—Puna Observer, April 27.

CAPTAIN STAPLETON.—We regret to hear of the sad death of Captain Stapleton, late of the Royal Engineers, at Sattara. The deceased officer was an old Government servant, and rose by dint of steady perseverance to the grade of Assistant Engineer in the Public Works Department. His impaired health compelled him lately to apply for two years' furlough, which was granted, but before he could avail himself of it he was cut off from the scene of his labours.

DEPARTURE OF MR. HOGG.—We notice among the list of passengers per P. and O. ss. Malwa the name of Mr. F. R. Hogg, the late officiating Director-General of Post Offices in India. Mr. Hogg was appointed Postmaster-General of Bengal in November, 1868, and on the departure for Europe of Mr. Monteath in February, 1873, was appointed officiating Director-General. During the three years Mr. Hogg has been at the head of Indian Postal affairs the department has been vigorously administered. The system of registered test letters introduced by him has met with great success, and by this means several most important postal robberies have been discovered. He was very much liked by all who served under him in the department.—Times of India, May 1.

MILITARY RETIREMENTS.—The last Government Gazette gives us the name of another officer quitting the service under the provisions of the new Retirement scheme. This is Lieutenant-Colonel Cyril Jackson Prescott, of the Staff Corps, and Superintendent of the Guzerat Revenue Survey. This makes the eighth retirement this year, and Colonel Prescott's going will not do regimental officers any good. However, we hear that Colonel Bacon, commanding the 20th N.I., Colonel Cahusac, commanding the 16th N.I., and Colonel Bowen, 2nd in command of the 3rd N.L.I., intend retiring this year. Next July Colonel Taylor, commanding the 5th N.L.I., gets his off-reckonings, so 1876 will after all see a good many changes.—Times of India.

SOCIETY FOR PREVENTING CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—The Bombay Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which was started in December, 1874, has now published its first annual report. The first prosecution by the Society took place in March, 1875, and the total number of cases during the next twelve months was 174. Of these twenty-four were for cruelty to horses, 137 to bullocks, and the remainder miscellaneous offences against animals used for food, the total of the fines inflicted by the magistrates being Rs. 1,034. We certainly think that some of this money should be allowed to the Society in cases conducted by its agents. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty in Calcutta has recently obtained the concession, and there surely would be no opposition to extending it to the Bombay Society if the committee formally applied for it.

THE REVENUE JURISDICTION ACT.- Bombay has again protested against the Revenue Jurisdiction Act of Mr. Hope, but this time our townsmen have done so most strongly and unitedly, and we would fain wish effectually. Whether effectually or not, Bombay has done her duty nobly, fearlessly, and modestly, and it is now the Secretary of State who is to do his. We are fighting for a principle—a just and righteous principle—a principle which has guided the written as well as the unwritten laws of all nations, and which it behoves Government to respect in the interest of policy as well as justice; and it is for the preservation of such principles as these that the Secretary of State for India exists. The chief duty of the Secretary of State is to see that the guiding principles of good government are not violated by his agents in India in their officious servility to Government, as well as to their personal interests, and it is now to be seen how he is going to discharge it. It rests with him whether he is to preserve in Western India a principle which has the approval of ages and of reason, or whether he is to be guided by the new principle invented by Mr. Hope and others of his revenue creed, and this new principle is that an official suitor is to be a judge in his own case in matters of right and property in land. Whatever be the result of Bombay's protest against the Act, it is better that it is made. For if nothing else, it will at least serve one purpose, and that it will show to the Secretary of State and the English public with what alarm and distrust the new Revenue Act, or rather the doings of Indian Dracos of our age, is regarded in India. And it is well that we as loyal subjects of her Majesty the Queen should fearlessly and modestly let her Government know the intense dissatisfaction with which the despotic tendency of the recent Indian legislation in general, and the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act in particular, is regarded by the Indian public. And this, we believe, we have succeeded in doing, with very great success, at the last Tuesday's meeting. The meeting was a crowded one, and was very largely attended by the representatives and leaders of all the classes of the Bombay public. There were present some of the independent ex-Bombay members of the local Legislative Council. The present non-official members of the Council were there and took an active part in the proceedings. This is rather an unusual circumstance, but it shows that when the true interest of the country is concerned our leaders of society will not be misled by that false moderation of not supporting movements against Government which some are pleased to call loyalty to Government, but which, we may be allowed to say, is disloyalty of the very worst type. Let the truth and the real popular feeling be told to the Governors and then we shall have as loyal subjects done our duty.—Native Opinion.

Ceylon.

THE NEXT GOVERNOR.—There are vague rumours in Madras, the Madras Mail says, that Sir William Robinson is destined to succeed Sir W. H. Gregory at, the end of this year as Governor of Ceylon. As his five years as Member of Council, Madras, do not expire until December, 1878, his promotion to a Governorship a few months hence would be cordially approved by Mr. Huddleston, his prospective successor in Council, and by several other gentlemen who will obtain promotion. There are already two William Robinsons who are Governors of Colonies, namely, the Hon. William Robinson, Governor of the Bahama Isles, and the Hon. William Robinson, Governor of Western Australia.

LORD NORTHBROOK AT COLOMBO.—At daybreak on Friday morning, April 21, the ss. Tenasserim, with the late ex-Viceroy of India, Lord Northbrook, and party on board, arrived in the roadstead, Colombo. At nine o'clock a guard of honour of fifty men and the drum and fife band of the 57th Regiment proceeded to the wharf to receive the illustrious visitor. The officials assembled there were Lieut. Thackwell, A.D.C., Col. Logan, and Capt. Mortimer, Brigade Major. On arrival at the wharf, Lord Northbrook was received by Lieut. Thackwell, and escorted to the carriage in waiting to convey him to Queen's House, where his Excellency the Governor received him with due honours. The party consists of Lord Northbrook, the Hon. Emma Baring, the Hon. Frank Baring, A.D.C., Miss Foulkes, Mrs. Barnett, Col. Eagle, Grenadier Guards, Capt. Farmer, 60th Rifles, Capt. Baring, R.A., Capt. Hardy, Rifle Brigade, Rev. Canon Duckworth, Dr. McLeod, and Mr. Hart. Lord Northbrook, ladies, and suite left for Kandy by special train the same afternoon at 1.40. His Lordship returned to Colombo again on Sunday afternoon, April 23, and went to sea the same evening.

CIVIL PENSION CODE.—The Governor general in Council directs that the words "in 1861" be expunged from Section 102 [c] of the Civil Pension Code.

COURTS-MARTIAL.—At a General Court-Martial, assembled at Morar, on Feb. 23, Private L. Kennedy, 54th regt., was arraigned on the following charges:—1st. With insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Morar, on Jan. 19, struck Lance Corporal T. Mulcahy, of the same regiment, the said Lance Corporal T. Mulcahy being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. 2nd. With having, at Morar, on or about Jan. 20, made away with the following articles of his kit, viz., a brass brush, a cloth brush, and a pair of boots. 3rd. With having, at Morar, on or about Jan. 20, lost by neglect the following articles of his kit, viz., a brass brush, a cloth brush, and a pair of boots. Finding: Guilty of the first charge, not guilty of the second charge, and not guilty of the third charge. Sentence: The Court sentence the prisoner to suffer penal servitude for the term of five years. The Court do further sentence him to be discharged with ignominy from H.M.'s service. Approved and confirmed.—NAPIER OF MAGDALA, General, Commander-in-Chief in India.—At a General Court-Martial, assembled at Dinapore, on Feb. 5, No. 2033, Private Abraham Hollinrake, 109th regt., was arraigned on the following charge:—Insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Dinapore, on January 14, when being drilled at bayonet exercise by Lance Corporal George Harris, of the 109th Foot, rushed upon him with his bayonet fixed, and struck him with his fist, and kicked him on the face, the said Corporal Harris being his superior officer, in the execution of his office; and having then and there used towards the said Corporal language, in substance and to the effect following, viz.:—"You ———, I will run you through your heart." The Court found the prisoner guilty of the charge, and sentenced him to suffer penal servitude for the term of fifteen years. The Court further sentenced him to be discharged with ignominy from her Majesty's Service. The Court having attentively considered the observations of the revising officer, and the whole of the proceedings, do now revoke their former sentence, and do now sentence the prisoner, No. 2033, Private Abraham Hollinrake, of the 109th Regiment of Foot, to suffer penal servitude for the term of his natural life. Dinapore, March 15.—Approved and confirmed (Signed) NAPIER OF MAGDALA, General, Commander-in-Chief, India. Calcutta, March 29. The prisoner Abraham Hollinrake was guilty of one of the most serious of military crimes, that of advancing from the rank with his rifle and bayonet, and making a murderous and persevering assault on a non-commissioned officer, when in the execution of his office. The Court, after full consideration, have marked the grave nature of the crime by a sentence of penal servitude for life, a sentence which I have entirely approved. The prisoner was unable to produce evidence of the slightest provocation. While any undue severity on the part of the non-commissioned officers must be checked, it is absolutely necessary to protect them in the performance of their duty.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.—Under the auspices of the East India Association, a meeting of gentlemen interested in the affairs of India was held on Wednesday, at the Westminster Palace Hotel, under the presidency of Lord Stanley of Alderley, the subject for consideration being the necessity of establishing a Privy Council for India. Major Evans Bell, in introducing the subject, strongly urged the disadvantages of the present system of debating the grievances of Indian princes and rulers in the Houses of Parliament. An adverse decision in Parliament did not dispose of the claim of the claimant; indeed, in certain cases it animated the latter with renewed hope, and furnished him with fresh means of agitation. In fact, a debate in Parliament on an Indian political case of minor importance could seldom produce any effect but that of rousing bad blood by an utterly irrelevant exposure of what might appear odious or discreditable in the actions or expedients of all concerned. But so long as no open hearing for Indian political cases could be obtained, except through Parliamentary agency, supplemented by private and personal conciliation, so long would there be abuses more or less flagrant, and scandals more or less well founded, but always discreditable and prejudicial to the Imperial Power of Great Britain. Major Bell proposed that cases of this kind should be heard by the Privy Council, not merely by resorting to a Judicial Committee, but by an extension on the old lines, and in conformity with historical precedents, of the functions of that august body. If the former colleagues of the Viceroy, and some members of the ocal governments, were noted for life by the title of Right Honourable, they would be available when summoned to advise the Secretary of State. The ordinary working committee of the Privy Council forming an Indian Board might consist of some six or eight salaried members, one or more of whom associated with peers, judges, retired governors, and other eminent persons would form committees of Privy Council for judicial purposes, for special inquiries, or to report on treaties and conventions. Such a tribunal would not take away the Crown and Parliament's attribute of ultimate appeal; but it would enable appeals to pass openly through the prescribed channel towards a dispassionate judgment, instead of creeping through obscure and devious paths, amid scandals, intrigues, and recriminations, perhaps to no termination at all, perhaps to some compromise which confers no honour in the one direction and awakens no gratitude in the other. In the course of the subsequent discussion, general agreement was expressed at the evil of the present system, though difference of opinion prevailed as to the remedy to be applied. A vote of thanks to Major Bell and the noble chairman closed the proceedings.

Miscellaneous.

P. AND O. STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—At the forthcoming meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company a dividend will be recommended at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum.

THE BISHOP OF BOMBAY.—(INDIA-OFFICE, April 29.)—The Queen has been pleased to direct Letters Patent to pass the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, nominating the Rev. Louis George Mylne, M.A., to the Bishopric of Bombay, void by the death of the Right Rev. Henry Alexander Douglas, D.D.

INDIAN OFFICERS AT WINDSOR.—Ressaldar Sirdar Anoop Sing Bahador, and Ressaldar Sirdar Mahomed Azul Khan, Khan Bahadoor, officers of the 11th (Prince of Wales's Own) Bengal Lancers, arrived at Windsor Castle on Tuesday, and were received by the Queen. Major-General Sir Dighton Probyn was present.

MISS CARPENTER.—Last Monday evening a meeting of the National Indian Association took place at the Society of Arts, at which Miss Carpenter gave an account of her recent visit to India. Mr. S. Morley, M.P., who presided, paid a warm tribute to the value of Miss Carpenter's work, which was of a character to deserve the gratitude of all who took an interest in female education.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—At the forty-second annual general meeting, held on Wednesday, the year's cash bonus, by way of reduction of premiums, was declared at 50 per cent., and the year's bonus and interest to proprietors 25 per cent. upon the society's share capital. The new premiums of the past year were stated to have been £8,194, and the gross assets £1,066,845; the annual income being £169,000.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The report of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company for the half-year ending December 31 last states that the net earnings amounted to £58,876, against £86,367 in the corresponding period of 1874. This falling off is chiefly in the merchandise and mineral traffic, the receipts from these resources being only £83,352, compared with £103,774 in the last half-year of 1874. The passenger traffic is regarded as satisfactory.

THE ROYAL VISIT.—NAVAL PROMOTIONS.—It is announced that the following promotions in connection with the late visit of the Prince of Wales to India will take place:—Commander F. G. D. Bedford, of the Serapis, and Commander F. Durrant, of the Osborne, to be captains. First-Lieutenant E. G. Hulton, of the Serapis, and First-Lieutenant W. E. S. Mann, of the Osborne, to be commanders at Portsmouth. Great crowds inspected the State apartments of the Serapis during the past week.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.—It seems to be pretty well settled that another change of some importance, besides the reduction of the limits of age announced in Lord Salisbury's recent Minute, will be made in the regulations affecting candidates for the Indian Civil Service. A smaller amount of knowledge of Oriental languages and dialects that has hitherto been required in the further examinations will be exacted, as the number of subjects prescribed is to be diminished, and a portion of the studies of the candidates will be deferred till their arrival in India.—Athenæum.

ORIENTAL LITERATURE.—In a Convocation holden at Oxford, May 16, it was decided "That Thomas Chenery, M.A., Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic, be deputed to attend the Congress of Orientalists this year at St. Petersburg, as the representative of the University; and "That A. Neubauer, M.A., be commissioned to go to St. Petersburg for the purpose of examining the collection of Hebrew-Arabic MSS. newly acquired by the Imperial Government, as soon as it shall be accessible, and that the Curators of the Chest be authorised to pay to Mr. Neubauer a sum not exceeding £100 for the expense of his mission."

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—The B Battery of B Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, in command of Major Gore, marched into Woolwich from Canterbury on Monday. The whole brigade is being assembled at Woolwich preparatory to its departure for India about three months hence. The time fixed for sailing will land the troops in India at the beginning of the mild Indian winter, and gradually inure them to the climate, and it is expected that in future arrangements will be made to bring home the troops from India in the spring instead of contriving their arrival home in the middle of the English winter, a practice which has been attended with very disastrous results of late.

THE JAPANESE AMBASSADOR.—The Japanese Ambassador and his secretary arrived at Southampton on Monday by the mail steamer Neva.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE CITY.—On Friday evening the Prince of Wales was entertained at Guildhall, on his return from India, and his welcome was of the warmest and most cordial character. The reception of the Royal guests took place at half-past six. In reply to the civic address, the Heir Apparent said that the reciprocal advantages to India which he hoped would follow the intercourse he had been instrumental in promoting would be sufficient compensation for any fatigue which he had been enabled to surmount. To have received such a welcome from the citizens of London and from his countrymen was at once his highest reward and his greatest pride. The reception was followed by a magnificent banquet and ball.

INDIAN APPEAL.—On Thursday, at the Judicial Committee, judgment was given, after six days' argument, in an appeal from Bengal, "Ranee Klyroonssia v. Ranee Pashan Jehan," and in which property to the amount of nearly £80,000 was involved. The case now came before the Court on appeal, and it turned upon the question whether a rajah had had five wives, or whether only one of them was a wife, the others being concubines, and consequently whether the respondent was entitled to property as the child of a married woman, or whether the respondent's grandmother was merely a "temporary wife." Sir Robert Collier said their lordships would advise her Majesty to affirm the judgment of the High Court, and to dismiss the appeal with costs. The judgment will put an end to litigation which has lasted more than thirty years.

SIR BARTLE FRERE.—(WAR OFFICE, May 17.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the Right Hon. Sir Henry Edward Bartle Frere, G.C.S.I., K.C.B., to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the First Class, or Knights Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath; and Charles, Lord Suffield, of the Household of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders of the said Most Honourable Order. (WHITEHALL, May 19.)—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal granting the dignity of a baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto the Right Hon. Sir Henry Bartle Edward Frere, of Wimbledon, in the county of Surrey, G.C.B., C.G.S.I., and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

PROFESSOR CHILDERS.—Our readers will be sorry to learn that the arduous labours of Professor Childers over his valuable Pali Dictionary have so impaired his health that it is feared he will not be able to resume his work at the India-office for a considerable time. This is greatly to be regretted, as he was a most learned and able assistant of Dr. Rost, the chief librarian. The India-office authorities should record, in some public manner, their estimation of the services of Dr. Childers. He is extremely unassuming; but, in his especial department, his learning is simply unrivalled. No one could have gone through his India-office duties more energetically and thoroughly than Professor Childers; and many months ago we expressed a high opinion of the services which he has rendered to Oriental literature. We need hardly say anything more of a man of whom an eminent orientalist remarked a year or so ago in public —"Professor Childers simply stands alone as a Ceylonese scholar!" —Athenæum.

BRONZE GUNS, which are just coming into fashion in some parts of Europe, chiefly on account of the cheap production, have been now utterly condemned and discarded by the English War Department, and they are now being destroyed by hundreds at the Royal Arsenal, and the metal sold by auction to the dealers. These guns are mostly composed of the alloy known as gun metal, of a nature undoubtedly less serviceable than the phosphor-bronze adopted by Austria, but phosphor-bronze, useful as it has proved for the bearings of machinery and other purposes, does not possess the confidence of the English artillerists in a much higher degree than the brass guns which are now being got rid of. These are chiefly field guns, made either in the "bronze age" which preceded the introduction of rifled ordnance, some twenty years ago, or in the short interval more recent, when the ingenious theories of an Indian officer led to the brief restoration of bronze ordnance for use in our Eastern Empire. New and old are now to be swept out of the service.

INDIAN PRISONS.—A correspondent writes to us from the address of the "Howard Association," London:—Amongst the social and other reforms in India which may derive benefit from the attention directed to that country through the visit of the Prince of Wales, it is to be hoped that an improvement of the shocking condition of the prisons may have some place. With but several honourable exceptions, as at Poonah, for example, prisoners in Indian jails are locked up at night, in scores together, in single rooms, corrupting one another in every possible way. New jails are still being constructed with the pernicious arrangement of congregate dens, as in English prisons before the days of Howard and Mrs. Fry. Miss Carpenter, who has just returned from a philanthropic visit to India, has laboured nobly for nine years to draw attention to the necessity of this and other Indian reforms. But although her views have received support from several able and experienced Anglo-Indians, as Sir Bartle Frere and others, scarcely any progress has yet been achieved in this matter, apart from a large increase of remunerative labour in some of the jails, especially those influenced by the praiseworthy exertions of Dr. Mouat. Lord Salisbury, as Indian Minister, has ever been willing to listen to the demands of intelligent public opinion, and if the English Press will kindly lend its powerful aid in this direction, much practical good will probably ensue.

EXPLORATION IN CENTRAL ASIA.—Nature says that Colonel Prejevalsky is about to set out on a new exploring journey into Central Asia, which will probably last for about three years. His purpose is to explore especially the basin of the Lob-nor from Thian-shan to the Himalayas. Colonel Prejevalsky proposes to visit this summer Eastern Thian-shan from Kuloga to Hama, and to pass the winter upon the Lob-nor and in the deserts which extend to the east of this lake, mainly to solve the question as to wild horses and camels. Next spring he will observe the migrations of birds on Lob-nor and proceed to Lhassa. He will then explore the upper course of the Brahmapootra and the northern slopes of the Himalays, as also Eastern Thibet and Southern China, and if circumstances permit he will return by Western Thibet and enter Russia by Kashgar. The programme of the expedition is as follows :—1. Geographical and ethnographical descriptions. 2. An itinerary sketch at sight. 3. Astronomical determinations of places. 4. Meteorological, phychrometric, and hypsometric observations. 5. Observations of mammals and birds. 6. Botanical, zoological, and mineralogical collections. 7. Photographic sketches. The Russian Geographical Society has expressed its emphatic approval of the programme, and the Emperor has ordered 24,740 roubles to be devoted to the expedition from the Treasury.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR LASSEN.—By the death of Professor Lassen Germany has lost her most distinguished Sanskrit scholar. Lassen was by birth a Norwegian, born at Bergen in 1800, but he was never looked upon as a foreigner in Germany. He spent all his life at Bonn, as Professor of Sanskrit, and was really the true founder of the critical and historical school of Sanskrit Philology in Germany. His editions of Sanskrit texts are executed according to the strict rules of classical criticism, though not free from that eclecticism and freedom in conjectural emendation which distinguished the contemporary school of Gottfried Hermann. He is best known by his work on Prakrit, and by his successful attempt at a truly scholarlike decipherment of the Persian cuneiform inscriptions (1836 and 1845). In this work he was, no doubt, indebted to Burnouf, but no one appreciated more than Burnouf the real worth of Lassen's work, leaving to others the ungrateful task of accusing one of the most original decipherers of plagiarism. Lassen's greatest achievement was the "Indische Alterthumskunde. Much as some of his views on Indian history and chronology have lately been criticised, it should not be forgotten that those who find fault with him are really standing on his shoulders, and that without him the study of Sanskrit would probably never have assumed its present character. With Lassen the first period in the study of Sanskrit on the Continent, inaugurated by Schlegel, Bopp, Burnouf, and Rosen, has come to an end, but the work which it has achieved will for ever remain the sound and solid foundation for future researches in the ancient literature of India.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, May 16.—THE CASE OF NARAIN SINGH.—Lord SELBORNE presented a petition from Sirdar Narain Singh, formerly in the service of the Government of Mooltan, and at present a State prisoner residing at Moulmein, in British Burmah, praying for inquiry into his case, and for liberation. The noble lord remarked that he had seen testimonials in favour of the petition, and as far as he knew the circumstances they appeared to be exceptionally painful.—Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY supported the prayer.—The Marquis of SALISBURY said he would bring the matter under the attention of the Indian Government.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, May 18.—BOMBAY REVENUE JURISDICTION ACT, 1876.—Lord G. HAMILTON, in reply to Mr. DUNBAR, said : We received the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act by last mail, but we have not yet received the memorial of the inhabitants of Bombay against it. The Secretary of State will not consider the Bill until the memorial has been received by him, and as soon as he has considered the Act there will be no objection to laying it, together with the memorial, upon the table of the House.

INDIAN FURLOUGH RULES.—Lord G. HAMILTON, in reply to Mr. MORRIS, said that the Indian Furlough Rules of 1868 had been revised by the Secretary of State in July, 1871. Complaints had been received at the India-office from officers who had accepted the rates as they stood before they were revised, and they were now under the consideration of the Secretary of State in Council. He hoped in a few days to be able to state the decision which had been arrived at.

A LIFE of the EARL OF MAYO,

FOURTH VICEROY OF INDIA.

With a Narrative of his Indian Administration.

By W. W. HUNTER, B.A., LL.D.

2 vols. demy 8vo., 24s.

"Essentially a work of authority. It needed but the pen of the able writer of the 'Annals of Rural Bengal' to produce a standard biography of one of the most remarkable of the long line of our Indian administrators."—Daily News.

"A work of literary art of rare excellence. A most valuable and profoundly interesting work."—Home News.

"Nothing could exceed the completeness with which Dr. Hunter has told the story of a noble life and of a great career, and he has done it in a manner that may fairly be described as masterly."—Hour.

The History of the British Empire in India. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. Containing a Copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a Complete Chronological Index of Events. Third Edition. 1 vol., 8vo. With Map. 12s.

The Library Edition of the above in six vols., 8vo., may be had, price £2. 8s.

The History of the British Empire in India, from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning (1844 to 1862). By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late Bengal Fusiliers. 2 vols., 8vo. 32s.

Analytical History of India. From the Earliest Times to the Abolition of the East India Company in 1858. By ROBERT SEWELL, Madras Civil Service. Post 8vo. 8s.

The object of this work is to supply the want which has been felt by students for a condensed outline of Indian History, which would serve at once to recall the memory and guide the eye, while at the same time it has been attempted to render it interesting to the general reader by preserving a medium between a bare outline and a complete history.

A CHRONOLOGICAL AND HISTORICAL

CHART OF INDIA.

BY

ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery.

Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, A.D. 1859; with the date of each historical event according to the various eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Offices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asia, and Europe.

A RELIEVO MAP OF INDIA.

BY HENRY F. BRION.

In Frame, 21s.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefly of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indian geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the sea-level. To the historical as well as the geographical student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a neat frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily-coloured picture, and its price, a guinea, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 8; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, May 6; Calcutta, May 5.

The latest mail news about Major Sandeman's mission was satisfactory, the troops composing his escort having altogether got rid of cholera. On the 23rd April the force was halted at Abgum, and was to have marched from that place on the 25th. The kafila people, in advance of the escort, had given much trouble by burying some of their number who had died from cholera at the regular halting-places, making the graves so shallow that the air in these places was full of poison. The political objects of the mission were being successfully carried out. The kafila which accompanied Major Sandeman as far as Kirta had reached the Kandahar country in safety, and the arrangements for the permanent opening of the Bolan Pass were nearly complete. These will shortly be tested by the passage of an expected kafila, at least as large as the one which has just gone on. Difficulties there will be, of course; but a genuine desire for peace seems to animate all parties, wearied out as they are with the civil discord which has so long raged among them.

CHOLERA still prevailed in Kashmir. It had also broken out at Tumkur, near Bangalor, killing 128 out of 280 attacked. It is said that typhoid fever was rife among the European residents in the Bangalor cantonments, and a few deaths had taken place. Cholera had broken out in Bengal, on the line of the Northern State Railway, killing, it seems, as many as 150 victims in one day. The disease was also raging in the Terai below Darjiling, and there was reason to fear that it would make its way up the hill. The Madras papers state that cholera continued to ravage some parts of Southern India with relentless severity. It was specially severe in the district of Kristnagiri; and nearly 270 deaths occurred in one week from this disease in the Usur district. A few cases are also reported from Sikandrabad, among them the wife and child of an artillery sergeant.

WITH regard to the Afridi difficulty the Lahor paper informs us that the Deputy Commissioner of Peshawar had gone to Michni, where he was employed negotiating with the Afridis through Arab Sarfaraz Khan. General Pollock had returned to Peshawar. The Akhund of Swat was sending messengers daily to the Afridis advising them to sue for peace and ask the British Government for pardon. Some Sepoys were still stationed at Michni to guard the reapers while cutting their crops.

LORD LYTTON has been suffering from a bilious attack since his arrival at Simla.

DR. BELLEW, C.S.I., has been gazetted Residency Surgeon at Khatmandu, vice Dr. Wright, retired. Surgeon-Major W. H. Adley relieves at Lucknow Dr. Cannon, the Deputy-Surgeon-General, who is coming home on furlough. It appears by the way that furlough to Europe for medical officers has for the present been stopped in consequence of the number already absent from India.

THE Madras papers announce the death of Deputy Surgeon General Lestock Wilson Stewart, Indian Medical Service, in charge of the southern district, at Trichinopoly on Thursday, April 4, from sunstroke. Dr. Stewart entered the service in 1848, and became surgeon-major in 1856. He had lately been garrison surgeon at Bellary.

ANOTHER death reported from the same province is that of Colonel Raikes, R.A., which occurred at Kunur on Friday, April 5, of cancer in the mouth. We also note that Mr. May, the engineer of the Madras Harbour Works, died on April 4, the very day before that fixed for his departure to England.

WE observe that Major R. S. Robertson, Staff-Corps, some time Brigade-Major at Bareilly, and Captain C. A. Carthew, Staff-Corps, late 3rd Squadron Officer, 16th Bengal Cavalry, have been appointed to succeed Major Birch and Captain Trotter, respectively, in the offices of Assistant-Adjutant-General and Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General of the Allahabad division. Major Angelo has been appointed Assistant-Adjutant-General at Lucknow.

WE learn that Colonel Bacon, commanding the 20th Bombay N.I., was to retire from the service on the 8th of this month, and it is rumoured that Colonel Marston, commanding the 13th N.I., is also about to avail himself of the Retirement scheme.

AT the opium sale on Thursday, May 4, the average price of Behár opium was Rs. 1,282 per chest, and of Benares Rs. 1,236.

A REMARKABLY daring and clever fraud was lately practised by half-a dozen natives of Bangalor. For many days a regular system of levying tolls on native vehicles and animals entering the city was carried on by these bold plotters under the eyes, if not with the connivance, of the police. They set up a toll establishment with five different stations, each supervised by a Brahman "gomashtah," with the help of a number of peons. Rules were framed and badges provided for the peons, and the tolls demanded were paid without a murmur by the natives, who took the livery of the peons for the genuine thing. The conspirators sometimes netted as much as thirty rupees a day. The "bye-laws" were displayed in a prominent place. Pigs, mules, bullocks, horses, sheep, and bandies were all taxed at different rates, from two annas downwards. Attached to the scale of tolls were the following remarks:—"Any one bringing the above articles should not make any bother, but read the pass, and pay the money and take the goods. If any disturbance be made with the peon, a fine of ten rupees or else fifteen days' imprisonment." Toll receipts were regularly granted, and for nearly a fortnight no one questioned the legality of the toll-gatherers' proceedings. At last, however, the Sudder Ameen were informed of the matter, and the conspirators were arrested, "boards, badges, rules, pens, ink, paper, passes, and all." It says little for the Bangalor police that a trick so impudent should have been so long successful.

THE Calcutta Statesman tells an interesting story of Lord Napier. While he was simply Lieutenant-colonel Robert Napier of Multan he "had all but made up his mind to retire from the service on his pension, and settle in the colonies. He was strongly drawn towards New Zealand, and we well remember his writing to ourselves in Bombay to procure for him all the information we could concerning the Colony. We forget whether we were able to send him what he wanted, but we recalled the circumstance to him some time ago, and found that he remembered it as vividly as ourselves." A similar incident, according to the same journal, marked the career of Lord Lawrence. A very few days before the whilom ruler of the Punjab received the offer of the Viceroyalty in 1863 "he was in the Oriental Bank in London asking counsel of poor Harry Gordon as to which of the Colonies he should take his family to, as he saw no prospect of settling his sons satisfactorily at home. His greatness came upon him more unexpectedly than even Napier's, and these two old Punjab heroes fittingly head the long roll of memorable names associated with the province."

A MURDEROUS outbreak of a very curious kind occurred the other day at Shahjahanpur. The 22nd regiment was on parade, or had just been on parade, when a private of the regiment, who had lagged behind in some way, deliberately shot three natives one after the other. Two of them were killed instantaneously, and the third died soon afterwards. The culprit was arrested, and, on being interrogated as to the motives which impelled him to the crime, he stated that he had taken a great dislike to natives after passing through Cawnpore, and seeing the memorial over the well into which the bodies of his murdered countrymen and countrywomen had been flung. Since that day he had determined to revenge them.

AN advertisement in Maráthi, of which the following is a translation, appeared lately in the Indu Prakash. The advertiser is evidently a very progressive Brahmo :—

I WANT TO MARRY AGAIN—I am not more than forty. If any Hindu widow lady between the ages of ten and thirty-five wishes to enter into a matrimonial alliance with me, either direct or through her guardian, particulars may be obtained regarding me on application at the office of the Indu Prakash. Bigoted Shastris need not apply. I hold since many years an appointment under the British Government. Failing a widow, any Hindu lady of the above age, if otherwise fit, will do. If any woman will marry according to the Calcutta Brahm Panth, I am agreeable. I am ready to marry any applicant belonging to any of the Brahm sects in two or three months. Applications from ladies of the Buddhist, Christian, or Mohammedan religions will be duly taken into consideration if the applicant be willing to become a convert to Brahmoism.

MARRIAGEABLE HINDU.

THE Dramatic Performances Bill, for checking sedition and licentiousness on the Native Stage, seems to meet with serious disapproval in many even respectable quarters. Native opinion is strongly opposed to it, and the representations made to Government on the subject by the British Indian Association deserve fair consideration. The Committee of the Association points out in detail how the ends sought to be compassed by the Bill can be reached better and with less danger by simply putting in exercise the machinery of the existing law and the Indian Penal Code. We have only space for the two following paragraphs :—

The Committee do not see any objection to the licensing of theatres in the same way as printing establishments are now licensed. The managers of theatres will be responsible for the performance of the plays ; and if they transgress the law on any of the points noticed above, they ought to be proceeded against in a formal trial under the provisions of the existing law. In a country like this, where the influence of public opinion is feeble, where the executive have a wide discretion, where rulers have no critical knowledge of the languages of the ruled, and where national literature is just reviving, the enormous arbitrary power proposed to be vested in the executive officers by this Bill may be converted into a fearful engine of oppression, and may prove disastrous to the liberty and literature of the people.

The Committee believe it will be admitted on all hands that the State ought not to interfere with the amusements of the people unless they assume an objectionable character, in open defiance of the laws of morality or decency, or unless they prove politically mischievous, and where they do assume such a character, the ordinary laws of the country ought to be allowed full operation for the preservation of peace, order, and morality. It has not been proved that these laws are inefficacious, and when such is the case, the Committee do not see any good or valid reason for an exceptional law abrogating the functions of the Courts of Justice, and leaving the whole matter to the discretion of the executive.

IT appears that the gold fields in the neighbourhood of Bangalor are affording satisfactory yields of the precious metal, and that the success of the newly organised company for working them is pretty certain. Experienced Australian miners have been engaged and are now employed on the works. The Alpha Gold Mining Company established some time ago in the Wynad District is not at present in as prosperous a condition as its promoters hoped or desired. The want of good and suitable machinery is stated to be the cause of its comparative want of success up to the present time. The mines are known to have gold in them, but the yield hitherto obtained from the quartz has not been large enough to do more than pay expenses.

WE learn from the local papers that the property of the Kumaon Iron Works Company at Kaladunghi, near Naini Tal, is likely soon to change hands. The Government of the North-West Provinces have offered to purchase the concern on the condition that they are allowed to work it for one year, and if in that time the experiments they make prove successful they will take over the whole property. The company having agreed to this arrangement, the Government have already deputed a very able officer to begin operations. A sum of Rs. 50,000 has been sanctioned for experiments in turning out pig iron. Although there is little doubt that the experiments about to be undertaken will eventually justify Government in purchasing the property, still, in the reverse alternative, Government stipulate to restore the property to the company in as good order as they take it over.

IT is understood that Sir T. Mádhaváráo, the Dewán at Baroda, is at present engaged in preparing the administration report of the State for the past year. The report will be interesting in many points, as it will show the numerous changes that have taken place in the State since the assumption of his office by the new Dewán.

A RESOLUTION has been published in the Gazette of India concerning the performance of the train service on the railways over which the Prince of Wales travelled during his visit to India. After noting that the arrangements for the departure of the Prince from Baroda appeared to have been "somewhat unsatisfactory," the resolution proceeds to say :—"Taking into consideration the length of the journeys, aggregating in all 4,829 miles, performed by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on Indian railways, and the difficulties with which the railway authorities had to contend, consequent on an augmented traffic at a time when efforts were needed to ensure the safety of the Royal train, and the personal convenience and comfort of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to record his high appreciation of the services rendered by the railway officials of all ranks. This good result has been attained both by the well-considered arrangements and comprehensive directions of those in chief authority, and by the loyal exertions of all the members of the different railway departments." Thirty years ago such a journey as that which his Royal Highness accomplished in four months from one end of India to the other, with a week spent in Ceylon, would have taken almost as many years. Even ten years ago he would have been unable to traverse half the ground marked out for him in the few months allotted for his Indian trip. With regard to the shortcoming on the Baroda line, the Bombay Gazette believes that the officials of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway "did all that they could reasonably have been expected to do, and that what trifling inconvenience the Prince suffered at Baroda Station was due to the carelessness of the gentlemen who had charge of his travelling arrangements in not giving these officials timely and definite instructions."

THE recent return of charitable dispensaries in Bengal shows the rapid growth of the system established under British auspices. At the beginning of 1874 there were 182 dispensaries in the Province; in 1875 there were 203. Sir R. Temple, however, is not satisfied with this rate of progress. He begs local officials to use their legitimate influence with the wealthy natives of their districts. If they would only show a greater interest in the matter, "the wealthy native residents would not be found backward in subscribing the funds necessary for the establishment of new dispensaries." It is a question, however, whether this is wise advice or not. The more scrupulous an officer is, the more he shrinks from using his influence in the way pointed out by Sir Richard Temple. The object for which funds are to be collected may be most praiseworthy, and the efforts of the English official to fill up the subscription list may be altogether blameless. But for all that he knows perfectly well that most of his subscribers would refuse to subscribe if they had no fear of offending the Sahib. On the other hand, it may be argued, that the money thus collected will be more profitably spent than it would have been upon a nautch or a troup of fiddlers. Dispensaries are evidently growing into popular favour, and becoming more and more useful day by day. In 1874 the number of persons treated at dispensaries in Lower Bengal was 660,131. In 1869 the number was about one-half of this. It may therefore be assumed that the people are beginning to recognise the advantage of efficient medical treatment. Nor is the increase in expenditure in the same ratio with this increased efficiency, although it undoubtedly tends to rise year by year. The mean cost of each patient may be taken at about nine annas. The total outlay in 1874-75 was a little over three lakhs, and of this Government contributed somewhat more than one-third.

IN speaking of the intended division of the work of the Consulting Engineer for Railways, we said that the control of the Punjab and Sind lines would be given either to Mr. A. Grant, of the Punjab Northern, or to Colonel Peile, of the Indus Valley line. We now learn from the Bombay Gazette that the appointment has been conferred on Colonel Peile.

A MEETING of the Bombay Corporation was held last Wednesday, at which the draft of the address to the Queen was read congratulating her Majesty upon the assumption of the title of Empress of India. Mr. Dosabhoy Framjee, who occupied the chair, made a speech, and the address was adopted unanimously.

A Times telegram of yesterday's date from Calcutta states as a fact that Sir W. Muir has accepted a seat in the Secretary of State's Council, and will resign the Indian Finance Ministry about November. The Pioneer says he intended to resign shortly, but expressed his readiness to wait for the next Budget. Lord Salisbury, however, refused to keep the Council vacancy open so long. Sir W. Muir is a man of great Indian experience, able, diligent, and honest, but some people doubt his being a very successful financier. Nothing is known regarding his successor.

FROM the same source we learn that last week the Calcutta papers contained an advertisement calling a public meeting for to-day to express regret that the Government treated the motion for a Committee of Inquiry into the Famine as a Party question, and to consider the question of petitioning Parliament to grant a Commission. The meeting was called by the sheriff on a requisition signed by a large number of non-official residents, including several of the principal merchants and barristers. Last Saturday, however, the promoters suddenly determined to postpone the meeting sine die. A proposal has been made for a meeting at Calcutta to congratulate the Queen on her new Indian title, but nothing has yet been done, except by the members of the British Indian League, which met on Saturday to prepare an address. No Proclamation has yet been issued by the Government.

MR. GROSVENOR'S party and the British escort are expected at Rangoon this week. All are well, but the Madras troop of the escort are unable to march properly, as their boots and clothing are unfitted for the journey. About fifty men had to be left behind at a ford. The Burmese at Mandalay express great surprise at our making such a fuss about the murder of a single Englishman.

THE announcement of the Times correspondent that Mr. Saunders, late Resident at Haidarabad, becomes Chief Commissioner at Mysor on returning from leave, was forestalled by what we said last week. It is further stated that Colonel Sir R. Meade will probably be confirmed as Resident at the Nizam's Court.

LATEST telegrams from India report that a fine of 500 rupees has been inflicted on the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for carrying warlike munitions to China vid Bombay.

THE report that Mr. Rivers Thompson, the Chief Commissioner in Burmah, was about to take leave is now said to be unfounded. The Times correspondent telegraphs that his health is completely restored, and he remains for the present at Rangoon.

ACCORDING to our latest telegraphic advices Major Sandeman's mission has reached Mastang. The escort is encamped on a fertile plain 5,700 feet above the sea, and will probably remain there the whole summer. The health of the troops is reported good. It is stated that the Khan and the Brahoi Chiefs have referred their disputes to Major Sandeman. There has been no further fighting with the Afridis, but the Kohat Pass is not yet open for traffic. The Amir of Kabul has declared that the Khaibar Pass is now open.

WE are indebted to the Indian papers for the first announcement of the reforms ordained by the India-office in the Native Army. Its main features, as reported in our last issue, are said to be the addition of two English officers to each regiment, an increase in the Sepoy's pay, and some improvement in the status of Native officers. The first and last items taken together imply something very like an acknowledgment of the evils indicated in Sir H. Havelock's statement that the Indian Army was "rotten to the core." Sir Henry of course was met by the official assurance that the Native army was in the best possible condition; but the value of such an assurance must be measured by the changes actually decreed. Whether these are "organic" or no, it is enough to regard them as highly important. With the introduction of a better class of native officers and a small increase in the number of white officers, we may hope to see native regiments fit for real work in the field as well as for mere manœuvring on parade. The "irregular" system will cease to be a mischievous sham, and the excellence of the native officers, who will no longer rise by seniority from the ranks, will compensate for the paucity of their white comrades. In this way nearly all that was asked for by Sir H. Havelock and a host of competent critics will, we trust, be virtually secured at no great increase of cost to the Indian revenues. It was inevitable that any sound scheme of reform should include some increase of the Sepoy's pay, which had obviously become inadequate to his present needs; and we only hope that the addition now granted will satisfy all reasonable ends. As far as it goes, therefore, the new scheme may be said to promise well. No mention is made however of any plan for keeping officers in the regiments to which they have once been posted, of recruiting the commissioned ranks by some other channel than the Staff Corps and the British regiments, or of confining military officers as far as possible to military duties.

WE have to notice with regret the death of the Right Hon. Sir James Weir Hogg, on Saturday last, the 27th, after an illness of five weeks. Born in 1790 at Lisburn, in county Antrim, and educated at a private school in Belfast, he afterwards went to Trinity College, Dublin, where, among other distinctions, he won the gold medal for oratory, from such a rival as Richard Sheil. Having been called to the Bar, he sailed to India in 1814, and once there, he soon made his way to a large and lucrative practice. In 1822 he became Registrar of the Supreme Court of Calcutta, at that time a highly-paid office, with varied and important duties, which he discharged until his return home in 1833. In 1834 he entered the House of Commons as member for Beverley. For that town he sat until 1847, when he was elected member for Honiton. This latter seat he lost in 1857. Meanwhile, ever since 1839, Sir James Hogg had served as a Director of the East India Company, and by no abler or wiser guardian were the interests of that famous body ever upheld or fought for during the last twenty years of its political being, whether at the Council Board, in proprietors' meetings, or in Parliament. He was twice Chairman of the East India Company. For his Parliamentary services Sir Robert Peel made him a baronet in 1846, and would have made him Judge-Advocate General but for Sir James's unwillingness to sever his connection with India, to which he owed his rise in life. He also refused an offer of the Governorship of Bombay. In 1858, when the Government of India was transferred to the Crown, he was elected a member of the Council of India, in which he sat until 1872. At that time his intellect was still clear, and his bodily condition but little affected by his fourscore years.

IT was rumoured at Peshawar that British troops would enter the Khaibar Pass in a day or two.

THE SKIRMISHING ON THE FRONTIER.—The Peshawar correspondent of the Pioneer writes on the 21st April :—The movable column, consisting of Troop R.H.A., a Wing, 8th King's, and 14th Sikhs, 20th P.N.I., and 17th Bengal Cavalry, marched out to Fort Mackeson and Muthunnee on Sunday last. The 17th B.C., 20th P.N.I., and Artillery, under Colonel Rogers, went to Fort Mackeson, leaving the Europeans and 14th Sikhs at Muthunnee. The force from Mackeson went out at three A.M. on Monday morning, and took up a position at the village of Ghurria, Kheyls, close to the Thannah at Ahmud Chiboutra. The military operations were guided by Major Ommaney, the Deputy Commissioner, who decided not to touch the crops that were within one mile of the pass. The Affridis showed a considerable force about the mouth of the pass, and sungahs had been erected, and rifle pits dug, under the idea that so large a force as that sent out against them could have but one object, viz., of making an advance into the pass. But such was not the intention of the civil authorities, and the work cut out by them for this well-equipped, well-disciplined column, was to protect a lot of ruffians whom they had collected together to cut the crops, which work they carried out in the most unsatisfactory manner. The 20th N.I. skirmished to the front of Ghurria Kheyl, leaving their supports in rear of the village. The Affridis opened fire on them at a long distance, and soon showed that they were possessed of a considerable number of good rifles. The Royal Artillery poured in shells at a long range, but running, dodging behind rocks at each flash, and being careful not to collect on any one spot, they were very hard to hit, although the shell practice is said to have been admirable. During the action, which lasted whilst the reapers were at work, viz., from about six A.M. to eleven A.M., the 20th N.I. got one havildar mortally, and seven men either severely or slightly wounded. Three of them were hit by one of our own shells bursting immediately after it was fired. Dr. Smith, R.H.A., was hit by a spent bullet, and a Kahar killed. Opinions differ as to whether the Affridis suffered; but if they did escape it is a marvel, as the shells were bursting over them continually. Anyhow, from the evident dislike to guns that they showed on the following day it looks very much as if they had had enough of them. Tuesday's programme was precisely the same as that of the day before. The Affridis showed in greater force, but did not attempt any advance from their hills. One man, however, on their side was seen to fall. The force was withdrawn earlier, and got back to Mackeson at about 11.30 A.M. The dose from the artillery was not repeated, only a round or so being fired. But advancing one gun was quite sufficient to make the enemy get out of the way as quickly as possible. Reaping was not carried on during Wednesday.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE CUSTOMS DUTIES OF INDIA.

THE subject of a paper* read by Mr. R. H. Elliot before the East India Association (Sir George Campbell, K.C.S.I., M.P., in the chair), on Tuesday last, has lately become one of mementous interest, in consequence of recent legislation by the Indian Government of a fiscal character having been challenged by Indian statesmen of opposite views, on the grounds of financial policy. The vexed question of the Indian Customs Act, recently passed at the instance of Lord Northbrook, has afforded an experienced Anglo-Indian statist the opportunity of elucidating the fiscal system of India. Mr. Elliot writes in a temperate and impartial spirit, his sole object being evidently to advocate the material interests of the people of India, which interests are (as Sir George Campbell incidentally said in the course of the evening's proceedings) the main object of importance which ought to be considered. Mr. Elliot puts the case of Manchester and India, with regard to the cotton manufactures and the products of India, so clearly, that we shall best fulfil our present task by following his facts, figures, and line of argument almost seriatim. He begins by entering very succinctly into the history of manufacturing commerce with India:—

In the year 1832 the natives of Bengal petitioned the English Government, praying that the duties then levied on the introduction of their goods here might be abolished, in order that the Indian might be placed on an equal footing with the English manufacturer; and now, in 1876, the spinners and weavers of England are praying for the abolition of the import duties now levied on the introduction of their goods in India in order that they may be placed on an equal footing with their rivals in those regions.

Mr. Elliot deduces from the historical facts thus contrasted the following inferences, viz., that the first of these two petitions showed how surely we were destined to supplant the hand-made manufactures of the East, and that the second petition showed no less clearly how trade is tending towards its ancient channels. He says:—

It was diverted from them owing to the skill, capital and machinery of the West overcoming the cheap hand-labour of the East. It is in process of reverting to them, owing to the skill, capital and machinery of the West going out to settle amongst the cheap labour of the East. There has thus begun the march of a manufacturing revolution, which, having commenced with cotton, has already extended itself to jute, and must eventually extend to other industries.

But our author refrains from dwelling on the competition that has commenced between the Eastern and Western labourer, to limit himself to the action of the Indian tariff on Indian manufactures. Commenting on the causes of the slow development of Indian manufactures, he suggests measures for accelerating their progress. He is eloquent on the manufacturing capabilities of India:—

From its extensive sea-board, its natural water communications, its immense docile and teachable populations, its command of home and foreign selling markets, its command of raw material on the spot, and its facilities for drawing raw material from abroad, and, finally, its command of both coal and water power, it may safely be asserted that there is no part of the world which contains such commanding facilities for almost every branch of manufactures.

With regard to the agricultural and manufacturing capabilities of the Indian people, Mr. Elliot shows how abruptly the Government has halted. Reiterating that the conditions of success must be initiated by the State to ensure rapid progress, Mr. Elliot takes care to notice that the Indian Government did not wait for private enterprise as regards railways and canals; nor did it wait for private enterprise as regards tea. There it led the way with tea plantations of its own, and, after the new industry was fairly started, withdrew. The State has also led the way as regards chinchona plantations, and after the cultivation has been well established, these, no doubt, will be sold. It has also freely spent the money of the people on model farms and cotton commissioners, and supported an Agricultural Gazette for the distribution of information. But when it came to manufactures the Government appeared to doubt the native skill in manufacture. In effect it said:—

You are evidently destined by Providence to be simply a digging and producing animal; you are therefore to be taught to grow better cotton and better fibres. You are to be provided with the means of improving the breeds of sheep, in order that you may supply better wool; and to be taught to produce more and better silk. You are to be taught to do everything but manufacture. For that we have been as clearly destined by Providence. You, then, are to produce all the raw products, despatch them six thousand miles across the globe, and we will make them up in our mills, and send the manufactured articles back to you.

This our author denounces as a short-sighted policy, which is opposed to the full development of the industries of the people, and must retard the commercial prosperity of India. Such a mistaken policy he considers politically suicidal in the face of India's acknowledged financial difficulties.

The paper passes on from the consideration of the mechanical modes of developing the material resources of India to viewing the political aspect of the question. That the declared policy of Lord Salisbury, as regards the cotton duties, both in speeches made at Manchester and in the House of Lords should be on the side of the great trading interest of Cottonopolis appears to exercise much the feelings and temper of Mr. Elliot, who assures us that on the side of India no possible objection has been, or can be, made to the tax. The duties have been levied at rates varying with the needs of Government. The tax has been as low as 2½ and as high as 10 per cent. It is now 5 per cent., at which rate it yields the important sum of £800,000 which, being distributed over 240,000,000 of people, is certainly not felt by them to be oppressive, nor does it act so as to force the people back on native manufactures. It is asked by Mr. Elliot, "On what grounds should this tax be interfered with?" He asserts that popular opinion and the Press alike in India and at home have endorsed Lord Northbrook's refusal to throw away an important source of revenue such as the cotton import duties. The author's remedy for insuring better home legislation for India is as follows:—

I will now suggest a method for at least diminishing the probability of India being misrepresented in this country. The Secretary of State for India should be appointed like our Indian Viceroys, hold office independently of the rise and fall of parties, be eligible for reappointment for a further term of as many years, and have a seat in Parliament as the representative of the interests of India.

The course proposed to be taken by Lord Salisbury in regard to the cotton duties is to devote the first available surplus to their reduction and ultimate extinction. There still however remains the question whether these duties should be the first to go. Only a fraction of the £800,000 represents what can with any show of justice be called a protective duty, and against this must be set the various duties levied in England on articles of Indian growth or manufacture. If reform is needed, let us begin at home.

OUR NATIVE ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Rome conquered the world by never yielding a foot, by never confessing herself beaten, by rising with renewed courage from every defeat. We require such fortitude more than Rome did. As yet our tents are only pitched in the land. We have a numerous and a noble army, but six-sevenths of it are of the soil. We have one fortress in all India. We offer no inducement to extraordinary fidelity, even while we place our magazines, our treasuries, and our very throats at the mercy of any desperado. While we English are thus reckless, we, both at home and in India, are more easily panicstricken than perhaps any brave people in the world. Not only does a Cabul, or a Chilianwala strike terror from one end of the country to the other, but a simple murder, a Sonthal or a Moplah outbreak, has scarcely less effect. With few exceptions there is no preparation to meet sudden danger. There is the most helpless alarm when it does occur.—Page 376 of Allen's Edition of Sir Henry Lawrence's "Essays."

SIR,—You have, in your Paper of yesterday's date, informed the public (p. 491) that the new scheme of reform for the Native Army provides for the appointment of two additional English officers to each regiment, for raising the status of the native officers, and for a certain increase of the Sepoy's pay.

All of these reforms are no doubt excellent, but there is one question which appears to have been overlooked, the question of a Reserve, of a Militia to fill up the gaps caused by casualties in war; and to suppress or overcome all attempts of Pindaris and Dacoits to plunder our wealthy and disarmed native subjects.

Now there is no concealing the fact that we are afraid of having a large native mercenary army, and yet Colonel Chesney has shown that our present peace establishment will be quite inadequate for the emergencies of war.

City for city, the military garrisons of India are smaller than even those of England. The Indian Army, in fact, must be regarded at present as merely a peace cadre or depot, so organised as to be readily capable of augmentation. It is barely able to supply the ordinary demands of peace-time; and it is no exaggeration to say that, in order to furnish a brigade for foreign service, a strain has to be put on the army which is felt from one end of the country to the other.—Chesney's "Indian Polity, 1868," p. 292.

The question is, How is the Indian Army to be safely multiplied in the event of war? It is very improbable that England will be able to furnish more than 100,000 white soldiers, including German, American, and Australian volunteers. We shall require to treble our native army.

We have no reserve, no militia; our police are not efficient for fighting purposes; and I call upon every experienced officer, military and civil, to state whether the raw levies, on which we have formerly expended millions sterling, have ever proved a reliable force for saving the Empire. In the expression raw levies I do not include the militia in the service of the native Chiefs, but only those levies which consist of miscellaneous mercenary recruits hastily attracted to us by the offer of 14s. or 16s. a month. Such mercenary untried recruits will be worse than useless in a future war; easily seduced by rebels by the offer of enormous plunder, and never good for hard fighting.

What we require is a reserve recruited from among the propertied classes such as Rome possessed previous to the decline and fall of the Republic in the time of Marius and Sylla. Mommsen in his "History of Rome" has shown how the new military organisation introduced by Marius led inevitably to the destruction of the liberty of the Roman citizens. A mercenary army recruited from among the proletariate is first dependent on the general (page 203) and then becomes his master. A militia recruited from among the landowners and propertied classes will prove to be an invaluable reserve to our native army in a time of danger.

They had, moreover, long ago brought the Italian allies to take part to a very great extent in war service; but in their case, too, just as among the Roman burgesses, military duty was chiefly imposed on the propertied classes. Nevertheless, the Roman military system down to the time of Marius rested in the main on that primitive organisation of the civic militia. But it was no longer suited for the altered circumstances of the State. The better classes of society kept aloof more and more from service in the army, and the Roman and Italic middle class in general was disappearing; while on the other hand the considerable military resources of the extra-Italian allies and subjects had become available, and the Italian proletariate also, properly applied, afforded at least a very useful material for military objects.—Page 200 of Vol. 3 of Mommsen's "History of Rome."

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your issue of the 22nd May, 1876, I observe that the "scheme of reform of the Native Army" in India is under the consideration of the new Commander-in-Chief, Sir Fred. Haines.

The increase of the pay of the native soldier (i.e., Sepoy) is of great importance, in fact, is necessary, but the "status" of the native officers can never be raised till these men are sent home. As regards the very old subadars little can be done, but the younger subadars and jemadars should be sent (say two from each regiment) under the care of old Indian officers. On their return they would be vastly improved and do immense good; after that increase of pay should be given for a knowledge of "English," of "history," and "military matters generally." Lord Napier has been the friend of the army, and he knows that additional European officers are required for the Indian army. In his farewell order he has drawn the attention of officers to the necessity of being on friendly terms with the native soldiers, &c. There are many officers who know the language well, and these should escort such native officers home. A place in London should be set apart under some Indian officer of known experience, and there (with the assistance of a few others) a certain number of these native officers should be located for one year. There should be certain hours for classes, and a portion of the day set apart to take these men about. It is to be hoped that Sir Frederick Haines will not be guided too much by what old officers of the European army (who have not served with native troops, and who do not understand their language) say of the "drill" of the Sepoys. I can assert that there are regiments in Bengal that could brigade with any of the regiments in England, and "hold their own" in Hyde Park. The solidity of a British soldier's step cannot be surpassed, but the Sepoy is excellent for quick movements. I have heard old officers (who do not understand the natives) speak of the Sepoys with contempt. These look to the "marching past," &c., &c.,—as all in all. Now my experience is this—viz., to make the Sepoys love and respect the Government is far more important than to find them "dress" like European soldiers when "marching past." To make these men disgusted you have only to bully them on trivial matters of "setting up" and marching. When there are no courts-martial, no crime, and the men love their European commandants, you will find a loyal army. Some think that the mutiny was caused by want of strictness in little matters, and would try (in 1876) to adopt the system in British regiments at home. If this is done, if old Indian officers' opinions are ignored, the native army will soon be unable to enlist. At present the service is a prize, but if men (who have served for years) are sent to undergo "recruit drill" you will cause utter discontent. I have seen men as police on the railways in England (fine six-foot fellows) who told me they left the Household troops because "soldiering was irksome." Now "man is man," and when a man finds he has no peace—is perpetually watched, &c., he soon sighs for more freedom. Lord Napier knows the Indian army well, and all who have served in India will tell you that the "Sepoy" requires a totally different system to the European soldier. A man who cannot speak the native languages is not one to consult when the object to be attained is to secure loyal soldiers (i.e. Sepoys), and not a set of men to be admired for mere "precision of step" and "polished accoutrements" only. The native soldier cannot be made into a European—therefore he must not be bullied about matters he cannot ever accomplish to the degree of the British soldier. One is a patriot, the other a "mercenary," and the "mercenary" is ever the "irregular soldier," and cannot be equal to the noble PATRIOT.—Yours, obediently, PULTUN.

AFFAIRS IN KHELAT.—IV.

Between May and December, 1862, however, these two tribes gave so much trouble that the Khan again led a tribal force against them; but, owing to the disloyalty of the levies, with little result. The fact is that matters had now come to a crisis between him and the Chiefs. In June, 1861, the Jhallawan Chief had again rebelled, consequent upon an insult put upon him by the Khan, and, though the Chief of Sarawan interposed at the time to patch up the quarrel, his sympathies were with his brother Chief. In the commencement of 1865, the united Chiefs, again rebelling, elected the Khan's cousin to the throne, and the latter, with their aid, captured Khelat, cutting down Khodadad with his own hand. Khodadad, however, recovered, and found refuge with some of the minor Chiefs of Sarawan, who escorted him to an asylum on the British frontier. Meanwhile the Jhallawan Chief, finding the usurper no more amenable to his influence than had been the Khan, murdered him in June, 1864, and recalled Khodadad to the throne.

The additional subsidy of £5,000 had been withdrawn in 1862, owing to the failure of the Khan to coerce the Murrees. Subsequently, after the revolution in 1863, even the original £5,000 was for a time withheld, but eventually maintained to him. During the period of its suspension neither the usurper nor the Chiefs enhanced or reimposed transit dues on trade in consequence thereof. It appears evident that our conduct in this matter of the subsidy was rather spasmodic, and sufficient time was not allowed for results, which naturally develop more slowly in Belochistan than in more civilised districts.

After his restoration, the Khan, taught by experience, no longer trusted, like his father, to maintaining a party in the Confederacy, or to setting the malcontents against each other, but proceeded to employ the subsidy of £5,000 still continued to him in increasing his mercenary troops to a strength adequate to overawe the tribes. He had before maintained only some 400 men, but their hostile attitude, on one occasion in 1859, towards the Political Agent at Khelat, whose position and influence were seriously compromised, till his escort was largely increased—had necessitated the Khan's being authoritatively recommended to suppress them. It was now, however, evident that he could not maintain himself without them, so no interference was exercised when the minister raised the force in 1864 to upwards of 2,000 men, which strength, supported by the Khanehzad forces, and such tribal levies as the Khan could depend on, was amply adequate, as the event proved, to maintain his authority.

In February, 1865, the Sarawan and Jhallawan Chiefs again united to rebel, and were supported by simultaneous risings in Nal, Wad and Beyla. The minister, Wulli Mahomed, however, fell upon the rebels and defeated them in detail. He no longer had to await for the means of operating the slow unwilling levy of a tribal force—thus allowing the rebellion to draw to a head—but extinguished the rising at once at the head of the standing forces. The Jhallawan Chief, the Jam of Las Beyla, and Nuruddin, the Chief of the Mingul clan, which inhabits Wad, were all taken prisoners, while the Chief of Sarawan fled to Candahar. In August, 1867 the Chief of Jhallawan died in prison, under suspicious circumstances, and the Khan immediately committed an unheard-of violation of the constitution in nominating his own infant son to the chiefship.

This act produced another rising of the tribes, headed by Mulla Mahomed, the Chief of Sarawan. They were, however, again defeated by the Minister, and Mulla Mahomed, with three other Chiefs, took refuge with the Nurrees. By the Political Agent's intercession Mulla Mahomed was allowed, in February, 1868, to take up his abode in Sebee (a district north of the mouth of the Bolan Pass) till the descent of the Khan from Khelat to Gundava in the ensuing winter should permit of some permanent arrangement being negotiated. The Khan, however, has never left Khelat since 1865 (till 1873, when he met the Viceroy at Sukkur) for fear of insurrections, and he did not, on this occasion either, join the annual winter migration to the warmer plains. Moreover, the Jam of Beyla and the Mingul Chief of Wad, who had been pardoned and released after their capture in 1865, again broke out in January, 1869, and obtained some success, being only prevented by our intervention from plundering the whole of Gundava. This was a very formidable rising, comprising the whole of the southern tribes. They assembled the council of the Confederacy, and, being joined by Mulla Mahomed from Sebee, they drew up a Petition of Right to secure a hearing, for which they marched upon Khelat.

This Petition complained of the entertainment of mercenaries with means in which, under the constitution, the members of the Confederacy were entitled to share, and also with the proceeds of estates confiscated from the petitioners, for rebellion; also of the infringement of the constitution in the nomination by the Khan of his son as Chief of Jhallawan, which office was hereditary in the family of the deceased chief; lastly of the Khan's governing entirely through the Khanehzad officials, contrary to the constitution, to the exclusion of the Chiefs from any voice in the State councils. The Petition further demanded the restoration of the estates of those Chiefs whose property had been confiscated. The Political Agent interposed to check the march of the tribes, and invited the leaders to Khelat to discuss the subjects of the Petition. On their way they were waylaid by assassins, one of the Chiefs being killed, and three wounded. On this the rebel forces marched direct upon Khelat determined to insist on the remedy of their grievances. The Political Agent met them with a view to intervention, and succeeded in wringing a promise from the Khan of the restoration of the estates of the Chief of Sarawan. Nevertheless, the rebels pressed on, and were only at last checked by the judicious firmness of the Political Agent and the resolute attitude assumed by the Khan. The latter, confident in his mercenary troops and Khanehzad clients, moved out to meet the rebels, and the latter, notwithstanding the efforts of Azad Khan, Chief of Khoran, to keep them firm, were eventually induced by the Political Agent to disperse; his intervention being promised to obtain from the Khan the restoration of estates arbitrarily confiscated.

In the autumn of the same year, however, the Jam of Beyla and Nuruddin, the Mingul Chief, dissatisfied with the results of the Political Agent's action in the matter of their claims, again raised the standard of rebellion. This time, however, the minister fell upon them promptly, before the infection could spread, and utterly routed them. The Jam took refuge in British territory, and his district of Las Beyla was confiscated, Nuruddin, the Mungul Chief, was taken prisoner, the Chief of Punjgoor was expelled and replaced by a personal dependent of the Khan, the Chief of Kharan fled to Seistan Mulla Mahomed, Chief of Sarawan, again retired to Sebee, and thence, distrusting the Khan's promises of pardon, fled for the second time to the Murrees. After attempting unsuccessfully to obtain access to the Punjab authorities through the Chief of the Murrees, he subsequently proceeded to Candahar, whence he returned in the end of 1871 to head a rebellion in Sarawan which broke out consequent on the detention of the Minister with the standing forces in the south, where he was consolidating the Khan's authority in Las Beyla, Punjgoor and Mekran. Wallee Mahomed returned in all haste, and again succeeded in defeating the rebels after a severe battle, in which he was grievously wounded. This was the last occasion in which the discontented barons appealed to the arbitrament of arms. Since then their intrigues have been directed towards obtaining their objects through British interference, and by playing off the Punjab authorities against those of Sind.

While Wulli Mahomed was thus using the British subsidy wherewith to bring into subjection the Brahoe Chiefs, he had not the means to overcome the recusance of the Beloch tribes of Murrees and Boogtees. These continued to disturb the Punjab frontier, and the officers of that frontier eventually took measures of their own. The Chiefs of those clans were subsidised direct from Dera Ghazi Khan, and the frontier has remained since 1868, perfectly free from attack. But the Punjab officers have gone further; they have mixed themselves up in the relations between these tribes and the Khan—and even between Mulla Mahomed and the Khan—always in view only of the protection of our own interests, of the peace of the frontier and of the security of the trade passing to and from our territories through Belochistan. The success of these measures has caused such interference between the Khan and his subjects to be regarded as the panacea for the troubles which have kept the border disturbed for the last fifteen years, and each such measure has led to the desire to extend our interference still further. As the Sind authorities are not disposed to go in this direction as far as those of the Punjab, but are rather disposed to support the Khan's authority, a deputy commissioner from the latter has, as stated in the commencement of this paper, been deputed to Khelat, and the Commissioner of the Derajat, to whom the relations with the Khan have been confided, has proceeded to Sind to be nearer the immediate scene of the negotiations.

The fact is there has long been a difference of opinion among the British officers as to the mode of dealing with this state of things. The Punjab officials, seeing that since the reduction of the Khan's subsidy he had withdrawn his posts from the Murree and Boogtee headquarters, and was so far unable to hold them in restraint that his own district of Gundava suffered more from their raids than either the Punjab or Sind borders—and seeing also that within a few years these tribes, thus left unchecked, had killed and wounded 340 British subjects on the Punjab border alone, and plundered £15,000 worth of property—decided that our border must be protected by immediate measures, whether such measures were prejudicial or otherwise to the Khan. The Sind border is protected by British posts in such strength, and by a repressive policy so stern, that it has long enjoyed an almost entire immunity from attack. The Punjab policy, on the contrary, has not been one of strength and repression, it has been that border which has mainly suffered; and the Bolan trade being completely unprotected is exposed to incessant attack. [It is only recently that a caravan of two hundred merchants was cut off to a man by the Brahoes.] The objects, therefore, brought forward as requiring immediate attention were:—(1) The protection of the Punjab border from raids, and (2) the protection of our trade within Khelat territory.

THE NEW BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—It is rumoured in well-informed quarters that the Rev. W. H. Milman, M.A., Rector of St. Augustine's, Watling-street, a Minor Canon of St. Paul's, and lately President of Sion College, is to be the new Bishop of Calcutta. The rev. gentleman is a son of the late Dean of St. Paul's, and cousin of the late Bishop of Calcutta.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

FURLOUGH ALLOWANCES.

The Pioneer observes that to accomplish a small aggregate saving for the public treasury the present regulations subject a few private purses here and there to extravagant loss. The simplest moralists will allow that it is never worth while to behave badly unless a substantial advantage is to be gained, so that we feel sure any Government, realising the situation, would rather be just in the matter than mean. But the broader view of the subject gives it greater importance. When the rupee began to fall in value we ventured to say that the country, and not the servants of Government, ought to bear the loss, as far as salaries are concerned. The loss incurred on current expenditure here need not be considered, because in the long run prices must adjust themselves to diminished values of coin. But the understood contract with a Government servant imported from Europe is that he shall be paid in a medium of exchange available if he chooses for other purposes than those of expenditure in India. Now, unforeseen circumstances have put a new complexion on this part of the bargain. The Government is left legally irresponsible, but not so morally, it seems to us. The situation ought to be faced. Compromises about rates of exchange a little more favourable than the market rate, to be given in some cases and withheld in others, are beneath the dignity of Government. They resemble the Maharajah Holkar's arrangement—by which employés are to be paid in advance at a discount of ten per cent.—far too closely to be creditable. That proportion of an Indian civil or military officer's pay which he bona fide wishes to spend (on himself or others) in England, ought to be paid to him in sterling. There need be no difficulty about fixing a Government rate of exchange for such payments. An officer should be able to claim that a reasonable fractional part of his salary should be paid to his agent in England in English money. All that Government has to guard against is the dishonesty which might induce some officers, if they had the chance, to draw money in England and remit it at a profit at the market rates to India; but that would be stopped.

THE NATIVE PRESS.

The Englishman holds that the plan adopted by the late Government, of indiscriminately closing the former channels between the vernacular journals and the Anglo-Indian Press, has not worked well. It has, in the first place, rendered the tone of the Vernacular Press distinctly more disaffected. We have within the past twelve months seen articles conceived in a spirit of overt sedition, compared with which the worst diatribes that we used to complain of under the old system were merely tentative efforts of carefully worded and timorous disloyalty. No Vernacular printer would have dared to set up such articles under a system which subjected them to the criticism alike of the loyal native journals and of the whole Anglo-Indian Press. He might care little about such censures; but he instinctively knew that there were limits which, if he trangressed, might awaken so loud a condemnation as would force the Government to put in force certain clauses of the Penal Code. Experience has now taught him that there may be English rulers who will submit to any slander on the British rule if only they can manage that it shall not reach the ears of those who dispense honours in England. For, in the second place, the suppression of the précis of the Vernacular Press has rendered the Government distinctly more indifferent to its disloyalty. The channel by which the English journals become cognisant of expressions of disaffection, or seditious suggestions, being closed, the temptation becomes irresistible to a weak or timid Governor to submit to anything in secret, rather than to make known the existence of such unpleasant things by resenting them. In the third place, the suppression of the system by which native grievances reached the Anglo-Indian, and, through it, the English, Press, has merely transferred the ventilation of such grievances to a more inconvenient, and a more perilous field. Formerly, if any native body, or local magnate, had a complaint, there were a dozen Vernacular newspapers eager to make the most of his real or fancied wrongs, with the certainty of their duly coming before every officer of importance in the Government, and of promptly finding their way into the columns of the Anglo-Indian Press. This safe and politic outlet for native complaints has been closed. Rajas and Indian bodies perfectly realise the fact, and now post ex parte statements of their case vid Brindisi to some grievance-monger in England, or to a newspaper office in Fleet-street. Instead of the masterpiece of folly which the late Government attempted at Haidarabad filtering through the Mahratta journals into the Bombay papers, and thence languidly reaching our own columns, it appeared, with all the vigour of a practised pen, in the Pall Mall Gazette. The gun grievances of the Maharaja of Bardwan no longer supply pabulum to Bengali editors, through whom they were wont to become the subject of fitful discussion in the Calcutta newspapers. His Highness has adopted the much more effectual advertisement of writing a gentlemanly letter to the Times, forwarding some pretty medals for the boys who behaved well in the affair of the Goliath, and thus secured the ear of the English public when the question of his status and ambition for a salute is again raised. We have cited examples in which natives of rank have intelligently grasped the situation, and not unfairly acted upon it. It would be invidious to select instances of another sort. But the method is now known to every native who has an ill-founded claim to prosecute, or a legitimate object to gain; and the Indian grievance-mongers are rapidly becoming a recognised profession in England. The late Government closed the old channel by which native complaints reached, in a somewhat roundabout way, the English press; the natives have quickly realised the fact, and they have found a remedy.

AN ARMY WITHOUT OFFICERS.

The Englishman thinks there is no point which strikes the Army Reformer more than the manner in which we have frittered away the very material we need with our regiments. We have frequently drawn attention to the constant orders being issued in which a captain or a subaltern is taken away from his regiment for some Civil or Staff duties. We lately drew attention to Captain Toker, of the 18th Native Infantry, being taken from that corps and appointed Cantonment Magistrate at Jhansi, as if some officer, covenanted or uncovenanted, could not have undertaken the duties of such an office. If we turn to the Army List of the 1st of April, we find fifteen subaltern officers and seventy-one captains returned as in Civil employ, giving a total of eighty-six officers lost to the army, and these officers of the very grades so much needed with regiments. Unless this matter is taken into immediate consideration, we can never hope to improve on the state of deficiency existing in officers with corps. If it is imperative to strengthen the Civil Service by detailing military men for Civil duties, it should be within the power of the Commander-in-Chief to recommend at once that eighty-six cadetships be given out to meet the deficiency. It is useless talking about organisation when with one stroke of the pen a young officer is removed from a British regiment to fill up a vacancy in a native regiment, and the next day an officer of the same rank is removed to Civil employ. It is quite time now that we should arrive at some fixed conclusion as to what these captains and subalterns, who thus early in their career have left military employ, are to expect. Are they civilians, or are they military men? It is not alone for Civil employ that we notice that captains and subalterns are withdrawn from their regiments; there are lieutenants acting as assistant engineers in the Survey Department and in the Army Commissariat Department. There are no less than three in the latter employ. There are two probationers admitted provisionally to the Staff Corps, who thus early in their career, are appointed assistant engineers in the Public Works Department. If these officers have these special proclivities, it might have been the better for the army if they had taken up the profession of civil engineer. But, if the army is to be the means of supply for these duties, we must have a reserve of captains and subalterns. It is impossible to say we can spare them. A captain, or a subaltern, is needed with the 6th Bengal Cavalry. Officers are wanted with the 9th Bengal Cavalry, the 7th Native Infantry, the 11th, 14th, 19th, 20th, 29th, 34th, 36th, and 45th Regiments of Native Infantry. If it is simply necessary to join a native regiment and then obtain interest to leave it, we see no great advantage gained by seeking for probationers from British regiments. We ruin the British regiment, and do no good to the native one. We must have some fixed system. If the probationers are to be assistant engineers, it is far better to allow them to join the Department of Public Works than the army. To return a man as an officer, and to make him a bricklayer at eighteen years of age is rather an anomaly, more especially when the would-be engineer ripens into a full colonel, having never seen anything more warlike than a trowel. How long are we to wait for the Indian cadetship system? Once that is fully inaugurated there will be no harm in allowing any number of young officers to go on Civil employ, so long as the wing obtains a fresh cadet in lieu of him. But an important point bearing on the above question is, under what rules, as regards pension, are these young captains and subalterns who have entered the Staff Corps and have at once left for Civil duties? Are they to obtain their colonel's allowances co-equally with those who entered the Staff Corps in 1861? Are they to obtain the colonel's allowances twelve years after obtaining their lieutenant-colonelcies, when they have never served in the army? It is questions of this nature which require consideration. They affect the well-being of the army as much as the purse of the tax-payer. To let an important matter of this nature remain doubtful for years cannot but have a prejudicial effect.

THE QUEEN'S PRESENTS FROM INDIA.—The magnificent presents sent to the Queen by the Maharajah Sindia, the Maharajah Holkar, the Maharajah of Benares, the Maharajah of Vizianagram, Sir Jung Bahadur, the Rajah of Dhar, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and Siddik Hassan Khan, and which were brought over by the Prince of Wales, were received at Balmoral on Saturday.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA, April 22.—On Wednesday evening last at half-past nine o'clock Lord Lytton held his first levée in Calcutta. In a word, his Excellency followed up a surprising speech with a surprising levée. In the good old days of Dalhousie, Canning, and Elgin, the Viceroy held a levée on some bright morning in the cold weather between eleven and twelve, when the world had dressed and breakfasted, and appeared at its freshest and best. When Sir Charles Trevelyan came out as Financial Minister in 1863 he imparted a "Sir Gregory Hardlines" tone and polish to the various public officers. Prig officials appeared upon the scene,—men who kept daily and hourly accounts of their work, so as to show a creditor and debtor account with Government. Such over-virtuous public servants were inspired by Hardlines to complain that they lost a morning at every levée; as if it would have been a waste of time for loyal subjects to pay their respects to the Viceroy in the forenoon. Sir John, the present Lord Lawrence, was a bit of a Hardlines himself. He hearkened to those complaints, and held his levées at four or five in the afternoon when office work was supposed to be over. Indeed such was that great nobleman's passion for hard work, that many expected his Excellency would receive the distinguished crowd with a quill pen behind each ear; just as old Sir Thomas Munro, of Madras celebrity, was accustomed to administer justice with a pig tail tied up with official red tape. These afternoon levées were never popular; in the hot weather they were simply horrible. The institution of an evening levée is an entirely novel idea. Whether Lord Lytton borrowed it from the evening assemblies of the old Moghul Padishahs, or from the midnight gatherings of the Kings of Siam, or developed it out of his own moral consciousness, must be left to conjecture. It is, however, in strict harmony with my moral sense of the fitness of things; and those who grumbled at the idea of an afternoon levée in the middle of April are at once satisfied with the change of hour. To dress for the afternoon levée, to lose the best part of one's evening drive, and to dress again for dinner, was bad enough in the month of January; in April it would have been like instituting a Black Hole at Government House in the hottest part of the afternoon. To drive out through the cool air after dinner was quite another matter; and the levée was in every respect a success. The arrangements for dividing the multitude into little sets of orderly gentlemen were satisfactory. There was a little squeezing and "a trifle for broken glass;" but gentlemen entered the presence with their toilets in a tolerable state of repair, and without that smashed-up appearance which was too often the result of undue squeezing in days of yore. On the morning after the levée, Miss Milman, the sister of the late Bishop, took her departure by the Cathay. At her express wish a few only of her lady friends accompanied her to the place of embarkation. The death of Bishop Milman threw a gloom over Calcutta society. It did not perhaps create a shock like that which was felt some ten years ago when Bishop Cotton was drowned in the Brahmaputra; but for all that the loss of a Bishop whose piety, energy, and common sense had endeared him to all who knew him was deeply mourned throughout India. How much of the late Bishop's usefulness was due to the co-operation of his sister is known only to the few. It is to be hoped that Time, the great consoler, will take away the bitterness of grief, and should Miss Milman ever find opportunity for preparing a biography of her deceased brother, the world at large, and generations yet to come, might profit by the memory of his life and labours. Lord Lytton leaves Calcutta by this evening's train, and expects to reach Simla by Tuesday, the 25th inst. After his Excellency's departure Calcutta will sink into heat and dulness.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE PANJAB ANJUMAN.—At a late meeting of the Panjab Anjuman, proposals were made to accept the invitations of the forthcoming Congress of Orientalists at St. Petersburg, by sending there a delegate and certain publications of a linguistic and antiquarian interest.

THE LATE MR. BOUGHTON NEWMAN.—We regret to hear of the death of Mr. Boughton Newman, of the firm of Messrs. T. E. Thomson and Co., off Galle, on his way to England, where he was proceeding for the purpose of recruiting his health. Mr. Newman did good service to the Calcutta community as an unpretending but conscientious and hard working Justice of the Peace, and his untimely death will, we believe, be regretted by many in this city.—Englishman.

MEMORIAL TO THE LATE BISHOP MILMAN.—We (Indian Church Gazette) understand that a scheme for placing a window in Rawul Pindee Church as a local memorial to Bishop Milman at the station where he entered into his rest has been set on foot. It is proposed that it should be a ladies' memorial, subscriptions from ladies alone being received, and no single subscription is to exceed Rs. 2-8. Subscriptions will be received by Mrs. Crawford Bromehead, Rawul Pindee. We have no doubt the scheme will meet with ready response.

CHOLERA.—A considerable amount of cholera seems to prevail in Bengal at this time. It is said to be fatal among groups of coolies working on the Northern Bengal State Railway, among whom we heard of a loss of 150 in one day at one part of the line. The disease also prevails in the Terai below Darjeeling; and from what we learn it seems that fears are entertained lest it finds its way to the Sanitarium. Cases are said to have occurred in April in tea-gardens at Kurseong, about half way between the plains and Darjeeling.—Pioneer, May 2.

REMISSION OF SENTENCE.—The sentence of one month's rigorous imprisonment lately passed by the Calcutta Southern Division Magistrate on Captain Richardson, commander of the American steamer Cromwell, has, we read, been commuted by the Lieutenant-Governor to fourteen days' rigorous imprisonment, on a memorial forwarded to him by the prisoner, backed by the American Consul. The petition set forth the fact of the captain being in ill-health. His Honour is further said to have directed the superintendent of the jail to release the captain in the event of his symptoms becoming more unfortunate. The fine inflicted has not been interfered with. —Pioneer.

CAVALRY ARMS.—It is high time that reform should be directed to the armament of the Bengal cavalry, more particularly the Lancer regiments. Every such regiment has twelve men in each troop armed with a carbine. This makes an aggregate of seventy-two men in the regiment. Now, the carbine—an old-world, muzzle-loading, smooth-bore—is about as useful to its holder as a pop-gun. It will throw a ball, sometimes, as far, perhaps, as a good bottle of soda-water will send a cork. As Mark Twain would say, six of them might hurt a full-grown man. The 11th Bengal Lancers stationed at Nowshera has just sent seventy men to the front armed in this fasnion. It is not hard to imagine the disadvantages under which these unhappy troopers labour, when blazed at from cover by an Affridi armed with an Enfield or a matchlock, carrying well for three or four hundred yards.—Pioneer.

THE CIVILIANS' GRIEVANCE.—We had hoped to have heard by this time the decision of the Secretary of State on the North-West Civilians' grievance despatch. If the Secretary of State had at once sanctioned the grant of full pensions, to men of twenty-one years' service, several senior servants would have immediately retired, and relief would thus have been given to those of 1857. If sanction is withheld for a few months more, no one will care to take pension till after next cold weather. This delay is much to be regretted, but, still, it must not be forgotten that Lord Salisbury could scarcely sanction such important measures without consulting his Council, and the Council will not like to give their opinion till each member has recorded a minute on the subject. We believe that the delay has been caused solely by the Members of Council taking a little longer over their minutes than was expected; but we hope to get more certain intelligence shortly.—Pioneer.

COPPER IN KULU.—The correspondent of the Delhi Gazette writes:—I do not know that I ever mentioned the curious copper deposits of Bilan in Kulu, a great mass of quartz and quartzose rocks, extending some three or four miles, holding the copper in irregular masses of all sizes, from a pin's point up to that of an elephant, as the natives describe it. There is no trace of any regular lode or vein; it is as if Dame Nature had been going in for the making of a plum-pudding, with quartz for flour, and copper for plums, and had somehow gone to sleep over the stirring, and let all the plums get together in places, whilst in others they are a lá purser's duff, not within hail of one another. Anyhow, it is a very curious formation, and I suppose the formation of regular lodes, which we are taught occurs through the solvent powers of water far above boiling point, was arrested in some way or another, and our quartz pudding was left half boiled and half stirred.

THE STORMING OF DELHI.—A stone slab in commemoration of the blowing up of the Kashmir Gate at Delhi is being erected by the orders of Lord Napier of Magdala at the scene of the exploit. The inscription is as follows:—

On the 14th September, 1857, the British force stormed Delhi. It was after sunrise on that day that the undermentioned party advancing from Ludlow Castle in the face of a heavy fire, and crossing this bridge, which had been almost totally destroyed, lodged powder bags against and blew in the right leaf of this gate, thus opening a way for the assaulting column:—

FATAL ACCIDENT.—An accident, attended with fatal consequences, took place on Thursday, at Colvin's Gnaut. Mr. Platt, Assistant Harbour Master, was about going on board the ship Merchantman, in company with Mr. MacKinlay, the chief engineer of the steam fire-engine, when a sudden and melancholy accident occurred, resulting in the death of the former gentleman. Messrs. Platt and MacKinlay had, it appears, hired a dinghy to go on board the vessel, but instead of going on board by the aft ladder, they preferred going up by the foot rope ladder amidships. Mr. MacKinlay went up on deck by means of this ladder, and was followed by Mr. Platt. The latter gentleman, however, had hardly got upon deck when he struck his head against an iron bolt in the main brace, and in falling back fell on the gunwale of the dinghy, evidently breaking his neck in the fall. Mr. MacKinlay and Mr. Preche, the second officer of the Merchantman, immediately jumped after the fallen man, but Mr. Platt was never seen to rise to the surface of the water again. What makes this unfortunate accident sadder is the fact that the wife of the deceased was on board the ship expecting her husband, who, otherwise in good health and strong, thus almost instantaneously met a watery grave. We regret to learn that Mr. Platt's family has been left utterly unprovided for. A subscription is, we understand, being raised in their behalf.—Englishman, May 1.

ANECDOTE OF LORD NAPIER.—The following characteristic anecdote of Lord Napier (of Magdala) is current in India, but we are not aware that it has been repeated in England:—Lord Napier is well known as a very hard rider, and one of the best-mounted men in India, though, like every enthusiast about horses, he always wants more and better ones than he has got. A story is told of him that when he was going on one of his tours of inspection, accompanied by his then adjutant-general, Colonel Thesiger, he one morning rode very slowly, apparently absorbed in thought. When it came to about nine o'clock, and they were still some miles from their place of encampment, Colonel Thesiger suggested that they should push on, as it was getting hot, and they had yet a long way to go. "Getting hot, is it?" said his lordship, but he did not quicken his pace. However, a few minutes after he put spurs to his horse and went away across country at a tremendous pace, soon leaving Colonel Thesiger, himself a good rider and well-mounted, far behind. Lord Napier never drew rein till he found himself opposite his tent, when he said, as if in continuation of his former remark, "Find it hot, do you?" and getting no answer, he looked round in apparent surprise, and seeing no adjutant-general, he said, "Dear me, where's Thesiger? I thought he said he found it hot," and then dismounted, chuckling. When Colonel Thesiger turned up some time afterwards, the chief blandly hoped he had suffered no inconvenience from the sun. This is but one of many good stories told of the ex-Commander-in-Chief of the Bengal Army.

DOVETON COLLEGE.—The following, which appeared in the Statesman a few days ago, will give much satisfaction, not in Calcutta only, but over the far wider area from which the Doveton draws its students:—"We understand that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has increased the grant of Rs. 150 per mensem, which he sanctioned last year for the Doveton College, to Rs. 250 from the 1st of April, in consequence of a further representation on the subject from the Committee of Management. Though the grant is not quite so large as might be desirable, it is no doubt, considering the pressing claims on the Government, as much as could be conveniently spared. The Doveton College has therefore every reason to be grateful to Sir Richard Temple for this fresh token of the interest he takes in it. This interest doubtless arises from the fact that the Doveton has furnished a large number of valuable servants to the State, both in the Covenanted and Uncovenanted Services, with not a few of whom Sir Richard has come into personal contact during his past official career, and some of whom he has learnt to hold in just esteem. It is but fair to Sir Richard Temple to state in this connection that he has manifested a really warm interest in the schools for the education of the middle and lower classes of Europeans and Eurasians, and has thus broken through the traditional policy of the local Government, which had hitherto quietly ignored the claims of those important sections of the community. He has helped some of these institutions with grants; and if he has not assisted a larger number, it is because the resources of the Government are by no means inexhaustible. He has also never lost an opportunity of visiting the schools, both great and small, thereby encouraging them with the weight of his personal influence."

STATION TALK.

MYSOR, April.—Our indefatigable Chief Commissioner has been here during the past week; he is on his way en route to Kurg, and so round by Munzerabad to dispose of the Coffee Planters' grievances, real or fancied. He has been inspecting the Rajah's High School here, and expressed himself well pleased with the manner in which the higher classes had got hold of the idiom of the English language, a very difficult matter to teach Hindus generally, and which consequently reflects credit on the teachers. Regarding this school, I may as well mention here that Mr. Candy, B.A., of the Elphinstone Training College, Bombay, has been appointed Headmaster of it, and Mr. Haldwell, now acting, reverts to his permanent appointment at Hassam; the Chief Commissioner is winning golden opinions for his hard work, but he is not quite so genial as his predecessor, Sir Richard Meade; he is, however, very liberal, and the administration is developing under his generous rule. H.H. the Maharajah, with his guardian, Colonel Malleson, have gone away to Ooty, to hunt Jacks and enjoy themselves generally during the hot weather. Mysor does not miss them much, and things go on in the usual dull routine. The Rev. D. G. Clarke, our popular, earnest, and devoted Chaplain, has been compelled under medical advice to proceed to the Shevaroys for the benefit of his health; he has never spared himself, and the constant toil and fatigue undergone by him have quite undermined his constitution. Some of his parishioners presented him with an elegant Communion Service on the eve of his departure; it is probable that he will not return here, but his successor has not yet been appointed. I believe the Wesleyan minister also purposes leaving the station on a tour, but of course towards the cooler and more elevated regions of Coorg and other places; we shall thus be left without a padre of any kind for a month or two. The Judicial Assistant's Court closed from the 2nd April, and nearly all the Courts of the same grade throughout the Province have adjourned from the same date; but the Munsiff's Courts are not to have any vacation, as some of them are in arrears with their work. The lawyers are glad of this, otherwise they would have only a few appeals to depend on for their income during the next two months. The weather continues very hot, though we have had a shower or two; water is as scarce as ever,—the projectors for increasing the supply saying much and doing little—the streets and drains filthy and malarious; altogether unpleasant is the state of our ancient city of Mysor.—Madras Athenæum Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

PERSIAN HORSES.—A large number of Persian horses have recently been brought into Bangalor by dealers, some of which it is hoped will find their way to Madras, where a market will be readily found for them.

DEATH OF MAJOR PICKERING, R.A.—The Madras Times hears from Secunderabad that Major Pickering, lately commanding the Heavy Battery there (2-5 R.A.), died unexpectedly on the night of Friday, the 28th of April, the cause of death being heat apoplexy. He was about to be invalided to England, his health having completely broken down of late. It is only a few weeks since the Commander-in-Chief ordered a special medical board to assemble and report on the deceased officer's state of health and physical efficiency.

MILITARY.—Colonel A. Cooper, Madras Staff Corps, became entitled to "colonel's allowance" on the 29th April. The other Madras officers who will qualify this year for the allowance are Colonels A. Howlett, J. Buchanan, W. T. William, G. T. Redcliffe, W. H. Watts, C. P. Y. Inscott, C. R. Stainforth, W. Crewe, C. M. Shakespear, and Major-General Sir A. T. Wilde. In 1877 nine officers will qualify, in 1878 twenty-three, in 1879 fourteen, in 1880 thirty, in 1881 fifteen, and in 1882 fourteen. Eighteen officers are at present in receipt of the allowance.

CHOLERA IN SOUTHERN INDIA.—We regret to say that very unsatisfactory accounts reach us regarding the public health in some parts of Southern India. Cholera is said to be committing great ravages, and the doctors are having hard times of it. The history of the last outbreak of cholera will be very curious when it comes to be written, for the way the disease has prevailed on this occasion is quite unprecedented in the annals of this epidemic. Places from which it made its disappearance have been again and again revisited, after short intervals, and we need not say with what result. As yet Madras has escaped, but with the experience of other stations before us, we cannot be too sure that the disease has done with us. Indeed, who can say how soon we, too, may have to deplore its reappearance amongst us?—Madras Times, May 6.

PRESIDENCY COLLEGE.—The annual meeting of the Presidency College was celebrated in the hall of the College, Chepauk, on Thursday last, April 27, presided over by the Hon. Mr. Justice Holloway, C.S.I. A large number of gentlemen official, and non-official, both European and Native, interested in the subject of education, assembled to take part in the proceedings. The business of the evening was commenced by the Director of Public Instruction, Colonel Macdonald, giving an address, after which Mr. Thomson, the Principal of the College, read the annual report. The distribution of prizes next followed by the chairman, at the conclusion of which the learned gentleman delivered an elaborate and eloquent address, at the close which the proceedings terminated.—Madras Athenæum, April 29.

BASTAR.—The latest news from Bastar is that the Deputy Commissioner is at present visiting the villages round about Jugdalpore. A report was brought to him last week that about 400 rebels had assembled round the village of Duntherwade, about fifty miles south-west of Jugdalpore, and that they threatened to attack and burn the village. As he was about proceeding with a company of the 8th Regiment to its rescue he heard that the report was untrue. The rebels have committed dacoity in the village of Omerkote, in the Jagpore country. The disturbance at Bastar has been satisfactorily settled, says the Madras Athenæum, by the dismissal of the Dewan. The Deputy Commissioner does not need any further assistance, and therefore the wing of the 7th Regiment returns on its march back to-morrow morning. The Deputy Commissioner intends to remain at Bastar for eight days with the company of the 8th Regiment, and then return to Sironcha. The men of the 8th Regiment are not in good health; many cases of dysentery have occurred among them.

MR. DAVID LOGAN.—The Chief Engineer of the South Indian Railway, we learn, proceeds on a year's furlough to England per s.s. Viceroy. Mr. Logan's connections with the company has been a very extended one. He originally came out to the country as an Assistant Engineer of the Third Class, and after filling the intermediate grades, was appointed the Company's Chief Engineer in India. He resigned the service in 1866, and was connected with the Bombay Reclamation Company, which having failed, Mr. Logan returned to England, where he was speedily re-employed in the company's service, and came out to Negapatam in 1869, to relieve Mr. Betts, the popular agent of the company, who went home for six months. Mr. Logan has been in India without a break since 1869, has successfully completed the Southern Extension of the South Indian Railway, and done much towards completing the Northern Extension. His furlough has been well earned, and we wish him a speedy return to India. Mr. Robert White, the Deputy Chief Engineer, will be Acting Chief Engineer during Mr. Logan's absence.—South Indian Post.

THE SILADAR HORSE.—From the Mysor Report just to hand we find that the strength of the Siladar Horse now stands at a total of 1,300, divided into three regiments, organised on the revised establishment as sanctioned by the Government of India. The Head-Quarters of these three regiments are located at the stations of Bangalor, Mysor, and Shimoga, detachments being thrown out along the frontiers wherever the necessity for Siladars has been pointed out by the Civil Officers. The officers are reported to have displayed both zeal and intelligence in learning the details of the new drill. Much still requires to be done in regard to that most essential part of an officer's duty, viz., maintaining strict discipline in lines and at stables and requiring implicit obedience from those under them. The peculiar character of the force and the absence of the example of more highly disciplined troops renders this a very great difficulty. The dress of the Siladars has been improved by dispensing with the handkerchief which tied the turban under the chin. The 3rd Regiment wear a turban of a uniform pattern, and cloth overalls in lieu of the linen trousers hitherto worn.

RUMOURED HONOURS.—The Indian Statesman says:—"Rumour has it that his Excellency the Governor is to be made a baronet, and that the Hon. Messrs. Rogers and Gibbs are to be knighted. We hope the report may prove correct, as this will go towards removing the impression that little has been done in the way of bestowing honours in this Presidency in commemoration of the Prince of Wales's visit."

SUDDEN DEATH OF THE PROPRIETOR OF THE "INDU-PRAKASH.—With unutterable sorrow we have to publish the following telegram from Mahableshwar received to-day:—"Mr. Vishnu Parashuram Shastri Pandit, proprietor of the Indu-Prakash Press, died here of brain-fever only after two days' illness at one Saturday night—irreparable national loss." We have no heart to do more than communicate this sad intelligence.—Indu Prakash, May 1.

SHOOTING MATCH.—A correspondent having offered to back twenty Beloochees "indiscriminately selected" against "any twenty of any corps in India" to shoot a match on a range strange to both "and to win easily," has been taken up by an officer of the 55th at Deolalie. As he has the right to pick the best shots in his regiment, officers as well as men, the challenger's Beloochees have their work cut out for them.

REWARD FOR SAVING LIFE.—A letter from the Royal Humane Society has been received in Bombay, transmitting a testimonial on vellum, and desiring that the same may be presented to Lieut. D. G. Mackenzie, of the 3rd Regiment, Native (Light) Infantry, in recognition of the courage which he displayed, during a flood, at Ahmedabad in September last, which conduced to the rescue of a man in danger of drowning.

PROPOSED RAILWAY.—The Bombay Government is said to have sanctioned the sum of sixty thousand rupees for surveying the line of railway between Dhond and Munmar, viâ Ahmednuggur. If this line is constructed, it will remove a great inconvenience now experienced by travellers who proceed from Munmar towards Madras. The proposed line would shorten the journey from Munmar to Sholapore by 133 miles. There would be no ghats to encounter, but two rivers would have to be bridged.

CHARGE OF FORGERY.—Thomas Henry Downing, who described himself as a native of Norfolk, and the son of a merchant at Norwich, was placed before Colonel G. C. Evezard, the cantonment magistrate of Puna, on the 19th April, for forging a cheque for Rs. 200. It appears that this young man was residing at the Napier Hotel for some time past, and from thence he removed for a night to the Royal Family Hotel, where a gentleman named Mr. Foster Richardson was a visitor. Downing wrote a cheque for Rs. 200, and is alleged to have forged the name of Mr. Forster Richardson; the cheque was drawn on the Bank of Madras, and made payable to Boolackee Custoorchund. The case was adjourned.

GREAT FIRE AT BARODA.—BARODA, May 1.—To-day a great fire broke out in Baroda. About forty houses have been gutted. The fire began at 3 A.M., and is stil burning as I write this, twelve hours afterwards. The pipes laid in Mulharao's time by Curreemjee Allybhoy, contractor, from the Nowluka well, were fortunately in good order, and many buildings were saved by their use. Curreemjee had also the engine pumps in good working order, or half Baroda would have been destroyed. One girl has been burnt. The loss of property is said to be over ten lakhs. The Dewan, Sir T. Madava Row, was present at the fire, and from the roofs of the houses directed the exertions of the men to put out the fire.—Times of India Correspondent.

ARRIVAL OF THE TROOP-SHIP "HIMALAYA."—Her Majesty's troop-ship Himalaya, 3,453 tons, 700 h.p., Captain W. B. Grant, R.N., arrived in harbour on Saturday last, May 6, from Penang, which she left on the 19th April last, with 5 officers, 2 ladies and 3 children, 118 men, 17 women and 44 children of different regiments. During the voyage there was one birth, and one medical officer died of general debility a day after leaving Penang. She has brought 17 time-expired and leave men for England, and most probably she will sail on next Saturday for England with troops from Bombay. The ship Hooghly, 50 miles off Bombay on Saturday 10 A.M., wished to be reported all well. She sailed again the same day for England with 4 officers, 1 lady and 2 children, 90 men, 83 women and 255 children. The following are the names of the officers :—Major and Mrs. H. C. Macdonald and 2 children, 108th regiment, Capt. W. Lansdale, 1-17th Foot, Capt. A. H. Sharp, 73rd Foot, and Surgeon S. B. Gamble, A.M.D.

THE THAKUR OE PALITANA.—The Thakur of Palitana, a small State in Katiawar, has incurred, as the telegraph has already informed our readers, the serious displeasure of the Bombay Government. It appears that some years ago the Thakur obtained permission through the Political Agent of Katiawar, Mr. Peile, to purchase some smooth-bore guns for his police and sowars to make a show with; but that having obtained this permission he proceeded to import, contrary to the law, rifles and carbines. Mr. Peile discovering this, impounded the contraband articles, and the Thakur submitted. Two years later, that is last year, the Thakur visited Bombay, and complained privately to the local Government that the Political Agent had been acting in an oppressive manner, and had forced him to give up the arms which his Excellency had specially permitted him to obtain. When Mr. Peile heard of the charge, the true facts came out, and the Thakur was called on for an explanation, and by much shuffling and equivocation tried to substantiate his charge. He failed, however, so completely in his attempt that the Government of Bombay has published a resolution severely censuring the Thakur's conduct as being "mean and unbecoming the conduct of a Rajput prince," and admonishing him to be careful in the future.—Pioneer.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.—The announced Thanksgiving Service on the safe return of the Prince of Wales from India took place on Saturday afternoon, at St. Paul's Cathedral, before a very large congregation assembled in the nave. A full choir gave with unusually striking effect the magnificent "Te Deum Laudamus" (the Dettingen Te Deum of Handel). The three choirs were assisted by the bands of Her Majesty's Opera, Drury Lane, and of the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden. Dr. Stainer conducted. The performance of the sacred music occupied more than the usual time, consequently the service was much prolonged. It terminated with the Old Hundredth Psalm, sung by the whole congregation. On Saturday night there were illuminations in the City and the West-end to celebrate the return of the Prince, in association with the "Queen's Birthday;" but the evening being wet the illuminations in the City were only partial, the two splendid designs of the Mansion-house and the Goldsmith-hall being the most conspicuous. The Guildhall remained in "darkness visible."

MEETING ON THE KIRWEE PRIZE CLAIMS.

A meeting of officers interested in the Kirwee booty, including several general officers of distinction or their representatives, was held on May 12 at the Charing-cross Hotel, a Mr. W. H. Bradley in the chair. The report of the Select Prize Committee was read and adopted nem. con. for circulation. Among other resolutions it was resolved :—

That in the opinion of this meeting the troops have not been fairly treated by the subordinate departments of the Indian Government regarding the return of movable property belonging to the ex-chiefs of Kirwee in the following particulars :—

1. That the needless addition in the military despatch, dated July 17, 1873 No. 140, of the equivocal term "captured prize" to the lucid and comprehensive orders of the Houses of Lords and Commons, has promoted a disobedience to Parliament and the production of an incorrect account of the enemy's assets.

2. That the suppression of that despatch, No. 140, in the consecutive returns, Nos. 85 and 156 of 1875, requires serious explanation.

3. That the despatch, No. 140 (as reported in the Times of April 9, 1875), was read to the House of Commons on the evening preceding in such a shape as to omit the words which had been improperly attached ; or, if this were not the case, some correction of that report was due to the troops in the interest of truthfulness and good faith.

4. That the presentation of the return of the Kirwee property to Parliament in the incomplete shape in which, according to Lord G. Hamilton's reply to Mr. Gregory on the 23rd ult., it was framed at that date, and which incompleteness has not yet been remedied, is (if the return has been or is to be so presented) an impropriety to which Lord Salisbury's notice should be specially invited in the most respectful way.

It was also unanimously resolved :—

That it is highly expedient that two officers should be formally elected and appointed who will undertake the personal discharge of the office of prize agent, vice Major Chandos Clifton, deceased, and Col. de Renzie Brett, locally incapacitated, and that Major-Gen. Doveton Hodson, C.B., and Col. Freese, late paymaster of the Madras column under Sir G. C. Whitlock's command, be requested to act as prize agents.

A vote of thanks, warmly expressed, was passed to Major-Gen. Colin Mackenzie, C.B., the president of the Select Prize Committee ; and a special vote of thanks having also been given to the chairman, the meeting separated at a quarter-past six.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

The following, in the order of merit, are the successful candidates at the recent open competition for the Civil Service of India, but their selection is conditional on their passing a medical examination, to be held in London within the next few days :—

At a meeting of the Indian section of the Society of Arts, held on Friday evening, under the presidency of Mr. Andrew Cassels, a paper on "Competition and its Effects upon Education" was read by Dr. George Birdwood. In the course of his remarks he commented at length upon the India Office despatch of February 24 of the present year, regarding "the selection and training of candidates for the Indian Civil Service," and feared that it would but serve to confirm and aggravate and rapidly extend the very worse evil of the old system of competition—namely, the degeneration of secondary education throughout England. He was not opposed to competition ; on the contrary, but it was no infallible panacea. The system was a very good one to start with, but a practical experience of it equally indicated its correctness. He would desire to see the education of the country so regulated that every English boy might have a reasonable hope of rising to the highest positions in the Church and State. But competition had failed in securing the same uniformity of physical superiority in the Civil Service as was conspicuous under the old system of patronage. A noticeable proportion of the competition men were undersized, chetif, or wore spectacles, and were really a real source of weakness to the Government of India. It was not the first concern of a Government to secure even the cleverest youths for its service, but the sound, and, according to their natural capacity, the fullest and highest education of all. He doubted if even the efficiency of the public service was best promoted by selecting only the cleverest of the candidates for it. He never knew a clever man worth much who had not a strong saving clause of stupidity in his composition. But the great practical evil of the competitive system was, that it encouraged "cram," and this evil the India-office despatch did not necessarily—though it might accidentally—remedy, and might encourage with a vengeance. The possible evil effects of competition on national education were not thought of in it. The despatch tended to make over all the secondary schooling of the country to the crammers, or to reduce it to the crammers' system. They were making the entrance examinations year by year more and more difficult — as their first object must necessarily now be, not the moral and intellectual discipline of the boyhood of England, but to show an ever-growing percentage of success at the various competitive examination always going on for public services. "The devil take the hindermost" was fast becoming the ideal of education, even in the public schools. If they seriously took to cramming little fellows from twelve to fourteen for entrance into public schools the rising generation would be used up before it reached manhood. A well-known physician, of great experience, told him that the competition for all sorts of scholarships and appointments was showing its evil fruits in the increase of insanity, epilepsy, and other nervous diseases amongst young people of the age from seventeen to nineteen, and especially amongst pupil-teachers; and if admission into the public schools of England was for the future to be regulated by competition, St. Vitus's dance would soon take the place of gout, as the fashionable disease of the upper classes. This was the inevitable result of the ill-digested and ill-regulated system of competition of the public services, and especially the Indian Civil Service, which had prevailed; and he feared that the recent despatch would only be to hasten the threatened revolution in their national secondary schools, and the last state of cramming under the despatch would be worse than the first. Patronage was a greater evil than competition, but it must not be forgotten that competition was only a choice of evils. To remedy the abuses of competition he would throw the public services open to the public schools, the Government inspected schools and colleges, and universities throughout the kingdom. He proposed to give whatever appointments were open by turns to every public school connected with the British Empire. The selection of the candidates should be made by the college professors and tutors, subject to the veto of the Secretary of State, and under the care of a medical board. The best of examiners was the examiner of his own pupils; for no man could measure real knowledge like the teacher. What should be aimed at was regular moderate study and sound and continuous discipline to start the growing man in life in the healthiest bodily and moral condition possible. He objected to children striving for prizes, whether in games or in studies. The fewer prizes won at school the more would probably be won in life. Let their only anxiety be to educate their children well, and suffer no temptation to betray them into cramming, and the whole world was open to them.

A short discussion followed, and the proceedings terminated with the customary votes of thanks.

Miscellaneous.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The report of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, just issued, states that the works have been maintained, and in a sound and efficient condition. There has been an increase in the area of land irrigated, and a disposition shown on the part of the ryots of villages near the canal to obtain benefit from the use of water without paying the prescribed rate.

DEATH OF THE RIGHT HON. SIR JAMES WEIR HOGG, BART.—The Right Hon. Sir James Weir Hogg, Bart., died shortly after nine o'clock on Saturday morning at his residence in Grosvenor-crescent. He had been seriously ill for some weeks, having been seized with a paralytic stroke on the 22nd of April last, from which he never recovered. He is succeeded in the baronetcy by his eldest son, Col. Sir James Macnaghten Hogg, K.C.B., M.P., Chairman of the Metropolitan Board of Works.

ORIENTAL BANK.—At a special meeting of the shareholders of the Oriental Bank, held on Thursday, for the purpose of considering the propriety of recognising the services of Mr. Charles J. Fife-Stuart, the late general manager, by voting a sum of £5,000 to be expended for the benefit of his widow and children, the resolution was moved by Mr. B. B. Greene, and seconded by Mr. Robinson; after a short discussion the resolution confirming the grant was carried unanimously.

COLONEL HEYMAN, R.A.—The Secretary of State for War has been pleased to appoint Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Heyman, Royal Artillery, and formerly secretary to the late Ordnance Select Committee, to the important position of superintendent of the Royal Carriage Department at Woolwich, in succession to Colonel George T. Field, R.A., whose period of staff service will expire on the 8th of July next. In consequence of the absence of Colonel Heyman in India the present superintendent will continue to carry on the duties of the department until the 1st of October next.

NAVAL COURTS-MARTIAL.—Lieut. Charles James Reddie, of the Raleigh, was sentenced by a Court-martial held at Portsmouth, on Tuesday, to lose one year's seniority and to be dismissed his ship, for going to sleep when officer of the watch in Bombay Harbour on March 15, whilst waiting for the embarkation of the Prince of Wales. The same Court also sentenced Sub-lieutenant Eland H. H. Massom, of the Jumna, to lose three years' seniority for smuggling liquor on board at Malta and delaying his recovery from illness by taking a larger quantity of spirits than ordered.

AN INDIAN AND COLONIAL MUSEUM.—We (Globe) understand that her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 have consented to lend the Western Exhibition Galleries at South Kensington for the purpose of receiving and arranging the Colonial collections now being shown at the Philadelphia Exhibition, and that the Council of the Royal Asiatic Society, with that of the Royal Colonial Institute, have asked her Majesty's Government to support the proposal for the erection, on the vacant site of the Thames Embankment, of two museums, one for India, and the other for the Colonies, which together would worthily represent the whole of the possessions of the Crown.

THE P. AND O. STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The half-yearly report of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company has been issued. It recommends the declaration of an ad interim dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum for the six months ended 31st March last, a reduction of working expenses having been attained more than commensurate with the decline in receipts, which the directors regret to say has continued since the issue of the last report. A special meeting is to be held after the general meeting on the 2nd prox., for the purpose of authorising the board to carry out the object of the supplementary charter recently obtained, and converting the present debenture debt into debenture stock bearing 5 per cent. interest.

INTERRUPTION OF THE EASTERN TELEGRAPH SERVICE.—As a good deal of confusion has been caused by the recent interruptions in the submarine cables to the East of India, the Eastern Telegraph Company have issued a notice, giving particulars of the alternative routes for messages, the charges, local rates of postage, &c. The following is the statement of routes for telegrams to Australia and New Zealand:—

During the interruption of the Eastern Extension Company's Madras-Penang and Java-Australia Cables, messages can be sent in the following manner:—1. By wire to Galle, thence by post to Adelaide, and from Adelaide by wire to destination; the next steamer leaves Galle on June 4, and is due at Adelaide on June 24. 2. By post from Galle, Rangoon, Calcutta, or Moulmein to Penang, thence by wire to Singapore; from Singapore to Townsville, in Queensland, by post, and thence by wire to destination; the next steamer from Singapore, available for messages, sent vid India, is appointed to leave there on June 26, and is due at Townsville on July 12.

THE HORSE SHOW AT THE AGRICULTURAL HALL.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales is a prominent contributor, having made five entries connected with his recent tour through India. These consist of Jung Bahadoor, the fine Arab stallion which his Royal Highness rode in the Nepaul Terai and during the celebrated wild elephant hunt; Hussar, another fine Arab stallion frequently ridden by the Prince in India; Nawab, a pony chesnut stallion, not bigger than an ordinary setter, a present to the Royal children by the Nawab of Tonk; Cabullee, a brown stallion pony, so called because he came last from Cabul, but it is thought he is a Jarkund pony; his mane almost sweeps the ground. His Royal Highness also exhibits his splendid Arab charger Comassie, which gained the prize in Class 5 at the Horse Show of 1874. At the request of the manager the Prince has consented to exhibit him, not for competition, but in order that the British public may see this specimen of a high-bred English horse which carried him in India, and never exhibited the slightest alarm either at elephants, camels, tigers, or any strange sights, as a horse possessing high courage and perfect docility combined. The opening day and judging for prizes is fixed for Saturday, June 3.

INDIAN APPEALS.—Gridhari Singh v. Hurdeo Narain Sahoo.—This was an appeal against an order of the High Court of Calcutta made in the exercise of the power of superintendence over the inferior Courts of the Presidency. The subordinate Court had disallowed certain objections to an execution sale, and, on a second application, had reversed its former order. The High Court had set aside this order in review as ultra vires. After a long hearing their lordships dismissed the appeal with costs.—Meer Reasut Hossein v. Hadjee Abdoolah.—This appeal calls into question the power of a subordinate Court to revise its own orders. An order had been made by a district judge refusing registration of a deed, and the appeal was against the decision of his successor in office ordering a review. Their lordships reversed the decision of the High Court and allowed the appeal with costs, holding that the Court in question had the power of revising its own orders.—The case of Iswa Chunder Saha v. Doyamoyi Dasi came before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on Thursday. It was an appeal by the members of a Hindoo family respecting the shares apportioned to each on the partition of the joint family estates. Their lordships refused to disturb the decision of the Court below.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The thirty-sixth ordinary general meeting of the above railway was held on May 23, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street; Mr. J. F. Leith, Q.C., M.P., the chairman, presiding. The report, an abstract of which has appeared, was taken as read. The Chairman, in moving its adoption, said, although it was not so satisfactory in regard to the earnings as in some previous half-years, especially the corresponding period of 1874, yet it was better than the half-year ending June, 1875. With regard to the corresponding half-year, they worked under very favourable circumstances as regarded the goods traffic, for during this time the Government were carrying large supplies to the famine districts, and it was therefore scarcely fair to compare the earnings of the past half-year with the corresponding period. Mr. H. H. Berens, a director, having seconded the adoption of the report, a short discussion ensued, and, in reply, the Chairman said they did everything they could to keep down the working expenses as much as possible.

They had to contest almost every item with the officer in India, who desired to carry almost all expenditure to revenue. The proceedings then terminated with a vote of thanks to the Chairman and directors.

INDIAN AND FOREIGN LUNATICS.—On Friday a deputation, representing the Essex Quarter Sessions, waited on the President of the Local Government Board, on the subject of Indian lunatics, who are drafted over to this country for the benefit of their health, and become chargeable to English unions. Mr. Perry Watlington stated that very many Indian lunatics were drafted over to England with certificates alleging that it was for the benefit of their health. They were chiefly sent from Bhowanipore. Some were of European birth apparently, but their nativity it was difficult to ascertain, as they were sent over without any papers at all, and were handed over by the captain of the ship to the relieving officer direct, who sent them with orders to the County Lunatic Asylum. Mr. Sclater-Booth said it was a very hard case. He thought there should be some authority in India responsible for the embarkation of such lunatics. Mr. Watlington remarked that the Indian Government did for some time make a payment of 14s. per week towards those who had no settlement in this country who were thus sent over, but within the last two or three years they had discontinued payment, except in the case of six who had been in the asylum since 1867. They had received a letter from the India-office refusing to admit any claim upon the revenues of India for the support of any subject of the Queen who may have sought his fortunes in India and there become deranged. Mr. Sclater-Booth said he had heard what they had to say, and would peruse carefully the papers they had left, and they would have another consultation on the matter. The deputation thanked the President, and retired.

THE INDIA-OFFICE AT THE CIVIL SERVICE SPORTS.—The sports at Lillie Bridge, West Brompton, on Saturday, May 20, were more numerously attended than ever. They were admirably conducted, the fine warm weather bringing out about 20,000 visitors. Mr. W. H. Strachan's poll jump of 10 ft. 6 in., and the bad falls in the bicycle race were the features of the meeting. Mr. W. Lindsay, an old Wykehamist, the well-known cricketer, was the solitary representative of the India-office in the usual programme. He won the 120 yards' hurdle race, and made a dead heat for the sack race, the other event for which he entered. The "tug of war" was the great event of these, as of other sports. The India-office entered into this with great zest, and after selecting a first eight, they had sufficient material to send a second team. 1st ties: Post-office beat Admiralty easily. India-office 1 beat Audit-office, after a hard tug. India-office 2 beat Probate-office.—2nd ties: Post-office beat India-office, 2. India-office, 1 a bye. Final, best of 3 pulls. India-office 1 beat Post-office. The Post-office were a powerful team, seven of the eight being in the Ino Rowing Club. They were in good condition, and were much fancied, as were the Audit-office. The India-office second team were a light lot, their heaviest man weighing but 11½ stone. On the contrary, No. 1 team contained gentlemen of considerable weight, in or out of the office. The respective eight were—No. 1, Messrs. W. Lindsay (captain), H. D. Mackintosh, W. Edgell, E. G. Burls, C. Grey, A. N. Grasswell, A. H. Savage, and T. T. Cooper. No. 2. Messrs. R. Shortrede (captain), W. G. Butter, J. R. Ellenor, F. W. Crookshank, J. Bolster, — Street, — Collier, and F. W. Smith. The band of the 1st Life Guards might with advantage have played more frequently, and we have again to notice the absence of members of the Indian Civil Service from these competitions. The India-office send a team of ten to the London Athletic Club's tug of war on the 29th inst.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, May 23.—THE SLAVE TREATY WITH ZANZIBAR.—Mr. BOURKE, in reply to Captain PRICE, said he had received the following telegram from the English Consul at Zanzibar:—"I have negotiated with the Sultan the abolition of all slave routes by land, and that no caravan shall fit out for purchase of slaves in the interior of Africa. All slaves coming to the coast to be seized and confiscated, and all land caravans to be seized, and dealers to be imprisoned."

EAST INDIA (CHIEF JUSTICES OF HIGH COURTS) BILL.—Sir G. CAMPBELL was moving the second reading of his East India Chief Justices of High Courts Bill, when attention was called to the state of the House, and there not being forty members present, the House adjourned at half-past seven o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, May 26.—THE MURDER OF MR. BIRCH.—Mr. ERNEST NOEL called attention to the familiar circumstances connected with the murder of Mr. Birch, late British Minister in Perak, and called upon the Government to state what was their future policy in respect of affairs in the Malay Peninsula.—In this request he was backed up by Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL and other hon. members.—Mr. LOWTHER, at the close of a long speech, intimated that he was not able to do more than affirm that the Earl of Carnarvon was devoting "his serious consideration" to the matter.

SOUTHAMPTON to SINGAPORE.—Mrs. Byng, and Miss Griffin.

BANGALOR MODEL FARM.—The Superintendent of the Model Farm at Bangalor is just now directing his attention to the improvement of the breed of horned cattle. For this purpose he has just purchased six very handsome and well-bred Nellore cows. The famous Nellore cow is known all over India to be of a very superior kind, and, in making this purchase, the Superintendent of the Bangalor Model Farm has taken a step in the right direction towards effecting a very substantial improvement in the breed of horned cattle in Mysor.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

COCKLE'S PILLS,

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

LAMPLOUGH'S

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See article in the Civil Service Gazette.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 15; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, May 13; Calcutta, May 12.

BY the latest advices from Major Sandeman's camp we learn that Major Sandeman's force had advanced on the 1st of May about eight miles beyond the Bolan Pass, as far as Kirta, where there is a fort: but no mention is made of its occupation. As Kirta is said to be one of the hottest places in that part of the world he would hardly delay there longer than he could help. The number of men of his escort who had died of cholera before the end of April was 35, but there had been no fresh cases in the last few days. Major Sandeman himself had been ill for some days, but had recovered. Since his passage a second caravan has gone safely through the Bolan Pass without a convoy. The object of his expedition has, for the present, been attained, the Bolan Pass is now used for the passage of camels laden with goods, and the trade between Khelat and our own territories is therefore open. The Kafilas have been escorted by the Bolan tribes themselves, the escort not being able to do more than open the Pass. The Khan of Khelat has restored the lands of the Brahoi Sirdars which he had confiscated, and all parties have shown a disposition to leave the settlement of their differences to Major Sandeman, so that there is every prospect that the objects of the mission will be fully accomplished.

CHOLERA by the latest mail accounts was raging more or less in many quarters. In Kashmir the epidemic was spreading throughout the valley, and fears were felt that it might extend to Marri, notwithstanding the strict quarantine that was being enforced. During the week ending the 5th May there were 120 deaths out of 294 seizures. Dr. De Renzy had gone up to Marri to confer with the authorities on the best way of keeping off the dreaded visitor. The cholera camp at Rájkot in Gujarát had been broken up; but at Bangalor the disease had been making fearful inroads, and in other parts of Mysor its ravages have been still more deadly. At Tumkur, between the 17th of April and the 3rd of May, there were 142 deaths from cholera. In Chitaldrug more than 800 deaths were caused by the same disease during the month of April. It was also beginning to reappear in Madras, while very bad accounts were coming in from the provinces. In all parts of the district of South Kanara the disease was raging to an extent which had compelled the Collector to apply to Government for further aid, the medical staff of the district being quite unequal to the strain it was called upon to bear.

IN Mandalay also, the capital of Burmah, cholera has been raging for several weeks, upwards of seven thousand having succumbed. The disease first broke out among the coolies employed by the King in building the city fortifications. It is supposed to have arisen from effluvia exhaled in the marshy ground disturbed by the workmen so employed.

LORD LYTTON, who had quite recovered from his late indisposition, set out from Simla on the 12th May, in company with his wife, Sir H. Davies, Sir A. Clarke, Colonel Burne, and a number of gentlemen and ladies, for the annual Méla or Fair at Sipi. They were received by the Rana of Koti, and returned to Simla the next day. The Viceroy was to hold a levee on the 27th, in honour of the Queen's birthday.

UP to the 7th May all but one squadron of cavalry and a detachment of Native Infantry had returned to Peshawar. The Afridis admitted several killed and wounded in the affair of the 17th April. It was feared that if the blockade of the Kohat Pass continued much longer there would be a salt famine in Peshawar and the countries adjacent, which depend for their supply on the mines in the Kohat district. Almost the whole of the carrying trade is in the hands of the recalcitrant Afridis, through whose ground the road goes. The other road along the Indus to Attok, and then some forty-five miles to Peshawar, is very roundabout. The extra journey of course increases the bazaar cost of the article, and the traders will not be very quick to adopt this new and temporary route.

THE three last officers who have left the Bombay service under the Retirement Scheme are Colonel Westropp, late Commandant of Puna Horse; Colonel G. E. Ashburner, Controller of Military Accounts; and Lieutenant-Colonel Burd, Wing Officer of the 10th N.I., making in all twelve who have gone this year. Colonel T. Nuttall, second in command of the 22nd Bombay N.I., has been appointed Acting Political Superintendent of Upper Sind. Colonel Nuttall entered the Bombay Army in 1845, and became a brevet-colonel in 1873. He served throughout the Persian campaign of 1857, and against the rebel Bhils and other insurgents in that and the two following years, getting twice wounded and earning the repeated praises of the Government. During the Abyssinian campaign he was second in command of the Land Transport Corps, and was frequently mentioned in the despatches.

THE Gazette of India notifies the transfer of the assets and liabilities of the Bengal Civil Service Fund to the Secretary of State for India.—A resolution has also been published by which only commissioned officers of Government will in future be appointed substantively to the Assay Department.

IT is rumoured in Calcutta that the object of Sir R. Temple's visit to Nepal is connected with a treaty to be entered into with the Nepalese Darbar, concerning the extradition of criminals.

AT a recent meeting of nobles in Kabul the expediency of the Amir adopting the title of Padishah was discussed. This, remarks a Bombay paper, looks "singularly like a skit upon the Royal Titles Bill." It is reported that the Amir is organising an expedition against the Shinwaris and Mohmands.

MR. JUSTICE HOLLOWAY, of the Madras High Court, seems to carry his English notions of judicial strictness to an unreasonable, if not mischievous excess. He followed up his recent refusal to accept the evidence of a Mohammedan woman from behind the pardah, by declaring that, had the case been one of sufficient importance, he would have compelled her to appear in open Court. On this the Madras Times makes the following appropriate remarks:—"Concealment of their persons from all men, except certain near relatives, is deemed to be both a social and a religious duty on the part of Mohammedan women. It is a duty enjoined by the Koran, and strictly observed by all Mohammedan women who wish to be considered either pious or modest. To compel such a woman to appear with her face uncovered in Court would undoubtedly be to 'outrage her modesty,' according to the customs of her people, and the probability of such a thing being done brings us face to face with a serious political difficulty. The procedure of English Courts may require that these deep-rooted customs should be ignored, but the Mohammedans of India would probably much rather lose English justice than be compelled to violate the customs of their faith." If our Courts in India are designed for the benefit of the Indian people, their procedure should be suited to native ways, not to our own notions of what is suitable.

SOMEBODY in Bombay has sent a paper to the Indian Mirror at Calcutta, headed "Hints for Bettering Prospects of Indian Youth." These hints, the Mirror says, "have at least the merit of originality in them; and suggest food for reflection. It will require time to work them out." How much time may be seen from the following sample:—

Supposing if two married Brahman couples be sent (we say two, to make marriages practicable in Europe, when the individuals may happen to have children of marriageable age), one in Germany and another in Prussia; two Purbhi married couples in Spain and Portugal, and two Maratha ones in France and Belgium, two Mahommedan ones in Holland and England; two Babus with their wives in Austria and Italy; two from the Tamul country in Greece and Turkey; and Parsis in United States, and so on, working the system out gradually and with an energy and perseverance we may be able, or at least hope to see, before long, some creditable and encouraging results, although we may, for want of funds, at the onset, be able to send out only one married couple or so; and, God knows, if it may happen for us to see some bright results even in our own life-time, and be able to hail it, as the first step of our regeneration, and emergence from our lethargic condition.

"SHOULD the British abandon Aden?" is the question which a writer in the Bombay Gazette has boldly furnished with an affirmative answer. At first sight the proposal to abandon a fortress which has been popularly called the Gibraltar of the Red Sea seems nearly as unreasonable as the idea of abandoning Gibraltar itself. But, as the writer in question reminds us, things have altered greatly since Aden was pitched upon as a coaling-station on the road from Suez to Bombay. "Formerly steamers had to coal at Aden, which was then essential, and a point to be guarded. Now they can pass by out of sight of Aden, and why should it be any more protected? In itself it has nothing to recommend it. But Aden is said to be the key of the Red Sea? The key of a sea is a dangerous term to meddle with; it sticks, and is hard to abolish. But why is Aden the key of the Red Sea. That sea, by whatever name called in the locality, is ninety-three miles wide at Aden, and cannon to carry that distance are still to be invented." It appears, moreover, that modern gunnery would make short work of those massive-looking defences which twenty years ago might well have been deemed impregnable. Is it worth our while then to lay out more money in strengthening a fortress which, if we mistake not, has been condemned, as it now stands, by modern engineers, and has certainly lost all claim to be called the key of the Red Sea, if it be true that steamers need no longer call at Aden for stores or coals on their way from Bombay to Suez? In default of any grave strategic, commercial, or political reasons for retaining that once prized stronghold, it can hardly be considered an agreeable dwelling place for the two or three thousand troops, English and Indian, shut up within a scorching circle of bare volcanic rocks and dreary walls of stone. If Aden is not worth retaining—though on that point we prefer to suspend our judgment—it is obvious that the cost of keeping up a strong garrison there must be a waste of good money, if not to some extent of human lives. On the other hand, it must not be forgotten that Aden possesses a good harbour, the best along the Arabian coast, and carries on a foreign trade in coffee, cotton, grain, and ivory worth more than two millions sterling.

LEST some of its readers should have felt surprised at the part taken by Sir George Campbell in the recent debate on the Bengal Famine outlay, the Englishman explains that "it had just come to the late Lieutenant-Governor's knowledge that a most disingenuous attempt had been made by the Government of India to saddle him with the combined results of Lord Salisbury's weakness, Lord Northbrook's helplessness, and Sir Richard Temple's impressible imagination. This attempt not only induced Sir George to second Mr. Smith's motion; it has also, as we are informed, led him to draw up a statement showing the nature of his proposals for the relief of the famine. The main feature of this document, which was, we believe, to have been laid before Parliament, is that the total of his estimates involved an expenditure of less than three millions sterling, and that his last efforts in India were devoted to combating the extravagant demands of Sir Richard Temple." It is said that Sir George Campbell will also show that had his estimates been accepted, the greater part of the expenditure would have been recoverable, and, instead of six millions and a half, the net cost of the relief operations would not have exceeded one million sterling.

WE should much like to know whether Lord Northbrook or any of those about him really contemplated placing the Indian Press under a censorship. According to the Times of India, which professes to speak from special information, his Lordship went so far as to cause inquiries to be made as to the possibility or safety of restrictive legislation. The heads of the local governments, and some native gentlemen, were consulted, and their attention was drawn not only to the vernacular press, but more especially to the Anglo-Indian papers, whose circulation, staff, policy, and influence on public opinion were all to be reported upon. In this way a large mass of more or less accurate information was collected. It was duly forwarded to Calcutta, but unluckily for the gentlemen who were in favour of resorting to repressive measures, it was not always accompanied by expressions of opinion agreeing with their own. Some Government servants failed to see the advantages of a press law which would place Government quite above unofficial criticism, and their opposition appears to have led to the idea being dropped, at least by the Governor-General, who took it up. It is still entertained in certain quarters, but our contemporary believes that there is very little danger of its being acted upon. We can hardly imagine that a Viceroy of Lord Northbrook's politics ever seriously lent himself to any scheme for gagging the Press of India, whatever some of his colleagues may have said or done. The very notion seems absurd. Nor is it likely that Lord Lytton would dream of cancelling the debt which India owes to Lord Metcalfe.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of June 4, from Calcutta, the Yunnan Mission and escort arrived at Rangoon on Friday last, all well. Messrs. Baber and Grosvenor remained at Mandalay, but have not yet seen the King, apparently because they will not agree to take their shoes off. They are expected at Rangoon to-day. The soldiers found the wild tribes and Manwain people very kind, but the marching severe. In going they found the villages deserted, but on returning the villages were friendly. The Manwain officials denied that Mr. Margary ever came there; but the evidence is clear that the murder was committed by Imperial troops. Many persons are imprisoned with Lisitahi; but Mr. Grosvenor's report will probably exonerate him. Mr. Margary's body was thrown into the river, and his head stuck on a tree. His property has been recovered. The Chinese await Mr. Grosvenor's report before ordering executions. The country is generally sparsely inhabited. Mr. Grosvenor travelled in great state with the Chinese Commander-in-Chief of Yunnan.

FROM the same despatch we quote the following items of latest news:—The Punjab frontier affairs are still unsettled; the Afridis have been quiet during the past week, but have not yet submitted. It was rumoured at Lahore that an autumn campaign will be undertaken against the hill tribes.

The Maharajah of Jaipur is now at Simla; Sindia also goes thither this week, and will be met there by General Daly, the Governor-General's Agent in Central India, with whom and the Viceroy he will, it is said, discuss matters affecting the state of Gwalior. It is announced that the Maharajah of Kashmir will visit Simla shortly. The Viceroy has spent the last few days at Mashobra, some miles from Simla, having gone thither for a change, owing to a slight illness. His health is now improving. The Supreme Council has not yet met at Simla, and it is uncertain when it will begin work.

IT is generally believed, says the Times correspondent, that Sir R. Temple will resign the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal early next year, and rumour is already busy regarding his successor. The Hon Mr. Ashley Eden is supposed to have the best chance, but the names of Inglis, late Acting Chief Commissioner of Oudh, and Clive Bayley, a member of the Supreme Council, are also mentioned.

IT is reported from Kabul, in the latest telegrams, that the roads between Samarkand and Badakshan are stopped by a fight between the wild tribes, and that the Amir has been asked to interfere and take the country, which is said to contain gold and diamond mines.

IT is said in Calcutta that Lord Salisbury has sanctioned the making of narrow gauge lines from Ajmir to Ahmadabad and from Nagpur to Chatisghar, in the Central Provinces. The former line is much desired by the Bombay people as affording a direct route to the Upper Provinces, which they believe will attract the whole trade of Northern India to Bombay, instead of Calcutta; but a narrow gauge will hardly satisfy them, and as the line will be important both for trade and strategic purposes, the break of gauge certainly seems to us a mistake. The same remark applies, though with less force, to the other line, which will form a link of the direct Calcutta and Bombay Railway, a project which must be completed sooner or later.

A SIMLA telegram of June 4 states that Mr. Grosvenor, after reaching Rangoon, is expected to proceed immediately to Simla to report on the result of his mission, which is not yet known to the Government.

SINCE his return from India Professor Monier Williams has published a brief but interesting statement of his reasons for undertaking the journey thither, and its chief results to the present time. The resolutions passed at Oxford last year for enabling candidates for the Indian Civil Service to pursue their studies at the University were supported by him only as part of a larger scheme, embracing not only one class of students but all who might wish to pursue Indian studies under University teaching. To this end he would establish an Indian institute, with lecture-rooms, library, and museum, which should "bear to Indian studies a relation somewhat similar to that of the Taylor Institution to Modern European Languages." It should be "simply a centre of union, intercourse, inquiry, and instruction for all engaged in Indian studies," and the teachers and endowments required for this "Indian school" should be supplied not by any one college, but by the University itself. In furtherance of this scheme, and in hopes of gaining the support of educated natives of India, Professor Williams undertook his recent tour, and the results, he tells us, have been most encouraging. Not only in Calcutta, but in most of the large towns up the country, his proposals were "warmly seconded by the educated natives, and cordially supported by the European members of the several Governments." Committees have everywhere been formed to follow up any measures which Oxford may sanction for the end in view. One requisition with five hundred signatures from various parts of India prays for the establishment of an "Indian school" at Oxford "for the benefit of students who are natives of India, so that they may take the usual degrees in Arts after examination in the classical languages of their own country."

THERE is some force in the Professor's arguments against allowing any one college to concentrate within itself all the appliances for Indian studies. In the case of the Indian Selected Candidates what is really wanted is to restore the old esprit de corps of the Haileybury system "without encouraging the narrowness of feeling incidental to a college clique." For the prosecution therefore of specially Indian studies it would be well perhaps to draw them at stated times to some central University building, where Indian subjects should alone be taught by Professors chosen from the whole University. But we are not so sure that the same method will answer as a means of attracting any large number of native Indian students to this country, nor that such a method, even if it did answer, would be the best for such a purpose. There are plenty of colleges in India where the natives can learn all the special knowledge which Professor Williams would offer them at Oxford. If a knowledge of their own classics is all we can hold out to them, they had better stay in India. Those who come here for any other purpose than to compete for the Indian Civil Service should rather be encouraged to go through the same course of study as ordinary Englishmen. A due knowledge of Sanskrit may be an excellent preparation for the Indian Civil Service; but natives who come here to receive the benefits of Western culture should learn to drink deeply of the classic literature of Greece and Rome and England, and so train their minds at the best available sources of intellectual and moral growth.

FOR students of Hindi in its purest and most popular forms Mr. F. Pincott has just provided a text book worthy to take the place of the various makeshifts hitherto extant, chiefly in the shape of translations from Sanskrit, Persian, or English writings. Mr. Pincott's scholarship is in itself a guarantee for the general merits of this new Hindi edition of the Sakúntala, that charming old Sanskrit play which Goethe sang of, and which Professor Williams sought to make popular in a becoming English dress. For the text of his book he is indebted to the Hindi version of Kanva Lachhman Singh, a deputy collector in the North-Western Provinces, who while following the Bengali text, yet gave his own rendering all the free movement of an original work, written in good, idiomatic Hindi, with a sprinkling of well-known Urdu words. The value for English students of this translation of a work at once readable and in many ways instructive, has been greatly enhanced by many pages of explanatory notes, in which all the difficulties of the text are carefully and fully treated, the hard sentences done into English, and even those simpler passages which were open to misconception clearly explained. A supplementary glossary contains a number of words and meanings for which the learner would look in vain in any of the ordinary dictionaries. In his efforts to render the book as complete as possible for the purpose intended, as a guide to the knowledge of Hindi pure and undefiled, Mr. Pincott seems to have been remarkably successful.

WE hear that all officers who elected to abide by the Furlough Rules of 1868, before the 1st July, 1871, are to receive their furlough allowances from the first day of this month at the original rate of two shillings the rupee. So far good; but why from the 1st June only? If their claim to the full rate is just, as it certainly seems to be, surely the concession ought to have retrospective effect, from the date of each officer's arrival in this country. A wrong once acknowledged should be redressed thoroughly, where such redress is possible.

THE Testimonials about to be presented to Col. Jervis, M.P., and Col. A. B. Rathbone, by those who have benefited by their exertions in the matter of bonus compensation, are now on view in Messrs. Grindlay and Co.'s reading room, 55, Parliament-street. The Testimonial to Col. Jervis consists of an elaborately-carved silver cup; that to Col. Rathbone of a handsome épergne. Each piece of plate bears an appropriate inscription. We regret, by the way, to hear that the subscriptions for Col. Phillips's Testimonial have not come in so freely as they might and should have done. This is little to the credit of those who, but for his prolonged and persistent efforts, carried on so largely at his own cost, would still be asking vainly for what they have now received. It was only a small per centage—one-and-a-half per cent.—that they were asked to contribute; and some of them, we know, have gone beyond that limit in their desire to show their gratitude for his successful services. But we hear of others who have received their hundreds of pounds without subscribing a single penny in return. It is to be hoped that these have generally held their hands through ignorance rather than of stinginess prepense. If so, we would repeat for their benefit the assurance that to Col. Phillips more than any one else do they owe whatever concessions have been made at last to their just, but long-neglected demands. If further proofs are needed, they are not far to seek—no further than Westminster itself. Col. Strange's Committee could also enlighten those who care to ascertain the truth, and vindicate the honour of their old Service.

COLONEL EDWARD THOMPSON, of the Bombay Staff Corps, whose death was announced in our last issue, entered the Bombay Army in 1839, became Captain in 1852, Major in 1861, and Colonel in 1870. He served under Sir C. Napier in the Sind campaign of 1843, and took part in the battle of Haidrabad. During the Persian campaign of 1857 under Sir James Outram, Captain Thompson shared in the capture of Mohamra and the subsequent pursuit of the Persian Army. During the Mutiny he commanded a detachment sent to Gujarat in pursuit of the rebels under Tantia Topi in December, 1858. In the following year he served on the Staff in a campaign against the Naikra Bhils of the Rewa Kanta. For some time past Colonel Thompson had been Governor General's Agent at Murshidabad.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

Now that India has in all likelihood seen the last of her late Commander-in-Chief, whose services may yet be needed nearer home, some of our readers may be thankful for a brief review of a career remarkable for many great achievements alike in peace and war. Of no officer now living has England better reason to be proud than of him whose name is linked with many of the most memorable passages in the military history of our Empire during the last forty years.

It is nearly half a century since Lord Napier entered the service of the East India Company as a Bengal Engineer. For some years young Napier did his duty in a quiet steady-going way, at the various stations where his lot was cast. It was not till after 1840, when the hill-station of Darjiling was first founded under Dr. Campbell, that the opportunity which comes to him who waits long enough began to offer itself to the hardworking Lieutenant of Engineers. As Executive Engineer he was then employed in making a road from the plains to the new station, and in various other works of kindred usefulness. When his services were required on the North-Western frontier of those days, Dr. Campbell's Committee bore public witness to "Lieutenant Napier's ability, discretion, and temper... He has given the greatest satisfaction to Dr. Campbell, the Europeans and workmen of all classes under his orders, and the Committee trust it will not be considered presumptuous to suggest that even a change of the Executive Engineer in such circumstances would be attended with great hazard to the successful termination of the works required by Government." But able officers were wanted for the Army of the Satlaj, and Captain Napier had to take his part as a brigade-major in all the hard fighting of the first Sikh campaign in 1845-46. He was severely wounded at Sobraon, but he obtained the "honourable mention" for which soldiers long, and was soon able to resume his regular duties.

In the next Sikh Campaign of 1848-49 Major Napier acted for a time as chief engineer at the siege of Multán, and obtained the brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel for his services at Gujarát. For the next five or six years he was employed in superintending and pushing forward the great public works by which the Punjáb was enriched in the days of Lord Dalhousie and the Lawrences. In his Minute of 1853 the greatest of Indian Viceroys in this century paid admiring tribute to the peaceful services of the Chief Engineer:—

> For several years the Governor-General has been in close relations of business with Colonel Napier, and has seen and marked the deep devotion with which he has laboured in the discharge of the many and various duties of his important office. The report before the Government shows his eminent success in one branch only of the great department with whose conduct he is charged, but it has been equally conspicuous in all. Whatever may be the credit due to those whose efforts have been directed to the physical improvement of the Punjab, a principal share of that credit is justly due to Lieutenant-Colonel Napier, whose professional abilities, unwearied industry, and judicious guidance, have contributed so largely to the material result which has happily been attained.

In these few years 3,600 miles of road had been opened for traffic, 834 were in progress, 2,736 had been surveyed, and 827 traced. To Colonel Napier also was mainly due the conception of the Bari Doab Canal and of the other great works of irrigation which have since done so much for the prosperity of the Punjab. Another great work undertaken and carried out by the same skilful hand was the famous Tibet Road, by which carriages were for the first time enabled to pass up easy gradients from the foot of the Hills at Kálka to Dagshai, Simla, and even some way beyond.

Meanwhile in 1853 Colonel Napier was again called into the field, to take part in one of those frontier campaigns which have so often tried the mettle of our troops. When reporting the success of the attack against the Hasanzais on the Black Mountain, nine hundred feet high, where Napier's column of Guides stormed and carried the heights one after another, Colonel Mackeson said—"My obligations to Colonel Napier are greater than I can express." During the mutiny his services were again in request, and in March 1858, when Lucknow was finally captured by the troops of Lord Clyde, it was Napier who directed the engineering works, and who afterwards drew up the plan of occupation based on the establishment of three military posts and on the opening out of three roads through the city. "These works," said Lord Clyde, "set free and at my disposal some 12,000 men." But his next achievements were the most brilliant of all. After playing his part as brigadier in the capture of Gwalior by Sir Hugh Rose, Sir Robert Napier—for he was now a K.C.B.—was sent in pursuit of the flying enemy, with a little force of cavalry about 600 strong and a troop of horse artillery with six guns. On the 20th June, 1858, he saw himself opposed at Jaura Alipur by the whole rebel army, still many thousand strong, with 26 guns. With all the dash and daring of Wellington at Assaye the coolheaded colonel of engineers swept down at the head of his cavalry on the astonished foe, scattered them in all directions, and carried off all their guns. In the subsequent chase of Prince Firoz Shah Napier showed the same dash combined with the stubborn energy of his race and the best qualities of a successful leader. With a few squadrons of horse, a few light guns, and 200 Highlanders mounted on camels, he marched thirty miles a day, until he had caught up, routed and dispersed the flying rebels. The same swift-moving pertinacity marked his subsequent measures for hunting down the last remnants of Tantia Topi's force.

It was not long before the late Commander of the Central India Field Force found himself leading a British division under Sir Hope Grant against the Chinese in 1860. For the successful issues of that campaign England was largely indebted to the wise counsels of one who was both a Company's officer and an Engineer. From 1861 to 1865 Major-General Napier sat in the Viceroy's Council, leaving it only to take up the post of Commander-in-Chief at Bombay. When in 1867 war with Abyssinia became inevitable, Sir Robert Napier was at once entrusted with the difficult-seeming task of carrying a small but fully equipped army some 400 miles into the heart of an unknown and very rugged hill-country, and bringing it back within a certain date to the coast. How successfully he discharged that task, with a forethought which provided for every contingency, and a caution as masterly as his former daring, few of us have yet had time to forget. Rewarded with a peerage for a campaign conducted without a hitch, Lord Napier of Magdála in 1870 went back to India as Commander-in-Chief, the only Company's officer who has ever regularly held that important post. During his six years' tenure of that command nothing graver than a Lushai campaign has ruffled the peace of India; but the entire success of that campaign was largely owing to his arrangements for carrying it on. No commander-in-chief of the Indian Army has ever laboured more zealously or successfully for the well-being and soldierlike efficiency of all committed to his charge, nor has any other, not even excepting Lord Gough, succeeded in winning so wide a popularity among his troops of whatever race or rank. In the words of the Pioneer, "Respected and loved of all, by the British soldier, by the Native Sepoy, by the Rajput Chief, and the Punjab noble,—loved best by those who knew him best, his companions and fellow-workers,—Lord Napier leaves India amidst universal regret and good wishes." On all questions of military moment Lord Napier's opinion had nearly the force of law with the Government of which by virtue of his office he was an important member. But for him the victory of the broad gauge might never have been won. In purely civil matters he seldom interfered; but once at any rate the whole weight of his influence was thrown into the scale against the attempt of Lord Mayo's Government to decree a forced assessment of water-rates on all lands, irrigated or not, that lay within a certain distance of the Government canals.

THE ABORIGINES' PROTECTION SOCIETY AND SLAVERY IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Last night I attended, for the first time, a meeting of the above Society, and was much gratified by the zeal and evidently effective manner in which its work is carried on. Cases of injustice and oppression suffered by the races which are the objects of the Society's vigilant solicitude are brought to the notice of the authorities, who have it in their power to afford relief or redress, and public opinion and sympathy are enlisted in the cause of the sufferers, by means of the press and of public meetings. The audience last night, which included many ladies, seemed deeply impressed by the instructive and earnestly worded report read by the Secretary, and by a short address delivered by Mr. Henry Richard, M.P., in which the necessity for labour, such as the Society has undertaken, was forcibly brought home to his hearers, in the following words:—"There is not a sadder chapter in the history of the world than that which records the contact of civilised people with the aboriginal races; for there scarcely is an instance in which the former has not inflicted incalculable suffering and sorrow on the inferior race."

The chief subjects treated at the meeting were the injustice done to Indian immigrants in the Colonies, the cruelties inflicted on the Chinese in Peru, and the attempts of the local authorities in Natal to introduce slavery in the form of forced labour. The Secretary explained that, whenever oppression was brought to the notice of the Society, efforts were directed towards obtaining for the oppressed the protection of the laws of the country. The Society seem, however, not to be aware of the fact that Indians, besides those who emigrate to the Colonies, stand sadly in need of protection from the oppression of their foreign rulers; and that, while the British Government in 1872 was incurring heavy expense in a mission to Zanzibar for the suppression of slavery, slavery was being introduced in India by its own officers, in the form of forced labour. It may be remembered that speculative irrigation schemes incautiously introduced in India had resulted in disaster; that the money spent had exceeded the estimates, in some instances, by as much as 300 per cent., and that while the canals failed to make the returns looked for, they needed constant repairs, clearing, and alterations. The true character of the schemes, concealed for a time, was beginning to be suspected by the public, and it was considered urgent that the works should at once be rendered remunerative, at least in appearance, if not in reality. Accordingly, the "Punjab Canal Act" was passed in an irregular manner, somewhat similar to the manner which Lord Salisbury so severely censured on a recent occasion, i.e., it was passed while the Government had retired to Simla, and the non-official members of the Legislative Council and official members known to be opposed to some of the principal provisions of the Bill were absent. This Act subjected the whole of the labouring and artisan classes in the Punjab to be liable to forced labour on the canals, on the plea that free labour was scarce in some parts of that province, and it provided that the owners or cultivators of land should pay for the water of the canals such rates as the authorities might demand, whether they asked for, accepted, or used the water or not. This latter clause was subsequently disallowed by her Majesty's Government.

Another section of the people of India has just been deprived of the protection which the law has hitherto afforded against the oppression of revenue officers. The constantly increasing expenses of the State led the authorities in India, during the last few years, to make a serious increase in the land-tax, amounting, in some instances, to as much as four times the previous assessment, and, in many cases, violating compacts, ancient vested rights and even rules that the Government itself had laid down for regulating the assessments. Much anxiety, privation and suffering were occasioned by these proceedings. Some of the sufferers appealed to the Courts of Justice and obtained redress, but the greater number had not the pecuniary means of going to law, and thousands of ryots, after vainly struggling to satisfy the enhanced demands of the Government, abandoned their fields, and wandered with their families, when many must have died of starvation, and many emigrated to neighbouring native States. One of the sufferers, whose field had been taxed at more than the maximum of one-sixth of the gross produce, which had been fixed by the Government themselves, appealed to the Civil Courts against the action of the revenue officer and obtained the relief he prayed for. Thereupon the Government, basing their action on this suit, and complaining of the inconvenience to which their officers were exposed by the action of the Law Courts, as shown in that suit, introduced in the Legislative Council a Bill, exempting from the jurisdiction of those Courts all land-revenue matters generally; and this Bill was passed in India a few weeks ago under the title of the "Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act." The people of Bombay immediately memorialised the Secretary of State for India for the repeal of the Act, and their petition is now probably on its way to this country.

Lord Salisbury's curt and unsatisfactory answer to the question recently put to him on the subject of the Act would, however, indicate a determination to persist in the course adopted; and a considerable section of the people of India will thus find itself deprived of the protection it has hitherto received, under British rule, from our Courts of Justice, in the important matter of its agrarian rights and interests, unless some powerful advocacy should spring up in this country, and induce the Government to reconsider the retrogressive, dangerous, and altogether unjustifiable policy initiated by the "Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act."—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

May 26. A FRIEND TO INDIA.

THE MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The above company's report, mentioned in yesterday's Times, has probably not attracted much attention from the public, as few persons, perhaps excepting the shareholders, know that the undertaking is essentially a public speculation, and belongs to that peculiar class of Indian schemes on which, the Government having guaranteed an annual dividend of 5 per cent., shareholders run no risk, all losses being borne by the State, i.e., the tax-payer. In this instance it happens to be the Indian tax-payer who is victimised, and, as he has no friends, it seems to matter little how hard he is hit. The accounts, at all events, show that he has been hit very hard for the benefit of the above company, and that he must continue to be victimised for the same purpose unless some friend rise up in his defence.

The capital already expended by the company amounts to £1,600,000, whereof £1,000,000 was raised under the guarantee mentioned above, and £600,000 was advanced from the Indian Treasury. The works produced are now found to be worthless, inasmuch as they cost more for their maintenance than they earn; and £7,000 of loss is incurred annually, in addition to the interest on the capital sunk. The shareholders, however, need feel no alarm, as their dividends are secured by the Government guarantee; in fact, nobody connected with the company seems to be particularly interested in making the works pay. The Government having demanded a refund of their advance of £600,000, the directors mortgaged the Company's property to the extent of £372,815, paying, out of the loan thus raised, £228,000 in part liquidation of the Government advance, and sinking the remainder in the undertaking. The report holds out no reasonable hope that the Company's financial condition will improve, and the only security which the Government have, for the money already advanced and for the annual dividends which it must continue to pay, is the Company's property, which is heavily mortgaged, looking at its market value, and is getting further encumbered with the annual losses of the Company.

In the face of these disastrous results (which must be ascribed to the baneful influence of the guarantee system whereby the watchfulness of shareholders and the energy and sagacity of directors and managers are relaxed) we are told that the directors of the Company have applied to the Secretary of State for further guarantee from the Indian Government, in order to see if a system of navigation on the canals might not answer; and that their application has been referred to the authorities in India for consideration and report. Blamable, as the Secretary of State for India may be considered, for having involved the Indian Government in the guarantee given seven years ago, he would deserve much severer blame still if he were to commit a similar fault now that the disastrous results of the past error are known. The people of India have for years been taxed for the annual dividends payable under the unfortunate guarantee already given; and this burden, which they must bear as long as British rule endures in their country, it is now proposed to aggravate, in order to afford to certain schemers the means of further indulging their speculative proclivities.—

I am, Sir, your obedient servant, DELTA.

NATIVE AND ENGLISH OFFICIALS.

The Englishman, in an article on the proposals made by writers at home to associate leading natives with the practical work of administration, observes that— Were we, as a nation, governing India for the sake only of the higher and wealthier class of natives, there is no doubt that they would be much more contented, and would better appreciate our rule if the best appointments in the administration could be assigned to them. But as long as our rule exists for the millions in this land of all classes, creeds, and degrees of rank; as long as our aim is to give the people the benefits of a comprehensive and beneficent legislation, and the result of Western civilisation; to promote the well-being of the majority by the preservation of law, order, and impartial justice; so long will a distinct training and special education of higher excellence be essential for those who are to occupy official positions of trust and importance. The argument, too, is untenable that, were Natives of distinction appointed to the highest posts under Government, the mere fact of occupying them would act on them as a magic spell, would inspire them with every imaginable virtue and qualification. Unfortunately, past experience has not shown this universally to be the case. Of the intellectual qualities of the higher class of Native gentlemen there is no doubt: but many of them, and we say it with regret, are wanting in qualities which are absolutely requisite for good government— stability of purpose, resolution, and unswerving independence of character. Nor is it by any means so certain that such appointments would be generally popular in the country. From the reports of the highest authorities we find that, instead of the Europeans, it is the lower class of Natives, the peasantrty hemselves, who in many cases protest against having any but a European placed over them, and entreat, and often insist that one should be sent them, rather than one of their own countrymen. This can only be accounted for by the fact that, with all his faults and short-comings, his brusquerie and arrogance of manner, and irritability of temper, there is, at the same time, a sense of rigid justice, of uncompromising truth and reliability, in the Anglo-Saxon of the best type, which leads a simple people to trust him in the end, however vexatious his rule may be occasionally felt. If Native gentlemen would but cultivate in their sons more of the earnestness of purpose, singleness of mind, and unflinching devotion to duty, which have been the characteristics of the great rulers of every age and clime, they would then see them equally fitted, and in many respects better qualified, to enter the ranks of that service which is open "to all the talents," and has been long adorned by men of distinction of whom any country might be justly proud.

MILITARY TRAINING OF NATIVE PRINCES.

The Pioneer remarks that the condition of native princes has greatly changed under British supremacy, and in many important respects the change has been for the better. The pressure of political officers has lessened many of the evils which existed under a purely native régime. A minister and a queen-mother are kept within bounds. The princes themselves are more amenable to English influences. But one important element is wanting, and its absence in the culture of an Asiatic prince is a positive evil. A young rajah may be induced to engage in athletic games and exercises, to pursue field sports, to run, ride, and swim. But he receives no military training worthy of the name. There are, or there seem to be, exceptional cases. Maharajah Scindia, for instance, has strong military instincts, and is certainly endowed with military genius. He delights in drilling and training his troops, and in fidgetting over their arms and accoutrements. But his Highness's martial aspirations receive no encouragement from the British Government. On the contrary, they are regarded with disfavour. He is bound by treaty obligations to keep his force within a certain specified strength. He has been told that any increase to his standing army is of no service to his State, and a useless drain upon his resources. Now, there is nothing like army training to form the character of an Asiatic prince, and to bring out his dormant energies. In dealing with this important point we are almost inclined to throw political considerations to the winds. Army training is a necessity to the well-being of the greater part of the native aristocracy in India. The only question that remains to be solved is how to render this training subservient to the interests of the British empire; how to organise a military service for nobles and princes that shall promote the welfare of the body politic, as well as that of the individuals concerned. Before proceeding further with the discussion it may be as well to glance at the circumstances which attend the training of native princes in the present day. So long as a prince or rajah is a mere child, the task is comparatively easy. He is educated to read, write, and speak the English language. He is taught a little history, geography, and arithmetic. He is encouraged to engage in manly exercises. He is dosed with ideas and sentiments respecting the superiority of the British nation. But as boyhood draws to a close, the influence of an English guardian or tutor rapidly declines. The guardian does not shirk his duties, but they grow more and more distasteful to him. He jumps to the conclusion that a guardian is no longer necessary, and that a tutor alone is wanted. His hope of training a native prince into an energetic and conscientious ruler has faded away. He sees that Brahmans and native officials have begun to work upon the imagination of his charge, and are bringing him within the meshes of their toils. They distract his thoughts with premature ideas of marriage. To cut matters short, before his education is half over, he is married to a girl bred up in a zenana; a girl who knows nothing whatever of the world beyond the little Court where she has lived, and its immediate surroundings. The honeymoon of a native prince is as short as that of other men. The novelty of marriage soon passes away. Meantime the young raja begins to take a part in the management of affairs. The administration of justice, the progress of public works, and the promotion of a few favourites, will amuse him for a while; but he soon begins to pine for something more. His hours hang heavy on his hands. He will not go on with his studies. He cannot spend all his days in field sports. He wastes his time in gossip and entertainments, possibly in drinking and gambling. He listens to native stories of warriors of olden times; he sighs to think that he cannot achieve the same renown. Probably he begins to wish that the English were out of India. Most certainly he feels that so long as they are in this country, there is not the slightest chance of his gaining military renown or taking a part in any glorious drama. At this critical period of his life a young raja is urged by his English advisers to turn his attention to the arts of peace, to promote the welfare of his subjects and the education of the rising generation, to establish hospitals, dispensaries and schools. He is praised and flattered for what he does in this direction; he founds an observatory and museum; he plays with a variety of sciences, and is in a fair way of becoming an Asiatic prig; he gives electric shocks to the ladies of his zenana, or amuses them with the wonders of telescopes and microscopes; he tries to be European in his ways; he takes to horse-racing; he learns to play at billiards and whist; he exhibits other tastes which betoken his rapid advance in civilisation; possibly he learns to drink champagne and to dance a quadrille. Such is the melancholy outcome of one phase of British supremacy. It has delivered the people of India from the more glaring evils of native misrule. It has put an end to the intermittent wars which have so often desolated the land, but it has taken away the one pursuit which trained and disciplined her ancient princes.

JOURNALISM IN BANGALOR.—The Bangalor Examiner has set a very worthy example to Mofussil journals. A month ago the Examiner was made a daily paper; and the success which appears to have attended the spirited venture has emboldened the proprietor to make an arrangement with "Reuter" for his daily telegrams from London and different parts of India, which will in future be published at Bangalore at the same time as in the Presidency cities. Thus Bangalore is brought three or four days nearer than before to the great centres of civilisation, and "progress" makes another step in advance.

RETIREMENT OF COLONEL YOUNGHUSBAND.

The permanent appointment, which we (Indian Public Opinion) notified in our last issue, of Colonel Miller to the post of Inspector-General of Punjab Police may be regarded as the announcement of the retirement from that appointment of Colonel J. W. Younghusband. At first sight the appointment of Colonel Miller would indicate the supersession of the officer who till very recently officiated in the post which the former now permanently fills; but such is not the case. Colonel Younghusband has taken furlough for two years and de facto, has resigned the Government service; that is to say, he will never return to India, but at the end of two years will receive his off-reckonings and retire. He might, had he chosen, have insisted upon being gazetted to the pucka appointment in which he officiated, but he preferred letting his brother officers in the department benefit by the promotion at once, rather than keep them waiting for two years for it. As far as the Punjab is concerned, then, the gallant colonel may be considered to have permanently severed his connection with the province, after having done both good and faithful service in it for upwards of a quarter of a century.

Colonel Younghusband was posted to the 8th Bombay Native Infantry in 1841. He served under General England right through the Afghan campaign, first as adjutant of his regiment, then as field engineer, and afterwards as provost marshal. He was present at the second attack on Haikulzai and at Kandahar under General Nott on the 28th April and 29th May respectively in the year 1842. The Sind campaign then commenced, and he served throughout it under Sir Charles Napier, being present at the battle of Haidarabad. He subsequently served in the Sind Hills campaign under the same general.

In 1845 he joined the Sind Police, and was an officer in that force until 1850. He commanded the Upper Sind Police in the attack and defeat of the Mandranis in 1847, earning by his brilliant services the thanks of the chief civil and military authorities.

In 1852, in command of the 6th Police Battalion, Captain Younghusband took part in the attack on the Amerzai Warziris. In the next year he led the 2nd and 6th Police Battalions against the Shioranis, and later in the same year led the attack on the Kasranis. During the mutiny he did good service, especially at Kot Kangra, where he disarmed a number of regiments suspected of mutinous designs.

In 1861, when the present Punjab Police Force was organised, Major Younghusband was appointed Deputy Inspector General of Police under Captain George Hutchinson.

In March, 1863, the Inspector Generalship of Police becoming vacant, Major Younghusband officiated in that appointment for sixteen months, when he succeeded temporarily to a similar appointment in the Peraks. Here he did excellent service for two years; but in March, 1866, he returned to the Punjab and took up his old appointment of senior Deputy Inspector General of Police. About this time also he was nominated a Companion of the Star of India.

In February, 1869, when Colonel Hutchinson proceeded to Europe on furlough, his place was again taken by Colonel Younghusband, who for the second time held charge of the Police Department for two years; and again for the third time was he Colonel Hutchinson's locum tenens from February, 1874, to March, 1876, when he gave up the reins of office to Colonel Miller, the present incumbent.

Colonel Younghusband's administration of the Police Department was, it is admitted on all sides, most able, while his fair treatment of all under him rendered him a most popular head of Department.

STATION TALK.

LAHOR, May 1.—Colonel Williams, Director of Indian State Railways, is expected here in a few days, and he will no doubt be much pleased at being smoothly spun over the Chenab, and at seeing the progress made in the Gujerat-Jhelum section of the Punjab Northern State Railway during the last year. He will be pleased to find the wonderful amount of traffic that has been already attracted or created by the line, and the satisfactory character of the weekly returns. . . . Lahor is rapidly emptying, and Simla as well as Murree is becoming the abode of many of our high officials. Mr. Egerton, Financial Commissioner, leaves to-day for Simla instead of Murree; Colonel Black, the Military Secretary, has already gone; General Alexander Taylor, D.P.W. Secretary, and Major Mackesy have gone up to Murree; Dr. Dallas, Inspector-general of Prisons, follows on the 4th, and ladies generally are on the move. Mr. Stuart, of the Accounts Department of the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, has been transferred to Karachi, and leaves Lahor at once. Mr. David Ross, Traffic Manager of the same line, has just arrived from England; but Mr. Arthur Saunders, his assistant, has just gone home. Mr. Probyn, Accountant-general, goes up to Murree in another fortnight; and Colonel Young, R.E., our commissioner, on the 19th. Mr. Alexander, Inspector of Schools, takes leave to England this week, and Mr. Harvey, now at Amritsar will officiate for him. So you see society is pretty well on the move. The hot weather may be said to have set in, though by no means severely, and punkaks are in general use; but the month of April has been on the whole one of the coolest though by no means one of the healthiest, on record. Colonel Gulliver, R.E., Secretary to the Punjab Government in the Irrigation Department, who went home to England on two months and twelve days' privilege leave, has reported his return to duty. The principal pleasure in a Spanish cigarette is said to be in the making, which passes so much more time than the smoking; and a ten weeks' trip to England can only possess attractions to those who enjoy the going and coming. If one's destination and halting-place were to be London, I think on arriving from Charingcross at the house one would be inclined to tell the cabman to wait. There was a meeting of the Senate of the Punjab University College, as usual on the last Saturday of the month, on the 29th ult., when some important changes were made in the text-books prescribed for the Oriental examination in Sanskrit. Dr. G. W. Leitner, too, was appointed Honorary Principal of the Oriental College. Before the business of the day commenced, Mr. Egerton, Vice-President of the University, presented a khillut and sunnud, conferring the title of Bahadur on Rai Kanhya Lal, C.E., Executive Engineer of the Lahore circle.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SILVER COINAGE.—During the last six or seven weeks some forty-five lakhs of sicca weight of silver bullion have been made over to the Calcutta Mint for coinage, as has been reported from time to time. Instructions have, it is said, been issued to the mint authorities to strike off rupees to the extent of about thirty lakhs, and smaller silver coins to fifteen lakhs of rupees.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A European driver, named John Stephens, in charge of a down goods train, arrived at Raniganj about one o'clock on Friday morning, May 5, and had to wait there for the passenger train, which left Howrah at 6.45 P.M. on Thursday, to pass. Being tired, he appears to have laid down on the up line and gone to sleep, and the passenger train ran over him, severing his head from his body.

OPENING OF THE CALCUTTA ALBERT HALL.—The new Albert Hall at Calcutta which has been built for the purposes of amusement, literature and science, was opened on Wednesday evening, May 3, by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Sir R. Temple concluded his speech on this occasion in the following words:—"I hope that when this institution is completed, you will sit at the feet of learned lecturers and men of science, and through one way or another realise fully the objects with which this institution was started. I hereby declare the Albert Hall open."

ALLEGED FRAUDS IN A GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT.—A series of strict inquiries is being made by Mr. E. J. Shuttleworth, District Superintendent of Police, 24-Purgunnahs, into a complaint laid against certain officers of the Canal Tolls Department. It would appear from the information laid before the magistrate by a native named Ooma Charn Biswas, that the frauds have been going on for some time past in the collection of tolls, Government being credited with an infinitesimal portion of the collections. The matter is yet under inquiry, but sufficient evidence has been obtained from the records of the Collector's Office, although no official has as yet been directly implicated.—Englishman, May 8.

THE NATIVE ARMY.—A rumour is going about to the effect that the first six cavalry and infantry native regiments are to be made "regular" as an experiment; that a full complement of officers is to be posted to them as if they were European battalions. We have indicated already that larger projects have certainly been under discussion with the Government in reference to the reorganisation of the native army than the public generally has supposed, but this particular rumour may be safely regarded as groundless. The tendency of Lord Napier's counsels, to begin with, has been quite in the opposite direction; but in any case, while these are still under the consideration of the Home Government, it is improbable in the last degree that any strong measures of the kind referred to would be carried out here, experimentally or otherwise.—Pioneer.

TIGER SHOOTING.—Camp Chakia, a charming solitary village, with beautiful gardens and large tanks, with hills on one side and large meadows on the other, situated in the district of Mirzapore, is the famous shooting box of the Maharajah of Benares, where, in 1870, the Duke of Edinburgh spent three days shooting with the late Lord Mayo and the Maharajah. His Highness, with his son, Kumar Maharajah, and followers, arrived there on the 1st. The Maharajah, accompanied by his son, set out in the evening to shoot a tiger which was reported to be lying in the jungles, six miles from Chakia. They went in palanquins and reached the place, where under taikhana or underground buildings, made specially for night-shooting, they took their respective positions. They had not to wait long for the beast, and the Maharajah shot it at once. It is a magnificent Bengal tiger. The party remained the whole night there, and returned to their lodgings in the morning. The Maharajah is much pleased with the sport.—Calcutta Statesman, May 9.

INFANTICIDE.—The Infanticide Act has in the N. W. Provinces saved the lives of upwards of 40,000 female infants. The question must arise after a few years what is to become of all these children, for they will be shut out by caste prejudices from making regular marriages, and important changes in the customs of the Rajput people seem to be inevitable. Writing on this subject the Pioneer says :—"Years ago endeavours, backed by persuasion only, were made to induce the thakoors to give up some of their more preposterous marriage customs ; and some success, though but partial and temporary, was said to have been gained. Any such means of escape from present difficulties would now in all probability be eagerly welcomed as a pis aller by the embarrassed and hunted fathers of Rajput girls born out of due time."

THE LATE MR. B. NEWMAN.—It is with deep and sincere regret that we have to record, says the Indian Daily News, the death of one of our unassuming, but very worthy citizens, Mr. B. Newman, of the firm of T. E. Thomson and Co. Mr. Newman left Calcutta several weeks ago in the s.s. City of Venice, with his family, to seek a change which his failing health seemed to require. He had been suffering from fever, and it was suspected also that he had disease of the heart. A telegram has been received by the firm, intimating that Mr. Newman died off Ceylon. Though not an obstrusive man, Mr. Newman was always willing to do a fair share of the duties of a citizen. As one of the Justices of the Peace, so long as he felt it possible to hold that position with credit, he gave considerable attention to his public duties, and though not a speaker, his business capacity and experience were valuable and always at the service of the public, as witness his careful report on contracts in connection with the late Municipal scandals, which the Chairman sought, not without a certain measure of success, to stifle. His judgment and conscientiousness rendered him a safe guide in all matters pertaining to the special branches of knowledge which his connection with a well-known firm placed within his reach. He was also a zealous member of the Trades' Association.

THE TRANS-FRONTIER TRADE.—The trans-frontier trade of the Punjab is larger than is perhaps generally supposed ; and the tables appended to the recently-published note on the subject, besides being interesting in themselves, give the reader for the first time, in the annals of Punjab trade statistics, a definite idea as to the mutual relations of the province and foreign States. Taking Kashmere alone, we find it exported into the Punjab some 12,000 maunds of "drugs"—bhang, charas, opium, posth, and others—dyes to the value of Rs. 86,818, and silk worth over two lakhs. "Fruits and nuts" aggregated 16,500 maunds, valued at Rs. 1,18,984 ; grain of kinds amounted to nearly a lakh and a-half, and ghee to Rs. 5,53,699. Tea, spices, and tobacco came up to Rs. 70,000, and sugar to a little more. The wood imported was valued at six lakhs, and the "pashminah" at Rs. 23,30,217. That is to say, Kashmere contributes annually to the import trade of the Punjab, raw produce to the amount of 304,914 maunds, valued at Rs. 22,00,000, and manufactured goods amounting to 7,459 maunds, worth Rs. 33,00,000, or a grand total of considerably over half a million sterling. Cabul, Bajaur, Sewestan, Ladakh, Yarkand, Chinese Thibet, and Tirah, all contribute in order of importance as above ; Cabul running Kashmere close with a grand total of Rs. 52,50,000. The exports to Kashmere were chiefly indigo , Rs. 28,000 ; cotton, Rs. 29,000 ; silk, Rs. 50,000 ; grain of sorts, Rs. 2,40,000 ; ghee, Rs. 68,000 ; metals, Rs. 50,000 ; salt, five lakhs ; sugar, over two lakhs ; tea, a lakh and a-half ; tobacco, Rs. 41,000 ; cloths (Indian), two lakhs ; European cloths, eight lakhs ; pashmina, nearly four lakhs ; specie and bullion, three lakhs ; and woollen goods, Rs. 62,000 ; making with miscellaneous products and manufactures, a total of raw produce exported to Kashmere alone of Rs. 15,70,000, and of manufactured goods. Rs. 18,50,000, or a grand total of 34½ lakhs. The export trade with other foreign States falls into the following order ; Cabul (nearly double Kashmere), 61 lakhs ; Ladakh and Sewestan, about a lakh and a-half each ; Yarkand, under a lakh ; Bajaur, about half a lakh ; Tirah, Rs. 6,000 ; and Chinese Thibet, Rs. 1,320. One of the most interesting items is tea. The import of tea into the Punjab from foreign States was valued at Rs. 45, the exports at 16½ lakhs. Of this 14½ lakhs worth was carried to Cabul, and 1½ lakh to Kashmere. The bulk of the remainder, 331 maunds, valued at Rs. 37,560, was exported to Yarkand. How much of the whole was Indian tea is not stated, but it is supposed to have been in greater part the Chinese leaf.—Pioneer.

THE GOVERNOR.—His Grace the Governor and household, and the heads of the several Government Departments, have now fairly settled down in Ooty, and our latest accounts from the Hills report all well there.—Athenæum, May 13.

IRREGULARITIES IN THE 24TH N.I.—For some time past certain irregularities connected with the 24th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, stationed at Palamcottah, have been affording food for the military gossips, and we learn that these irregularities, which are of a serious nature, are now under investigation, and are likely to lead to grave results, involving loss of appointments, if not courts-martial.—Madras Times.

MISSIONS IN SOUTHERN INDIA.—The statistical returns of the Native Christian congregations in the South India Mission of the C.M.S., for the year ending September 30, 1875, show a record of baptisms during the year of 1,275 adults and 2,115 children. The total number of baptised persons is 48,928, of communicants 12,728. The native agency numbers 339, with a force of 26 European missionaries. The amount contributed during the year to the Native Church Fund is Rs. 22,271. The number of villages containing Christians is 1,054.

Sir Neville Chamberlain and staff leave this on Monday evening and will visit and inspect the troops at Bangalore en route.—Athenæum, May 13.

A NEW FORM OF DISEASE.—The Madras Mail learns from Pondicherry that the new form of disease which lately prevailed at Salem, and was made the subject of correspondence between the Collector of that district and Government, and referred to the Surgeon-General I.M.D. for his opinion, has made its appearance in the French Settlement of Pondicherry. The complaint, we are told, "commences with the sensation of a sudden sting, as if from an insect, in the under part of the foot, accompanied by an aching pain, which running gradually up the leg, in a few hours reaches the heart, and puts a sudden end to the patient's life." From the circumstance of its speedy progress and termination it is not inaptly termed by the natives "Soorookhoo Vipathi," or "Quick Disease." The remedy applied by the Vythians or native doctors of the town is a preparation, we are told, of "goat's dung," or rather "the undigested food taken out of the bowels of the goat," which, our correspondent says, is extensively used, and has proved efficacious. This preparation is now sold in the bazaars at Pondicherry for six pie, or half an anna a pollum, a remarkable proof, if nothing else, of what faith is placed in the nostrum by the natives.

ANOTHER SWIMMING FEAT AT KARACHI.—We chronicled a short time back a swimming feat performed by Masters Price and Wray from Groyn, near Kiamari, to Mr. Humby's Pier. We have now to report a still greater feat performed the other morning by a lad of fifteen years of age, Master Harry Mason, a son of the senior pilot of the port. The lad swam from the Pilot Bunder at Manora to the Railway Pier at Kamari, and apparently with little exertion, for when he got to his destination he seemed as lively as when he started. A boat accompanied Master Harry, with Masters Alexander Mason and Archibald Bryce, to render assistance if needed, but it was not required.—Sind News, May 1.

THE WRECK OF THE S.S. "JAVAD."—With reference to the wreck of the steamship Javad, the British vice-consul at Jeddah has sent the following to the Bombay Shipping Master:—"This vessel was lost on the reefs about twenty-five miles from the town. Only very meagre information can be obtained, as none of the survivors are now in Jeddah, but the nature of the disaster fully confirms the report that has reached Bombay. The divers that went down with the bugla report the Javad on her side under water. The 'tween decks were full of dead bodies. Nothing has been heard of the Europeans that were on board, and it is the general opinion that they have all been lost. A pilgrim that was amongst the number saved found his way back here, and informed persons that as soon as the vessel struck the captain and chief officer were seized by the passengers and tied to the mast, and that they went down with the ship."

BARON LARPENT.—We regret to hear that the illness which Baron de H. Larpent had before leaving Poona has greatly increased on the voyage home. He had severe pain in the head going up the Red Sea, and by latest accounts the whole of the lower part of his body below the stomach has become completely paralysed, and he has no power over it. His illness was considered very serious indeed. All his friends in Poona will greatly regret to hear of his sufferings. It is not always safe for invalids to be sent home at this season of the year, when the heat in the Red Sea is sometimes so intense. Baron de H. Larpent has been much liked in Poona, where he has been for several years Judge at different intervals—interrupted by a visit to England and an acting appointment as Judge of the High Court.—Deccan Herald.

PASSENGERS FOR EUROPE.—The gathering on Monday evening last at the Apollo Bunder, when passengers by the mail steamer were leaving the shore amidst the hearty good wishes of their friends, was more than usually fashionable and numerous. The bunder head was excessively crowded with carriages, through which a passage could not without difficulty be obtained. The friends of Dr. Mackenzie and Mr. J. M. Maclean, who were among those who left Bombay yesterday, and both of whom were most handsomely greeted at the dinner given at the Byculla Club on Saturday evening, had mustered strongly at the wharf to wish them bon voyage. Among many others present on the occasion we observed Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bart., C.S.I., Messrs. W. G. Hall, A. C. Gumpert, J. Gordon, Burton, Hamilton Maxwell, Captain Morland, Dr. Weir, Mr. L. R. Reid, and several Parsee gentlemen who had assembled specially to bid Mr. Maclean Godspeed.—Bombay Gazette, May 15.

FAREWELL DINNER TO DR. MACKENZIE.—To-day's mail steamer takes away from Bombay Dr. Mackenzie, who, as Professor of Surgery at the Grant Medical College and Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy Hospital, has by his skill in performing the most delicate and difficult operations won for himself a reputation which has attracted to the Hospital patients not only from all parts of India but even from beyond the seas. Dr. Mackenzie has also enjoyed during many years the largest private practice in Bombay, and it is given to very few medical men to gain so completely as he has done not only the confidence but the cordial liking of nearly everyone who has had occasion to avail himself of his professional services. A very pleasant proof of the high esteem in which Dr. Mackenzie is held was afforded at the Byculla Club on Saturday evening, when, although at this season of the year everybody who is anybody is supposed to be out of Bombay, between sixty and seventy gentlemen, all members of the Club, assembled to entertain the Doctor at a farewell dinner. Mr. Justice Green took the chair, supported on his right by Mr. Arbuthnot, and on his left by Sir Frank Souter; Mr. Mackintosh Balfour was Vice-Chairman, with Mr. Lushington and Mr. Hamilton Maxwell as his supporters.—Bombay Gazette, May 8.

BURNING OF THE SHIP "KASHGAR."—The British India Steam Navigation Company's steamer Africa, which arrived in harbour on Wednesday evening, brought from Goa the crew of the Kashgar. From the statement of Mr. Miller, the first officer, it appears that the Kashgar left Newcastle, New South Wales, on 23rd January, under the command of Captain Russell. She was bound for Bombay with a cargo of coals for the Bombay Gas Company, and had a crew of seventeen men, all told. At half-past nine o'clock in the evening of the 6th inst. flames were seen issuing from the after part of the ship. The crew did all in their power to extinguish the fire, but they could not get at it. Seeing this, the captain gave orders to make for land. At this time they were about eighteen miles from Goa, and were just able to see the lights of the town. The fire increased so rapidly that the captain ordered the boats to be got ready, and when they were about fifteen miles from Goa the crew had to abandon the vessel. At this time the whole of the after part of the ship was in a blaze. It was fortunate for the crew that they were so near land, as the fire took place in the after part of the vessel, where all the water and provisions were stored, and the crew had only time to save their personal luggage. They landed at Goa early on Sunday morning, and were brought on by the Africa, which left Goa early on Tuesday morning, arriving in Bombay on the following evening. The vessel was consigned to Messrs. Pelly and Co. The last accounts received about the Kashgar are that on Monday last she was seen by a fishing boat; her after part was then burnt down to the water's edge, but part of her foremast was standing. So rapidly did the fire spread that the captain had not even time to unscrew the outer case of his chronometer, but had to be satisfied with taking the chronometer itself away.—Times of India, May 15.

TIGER SHOT NEAR CALLIAN.—CALLIAN, May 7.—On Saturday, the 6th inst., a large male tiger was shot near Wassind and brought into this station, to the no small astonishment of the people here, by Messrs. Collins and Fraser, of this station. About 1 P.M. Mr. Collins came in and reported a tiger on his district, and Mr. Fraser immediately joined him, and the two went back again and found the brute where he was left in the morning, viz., under a small bridge of the railway. They immediately proceeded to attack him, but it took six shots from Snider rifles, at about thirty yards, before he would come out. The tiger then came with a rush and a tremendous roar at his assailants, who, however, received him with another volley of four shots, which brought him to earth. It was said that the animal had been wounded by a gateman during the night, but of this there is not sufficient proof. He, however, took ten bullets before he succumbed, and when measured three hours after the death, although cramped and shrivelled (his tail had not been pulled out of joint), he measured from tip of nose to end of tail 9 feet and 5 inches, and stood 3 feet 9 inches high at the shoulder, allowing for his feet to be in a standing position. It is supposed to have been a man-eater, and one man got severely mauled before the shooting party arrived.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR'S PROPHECY AND ITS FULFILMENT.—The results of the late First Arts examination in the Bombay University can hardly have given satisfaction to any one. What is to be thought, indeed, of the state of education in the Presidency, when out of 176 undergraduates who aspired to take the next step towards a degree in the University only twenty-nine were successful? Perhaps the Hindus may feel some satisfaction in the dubious distinction that has, it seems to us, befallen them, in the fact that the youths of their race form a good two-thirds of the fortunate few. But certainly the Parsis cannot be satisfied with themselves, seeing that only five of them were found to be up to the mark, two of these, be it said, coming from St. Xavier's College. As to the Christian body, who were represented among the victors by one European and one Portuguese, we must leave them in company with the one Mohammedan, who represented his creed among the happy few; assuredly but little satisfaction can be enjoyed by those three successful units. But apart from the candidates and the races represented by them, we venture to opine that even the Vice-Chancellor of the University must find himself much disconcerted by the results on which we are commenting. It will be remembered that at the Convocation held in January, the Vice-Chancellor's speech was conspicuous for its one observation, which to many persons seemed not to be well founded. The remark was that severe matriculation examinations lead to successful examinations for the University Degree in Arts. But how strongly the remark stands condemned by the results of this, the very first examination after it was uttered. It happens that the Matriculation examination in 1874, which gave the undergraduates who have just made themselves rather notorious, was particularly severe; out of 1,084 candidates at the Matriculation examination in that year, only 262 passed. But, according to the Vice-Chancellor, that severity should have told in favour of the F.E.A. examination in 1876. Whether it did so tell, let the monster hecatomb before us give evidence.—Bombay Catholic Examiner.

REVENUE JURISDICTION BILL.—The Englishman makes the following remarks on the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Bill:—"Fortunately for Lord Northbrook's reputation as a politician, we have chanced upon certain recorded evidence, which shows that, in point of principle, he takes quite as strong a view, as do any of the opponents of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Bill, of the evil there is in executive officers being placed above the law, or being allowed to usurp judicial functions. It would be as idle to gild a golden guinea as for us to attempt to add force to his Excellency's own declaration on this vital question of good administration. The record we transcribe is an extract from a Resolution of the Governor-General in Council, dated May 14, 1873, No. 832, and may be found in the Gazette of India, Saturday, May 24, 1873:—

Para. III.: His Excellency in Council desires that there may be no misunderstanding as to the views and wishes of the Government of India, with respect to litigation in which the Government is concerned. In many parts of India, the union of judicial with executive functions in one chief officer of a district is still, and may long be, inevitable, and his Excellency in Council trusts that all officers who exercise this double power realise the responsibility which it throws upon them for scrupulous observance of equity in all suits to which the Government which they serve is a party. To lean towards technical pleas in favour of Government, or towards technical obstacles against a suit which Government defends, whenever such pleas or obstacles merely hinder a decision on the merits—to strain laws for the advantage of Government—all these things would be exactly contrary to the rule of judicial conduct, which, in such cases, the Government desires to impose.

His Excellency in Council expects all officers to understand that the interests of Government are most effectually promoted by sedulously upholding this high standard of entire impartiality.

As before remarked, we can say nothing to add to the weight of this admirably clear enunciation of a great principle; but if the 'Bombay agitators'—as they are scornfully styled by some official or sycophantic scribe—wish to give fresh point to their remonstrances, they will find it in Lord Northbrook's own works. For instance, that sentence commencing 'To lean towards technical pleas, &c.,' forms a telling annotation on the whole story of the Kabilpur case, and also applies to several other cases conducted, or attempted to be conducted, on similar principles, in the different circumstances of the Southern Konkan. The Hope-Hobhouse Act will permit of cases like these being multiplied without check or fear of judicial exposure; but, in the light of Lord Northbrook's prophetic writing on the wall, such travesty of law cannot be permitted to endure."

OUDH AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The Oudh and Rohilkund Railway Company will hold their general meeting on the 14th inst., and the South Indian Railway Company on the 27th inst.

P. AND O. STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—At the general meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, the directors' report, which has already been referred to under this head, was adopted.

THE P. AND O. STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY FINED.—A fine of 500 rupees has been inflicted on the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for carrying warlike munitions to China via Bombay.

NIZAM'S RAILWAY.—It is notified that the half-yearly interest on the Nizam's State Railway Company's issue of £500,000 Guaranteed Six per Cent. Stock, due 30th inst., will be paid at the counting-house of Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., on and after that date.

THE NATIVE INDIAN ARMY.—Lord Sandhurst proposes to move an address on June 15, for copy of any correspondence which may have lately passed between the Government of India and the India-office with reference to the wants of her Majesty's native forces in India.

THE ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE.—The Gazette announces the following appointments to the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and St. George :—To be an Ordinary Member of the Third Class, or Companion of the Order, Colonel Archibald Edward Harbord Anson, R.A., Lieut.-Governor of the island of Penang.

POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS.— It is announced by order of the Postmaster-General that correspondence for the French colonies will be subject, on and after July 1, to the rates of postage applicable to the Postal Union. There will also be a reduction of postage to the East Indies, Aden, and Zanzibar, and to Australia and New Zealand, via Brindisi, and to Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, China, Labuan, and other foreign countries in the East, either via Brindisi or via Marseilles.

MILITARY.—A competitive examination for the first appointments to the cavalry and infantry is to commence on July 3 at the London University. One hundred and thirty appointments are to be competed for—viz., thirty in the cavalry, ninety in the infantry, and ten in the West India regiments. The long-expected Royal Warrant for the increase of the pay of the non-commissioned officers of the army and privates of the Foot Guards has at length been issued. A study of the new regulations show that all ranks below that of a commissioned officer derive more or less pecuniary advantage.

A SOLDIERS' WIDOW.—The Prince of Wales has done a gracious act to the widow of a corporal of the Chatham Division of Royal Marines. While on duty one night in the Serapis on the passage from Bombay to Calcutta, Corporal Alfred Ledsham fell overboard and was drowned. The body was recovered and taken to Calcutta, where it was buried, the crew of the ship erecting a monument in memory of their comrade. On the return of the Prince to this country a letter was sent to the Equerry to his Royal Highness on behalf of Mrs. Ledsham, when a very kindly-worded letter was received in reply, enclosing a cheque for £20 from his Royal Highness and a photograph of the monument over the grave of her deceased husband.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company was held on Friday afternoon, at the offices in Leadenhall-street; Mr. P. D. Hadow in the chair. The Chairman moved the adoption of the report, which stated that the net profit amounted to £324,440. 11s. 8d. The expenditure was 61·96 per cent. of the receipts, against 70·43 per cent. in the corresponding period of the previous year, and the cost of maintenance of the permanent way and works was £88. 12s. 10d. per railway mile, against £96. 11s. 9d. in 1874. Mr. Arnold seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously, and the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman and d rectors.

INDIAN APPEAL.—RAJAH HURFPOSAND v. SHEO DYAL.—The property in dispute in this appeal was amassed by an undivided Hindoo family carrying on business as bankers. The property, which is situated in Oude, came within the terms of Lord Canning's well-known proclamation of 1858, confiscating to the British Government the proprietary right in the soil of the province. It appeared that the family in question had rendered great services to the British Government during the Mutiny, and as a reward their lands had been exempted from the confiscation, and other forfeited lands were transferred to their possession. The grant of this property was made to one member of the family, as their lordships now held, for the joint benefit of all the members. Their lordships also held that the property must be distributed, according to the law of the Mitacshara, among the descendants of the two brothers per stirpes. They reversed the decrees appealed from, with costs out of the estate.

THE SEE OF CALCUTTA.—Various rumours have been floating as to the Bishopric of Calcutta. Since its definite refusal by Mr. Maclagan it was said that Lord Salisbury had offered it to the Rev. W. Milman, a son of the late distinguished historian of Latin Christianity, dean of St. Paul's, and a cousin of the late Bishop of Calcutta. It would, perhaps, have been well if the Milman tradition had been kept up in the diocese of Calcutta, and Mr. W. Milman, a canon of St. Paul's, and vicar of St. Augustine's, is a clergyman of some mark and note. It is stated, however, that he also has refused the offer of the Secretary of State for India. The truth is that Calcutta is believed to be unhealthy, and that there is great difficulty in getting any one to accept the see. It is generally believed that the Marquis of Salisbury would be unwilling to appoint any clergyman unless he were a High-Churchman. Anyhow, at present this important see appears to be going begging, and there has even been a theory that a rather obscure young Oxford graduate, who is only a few years over thirty, has a chance.—Home News.

SIR JOSEPH FAYRER.—The complimentary dinner given by the officers of the Indian Medical Service to Sir Joseph Fayrer came off on the Queen's birthday, at St. James's Hall. The chair was occupied by Dr. Forsyth, C.B., Inspector-General retired, General Alexander returning thanks for the Army, and Sir Alexander Armstrong for the Navy. The Chairman proposed the health of Sir Joseph Fayrer, who on rising to return thanks was received with much applause. He proceeded to give a rapid sketch of the Prince's tour— the pleasures, the difficulties, and the dangers with which it had been attended. His anxieties were not a little increased on finding it necessary to recommend an alteration in the arrangements for an extension of the journey to Southern India, where cholera then prevailed. His responsibilities were, however, lightened by the kind and efficient aid he at all times received from his brethren of the service. Amongst the company present were Deputy Surgeon-General Mackinnon, C.B., Professor Longmore, Surgeon-General F. Innes, C.B., Dr. Leckie, Surgeon-General Cox, Mr. Jabez Hogg, Dr. Playfair, &c.

ARRIVAL OF SIR SALAR JUNG.—Sir Salar Jung arrived at Folkestone on Thursday evening from Paris, and was met by the Mayor and Corporation of the town, who presented him with an address. In reply Sir Salar said :—

I thank you most heartily for your very cordial expressions of welcome on my arrival in England. It affords me the greatest interest and pleasure to carry out my long cherished desire to see this country, with which the family of my master, his Highness the Nizam, has been so closely connected during the past century. I can also claim an intimate association with some of the highest officers of the British Government, dating back as far as the year when my great grandfather, Meer Aulum, on the part of the Nizam, proceeded to Calcutta to arrange with Lord Cornwallis the treaty and alliance for making the first war against Tippoo Sahib. You have alluded to the recent visit of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to India, and I must ask your permission to add my assurance to your conviction on this subject—namely, that England and India are thereby knit closer together in bonds of unity and peace. The opportunity offered to the Princes and nobles of the native States to do honour to the Heir Apparent to the British Throne has been gladly and faithfully accepted wherever it was possible, and I can affirm the result is that this Royal visit has very materially strengthened the affection and developed the loyal feelings of the native Princes and people of India to the British Crown and to the Empress of India, and I shall ever pray for the prosperity of Great Britain and her Indian Empire.

His Highness was loudly cheered, and was then carried to the special train in waiting. He was attended by about sixty servants. His Highness arrived in London at half-past eight, and was conveyed to a carriage, and driven to a residence prepared for him in Piccadilly.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, May 29.—THE NIZAM'S STATE RAILWAY.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, in answer to Mr. LOWE, said that it was true that the shares of a company formed by the Nizam for the construction of a railway were placed upon the London market last year. This, however, was in accordance with an arrangement made between the Governments of Lord Mayo and the Nizam.

DESERTION FROM THE ARMY.—Mr. HARDY, in reply to Mr. HOPWOOD, stated that his attention had been drawn to the case of Samuel Chappell, charged with deserting from the 85th Regiment twenty-two years ago. This man had been arrested as a deserter, and taken before the Stockport magistrates, where he produced a certificate of naturalisation as an American subject. The magistrates then wrote to the War Office for advice. The prisoner was finally tried, but he was not punished, on account of his ill-health and for other reasons, and, in addition, his discharge had been sent down to him, with an order of protection for the future.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 1.—INDIAN GAOLS.—Lord G. HAMILTON, in answer to Mr. A. M'ARTHUR, said : There is no doubt that overcrowding is an evil which has been complained of in Indian gaols, but in the new gaols steps have been taken to remedy this evil. The prisoners are, however, classified with great care. In certain prisons convicts are employed as gaol servants, but never in greater proportion than 12 per cent. of the average strength of the prisoners. The various Governments in India have done much during the past few years towards improving gaols, both as to accommodation as well as to moral instruction and superintendence, and the hon. gentleman may rest assured that this important subject will still continue to occupy their attention.

PATIALA.—There is every probability of the Supreme Government permitting the present Ministers at Patiala to carry on the administration of the State, as they have heretofore done, without the assistance of a British official. Our reason for supposing this is based on the request made by the three Phulkian Chiefs (Patiala, Nabha, and Jhind) to the Government of India in 1858, which received favourable consideration, and was ultimately acceded to. The following are the terms of it:—That in case of a minority in any one of the three houses, a Council of Regency, formed of three of the old and trusted Ministers of the State, should be appointed by the British Agent in consultation with the two other Phulkian Chiefs; but that all strangers and relatives of the minor should be excluded from the Council. Khalifa Mahommed Husun, the Prime Minister, who has been the mainstay of the State for the last six years, and the chief mover in all the improvements that have been carried out, will doubtless be made president of the Council of Regency, as we believe that the Punjab Government has great confidence in his ability and integrity. There are four other chief ministers; the two other members will most likely be selected from these, or else two will take it in turn to sit with the President in Council. The Government of the Punjab is, we believe, adverse to sending a British resident to administer the State. We ourselves see no reason why such a course should be carried out. There is every prospect, indeed, that if the present ministry is backed up by the Government, they will do the best in their power to keep up their good name and that of the Patiala State. They will be put on their mettle, as they well know what would result from mismanagement. If they continue to carry on their duties as efficiently as they did during the late Maharajah's lifetime, the State will flourish, and remain, as heretofore, the most civilised in Northern India.—Pioneer.

HANDSOME AMENDS.—The following official paper needs no comment on our part:—

No. 38.—From the Officiating Commissioner, Benares Division, to the Officiating Secretary to the Government, North-Western Provinces, dated Benares, March 21.

Sir,—With reference to the concluding remarks in para. 65 of the orders of Government on the Police Administration Report of these provinces for 1874, and to para. 5 of my review of the Benares Police Reports which elicited the same, I have the honour to state for the information of Government that I have, within the last two days, been furnished, through the courtesy of the Civil and Sessions Judge here, with a copy of the order of his predecessor reversing the decision of the Munsiff on which I had animadverted.

Coupling the Magistrate's report of the case (which is strictly correct in facts) with the statement which Mr. Colvin made that the judge had upset the Munsiff's decision, I too hastily arrived at the conclusion that the judge in so doing had regarded the said decision as an unjust one. I find, however, now that I have had an opportunity of reading Mr. Willock's judgment, that he reversed the Munsiff's decision simply on legal grounds, and without calling into question or impugning in any other way the justice thereof. My remarks, therefore, were entirely uncalled for, recorded as they were under the erroneous impression that I was merely following in the footsteps of the judge.

The above facts having come to my knowledge, I take the earliest opportunity of making the only reparation in my power to the Munsiff, whose character for justice I had thus unjustly assailed, and beg, therefore, that, as Government called the attention of the High Court of Judicature to my former remarks, a copy of this letter may also be transmitted to the Court in vindication on my part of the Munsiff's character, and in expression of my extreme regret that one of the judges subordinate to that Court should have thus suffered unmerited obloquy, though only for a time, at my hands.

I have also given the judge here, Mr. Brodhurst, a copy of this letter, and I have asked him to express to the Munsiff my great regret that I should have injured him, as I did, both in thought and word.—I have, &c., C. P. CARMICHAEL, Officiating Commissioner.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

COCKLE'S PILLS,

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 22; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, May 20; Calcutta, May 19.

OF the latest mail news perhaps the most important is the departure from Simla of the Viceroy's native aide-de-camp with despatches for the Amir of Kabul. The officer in question passed through Peshawar about the middle of May. The exact object of his errand had not transpired; but to judge from a carefully ambiguous article in the Pioneer it would seem that Lord Lytton's Government has been tempted to revive the old oft-rejected and hitherto bootless project of maintaining an English Envoy or Resident at Kabul. If the idea were regarded merely from Indian or Afghan standpoints there would probably be, as the Allahabad journal puts it—

"A general agreement to the effect that no reasonable probabilities would justify the permanent establishment of an European agency within Afghan territory. Diplomacy in the east is not quite so simple a matter as in Europe, and besides the question whether circumstances are likely to require the presence of a British envoy at a foreign Court, the Government of India has to consider what risks such a representative would be likely to run, and whether it is worth while to confront the obligations which it would certainly have to recognise if it should send such an envoy, and if he were to fall a victim to any of the multifarious intrigues and disturbances to which native Indian States are so especially liable.

On the other hand there are some things "connected with events further in the interior"—why not say at once in Central Asia?—which an English political might ferret out at the Afghan capital; and "it may be questioned whether in this very exceptional case the Government would not be justified in running certain risks—less, perhaps, whatever happened, than they have generally been considered." We are then told in somewhat plainer terms, that on this question Lord Northbrook held the same view as his predecessors against the view favoured by the Secretary of State. Lord Lytton, however, being assumedly at one with Lord Salisbury, the old scheme is once more taken up; but our mysterious contemporary still feels "tolerably confident in asserting that the notion of sending an envoy to Cabul is not under consideration in such a way as to render the arrangement probable, except under some entirely new combination of circumstances. That such a measure would be in harmony with a foreign policy for India receiving its impulse from the present Ministry at home, seems clear; and nothing would surprise us less than its realisation, if the Central Asian question should become additionally embarrassing." Quiet-going and prudent people, however, "may be at peace for the present;" for the Allahabad oracle "cannot hear that Kabul is marked out to afford a political opening for any modern Elphinstone." This means, we suppose, that Lord Lytton is merely sounding Sher Ali on the matter in hand, and is quite prepared to be disappointed.

A Government resolution placing the Bombay Mint under the direct administration of the Government of India has just been published. The Government hold that whatever of local character the Mint formerly had has now ceased, owing to the changes caused by the Suez Canal; nor does there seem to be any advantage in the interposition of the local Government between the Bombay Mint Master and the Government of India which could compensate for the inconvenience therein involved. The success of the Mint administration by the Bombay Government is at the same time cordially acknowledged. It is decreed that henceforth the senior Mint Master shall receive the higher pay of whichever Mint he may have charge.

A RECENT visitor to Kashmir, on his return to Rawal Pindi, gave the correspondent of a Bombay journal an appalling account of the extent and fatality of the cholera epidemic now raging in Kashmir. The inhabitants, he said, were dying by hundreds, and the disease had spread throughout the valley. The reports sent to our Government were utterly untrustworthy, owing to the lax system of registering deaths. The quarantine establishment between Kashmir and Marri is said to be a farce, those seeking ingress finding no difficulty in evading the same. It appears that the Punjab Sanitary Commissioner, Dr. D. Renzy, is of the same opinion, as he has recommended the removal of the quarantine.

THE contract between the King of Burma and some Italians for the intended railway from Mandalay to the British Indian frontier has been duly signed. The line is to be completed in six years and a half, and the King guarantees 12 per cent. interest until he has paid all costs of making the railway.

A PUBLIC meeting was to be held in Calcutta to consider the questions raised by the incidents connected with the late famine in Bengal, especially with regard to the making of that subject a party question in the House of Commons. The requisition to the Sheriff to convene the meeting was signed by all the leading barristers and pleaders, and by many of the leading members of the mercantile community.

MR. RIDSDALE, of the Bengal Civil Service, has been appointed Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Assam.

THE report of the Public Works Department for the official year 1874-75 tells a satisfactory tale of the progress of arboriculture through the North-West Provinces. In Azimgarh alone, which may be taken as a fair specimen of districts in the plains, 3,643 trees were planted on the several lines of road during the year, and two nurseries containing 3,876 trees, chiefly shisham, nim, pipal, jamun, mangoe, and siris are kept up. In the Kamaon division a pleasant hill climate has encouraged the planting out of apple, pear, and peach trees, and, in fact, of nearly all the fruit trees known in England. The importance of a supply of good fruit is so great, especially where invalids and children are concerned, that more yet might be done in this direction. In Saharanpur, for instance, an energetic magistrate succeeded a few years ago in growing peaches equal to any seen in England, in place of the small hard, Indian fruit of the same kind. The report also contains some useful hints. It is noted that in some places where difficulty has been found in getting trees to grow, owing to saltpetre soil and white ants, a solution of tutia or sulphate of copper used once a fortnight, and a solution of arsenic used once only, has been used with good effect. The advantage of protecting young trees by simply digging a trench round the plant, instead of building a wall, is thus conclusively argued:—"The objection to the wall system was that all air was excluded from the root of the tree and prevented its growth, and also after the rains the walls required renewal. The custom of planting cactus round the tree is even worse than the wall, as the cactus, being the stronger plant, absorbs all the strength of the soil and leaves the young tree impoverished, and also chokes it up from above. With the tree protection described above, the young plant gets abundance of air, is open to regular inspection, takes root sooner, and the root has a tendency to go perpendicularly down and not spread out. The cost is one anna each, and nothing for maintenance. Trees so protected are seldom eaten by animals if the mound in the centre is made small enough."

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has published a resolution in which he proposes to grant scholarships for proficiency to girls in the three divisions of the Presidency, Burdwan and Dacca. The idea is professedly taken from the Ootturpara Hitakari Sobha, which has had some success in adopting a system of girls' scholarships. The Lieutenant-Governor consulted the Director as to the feasibility of some similar system being adopted by Government, and Mr. Woodrow is of opinion that it should receive a trial in the three divisions above-named. "In the districts which comprise these divisions he proposes to have scholarship examinations for girls held in three grades—primary, intermediate and vernacular. He would make the standards nearly the same as in the corresponding scholarships for boys, substituting needlework, embroidery, and knitting for higher arithmetic and science." No additional assignments are at present to be made for these scholarships. The local committees in the different districts are to expend on them such portion—not exceeding a fourth of their scholarship grant—as they may deem advisable. In Calcutta, where there is no district committee, the scheme must stand over till next year, as Government cannot provide the one thousand and eight hundred rupees which Mr. Woodrow asks for. The committees are to be guided by their own discretion as to whether they will best forward the cause of female education by largely establishing scholarships, or by extending the present practices of rewarding regular attendance and of rewarding gurus, or teachers, according to the number of their female pupils. "But it must be understood that in all districts of the three divisions referred to, and as far as possible in all districts throughout the Lower Provinces, the Government will expect that some substantial portion either of the Government grant-in-aid or of the scholarship assignment, or of both these funds, shall be devoted to the promotion of female education."

A RANGOON telegram of June 9 states that Mr. Grosvenor when at Mandalay was not admitted to the presence of the King of Burmah. All Mr. Grosvenor's despatches have been sent to Simla, and the result of his mission has not been allowed to transpire at Rangoon.

IF the reports just telegraphed from Calcutta by the Times correspondent have any foundation, the Grosvenor mission of inquiry into the murder of Mr. Margary has ended, as so many feared it would, in smoke. According to that authority, it is rumoured that the Mission has been a success only so far that the party has arrived safe. The inquiry into Mr. Margary's murder was futile, and no results were obtained. Mr. Grosvenor's report "probably exculpates the King of Burmah and Lisitahi. The report will probably not be published during the existence of the European complications." It is further stated that the Rangoon public are much disappointed with the result of the Mission. Messrs. Baber and Davenport return to China at once. Mr. Grosvenor remains at Rangoon awaiting orders for Simla or China.

THE same informant mentions a rumour that the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief will make a two months' tour along the North-Western frontier early in the next cold season. This, and the fact that Lord Lytton lately summoned to Simla Sir Lewis Pelly, Dr. Bellew, and other officers of experience, are held to indicate a vigorous frontier policy.

THE Legislative Council will hold its first meeting at Simla on the 22nd inst. Several officials from various Provinces are now assembled at Simla to confer regarding the adoption of a uniform system of compiling and recording trade and agricultural statistics. It appears that some uneasiness was lately felt in India owing to the continued reports of the Viceroy's ill-health. He is said, however, to have derived much benefit from his short stay at Mashobra, near Simla.

ACCORDING to latest telegrams the Khan of Khelat has gone to Mastang to meet Major Sandeman. The neighbouring tribes continue friendly to the mission. The Bolan Pass is open, and caravans are passing through safely. It is stated that the Afridis express their readiness to allow the repair of the Kohat Pass road, if they are paid a certain sum for their forbearance. No fresh acts of aggression have been committed, but our troops still blockade the Adam Khel tribe, which is said to be suffering greatly in consequence.

NEWS has just been received in Calcutta from the Persian Gulf of the increasing virulence of the plague. The Indian Medical Gazette points out that the climate, soil, and people of Bengal are adapted for an extension of the plague, and urges extensive sanitary reforms in the native part of Calcutta. It describes the state of some quarters as positively loathsome.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of yesterday's date the Pioneer says that the Government has sent home a report on the unsatisfactory state of the Indian Marine. It objects to paying £70,000 yearly to the Admiralty unless it is allowed some control over the men-of-war on the East Indian Station. It demands either a naval force of its own, or that the present squadron should be put under its orders. The former seems to us the only way of getting out of the mess caused by the amalgamation; and our remark holds good of the Army also. Neither service can be efficient so long as it is directly managed from this country. The report also draws attention to the anomalous state of affairs regarding vessels belonging to the Indian Government. Not being war ships, naval discipline cannot be enforced; but, as they are not merchant ships, the Merchant Shipping Act does not apply to them, and as the Viceroy's Council can legislate only for India, there are apparently no means of enforcing discipline on board these vessels when at sea. It is certainly desirable that steps should be taken to put a stop to this anomaly.

IT has at length been publicly announced that the late Viceroy of India is henceforth to be known as Earl of Northbrook; a dignity which he has fairly earned by four years of prudent administration and conscientious discharge of very important duties, including many months of hard and anxious labour on account of the Bengal Famine. Sir R. Temple, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, has also been rewarded with a Baronetcy for his zeal in carrying out the needful measures of famine relief, on a scale which may have been more than adequate to the occasion. Sir Richard, at any rate, has little cause to complain of insufficient recognition of services which he himself has always taken good care that the world should not overlook. His talents have never been hid behind a bushel, and few men have cultivated with equal success the art of rising by means of a fluent and industrious pen. Certainly no other civilian of his standing has risen to the same height; and if a series of well-written official reports about himself and a taste for galloping about the country are the only sure tests of commanding statesmanship, the honours he has won have been richly deserved.

AT the recent anniversary meeting of the Asiatic Society Mr. Burgess, who has just returned from his second survey of the rock caves of Western India, exhibited a large number of architectural drawings carefully executed, like those contained in his last book. The traceries he showed were quite as elaborate as the most intricate mouldings of European ceilings during the florid periods of architectural art. Another set of drawings were from nude sculptures of Hindu goddesses and women, all hip and breast, as Hindu sculptures generally are. The collection of drawings was very interesting, and attracted the attention of most of the members. One thing especially noted was the general beauty, together with the artistic symmetry, of the pillars, and of those traceries which were strictly confined in the limited configuration of circles. Professor Monier Williams afterwards spoke at great length about his newest scheme for establishing at Oxford a "School" and an "Institute" for Hindus. He would have Hindus, who could pass an examination in Sanskrit, Arabic, and Persian, exempted from the necessity of passing in Latin or Greek. The objections to this part of his scheme we have already touched upon, and he said nothing on this occasion which would avail to remove them. The Professor's account of various new phases of religious belief in India was full of interest; but when he told his hearers that he had met with Brahmans who could speak Sanskrit fluently, some of them must have felt a wish to know where those extraordinary beings could be found.

We are glad to see that Professor Monier Williams's zeal for Sanskrit does not carry him quite so far as the same passion carries the writer of a letter which appeared lately in the Times. "H. C." is strongly of opinion that "with all our other scholastic acquisitions we should be careful to master that which will prove a help to us as rulers of the vast and varied races of Hindostan, and will at the same time enrich our language and extend our circle of knowledge. I have suggested that, if the introduction of Sanskrit into our ordinary educational course would be otherwise impracticable, we might substitute this language for Greek, and that the advantages we should derive with respect to orthography, etymology, and from gaining access to an ancient and extensive literature would amply compensate us for the loss we should otherwise sustain." "H. C." trusts that, if Professor Williams agrees with this view, "no time will be lost in securing, in the Oxford University Bill now before the House of Commons, a due recognition of the claims of Sanskrit, and that very soon we may have the average English schoolboy at least as familiar with this singularly perfect language as he is now supposed to be with that of ancient Greece." Surely there is "nothing like leather." Not content with asking for Sanskrit a place however modest in the list of studies for English schoolboys, this fond enthusiast would dethrone from its old supremacy the standard mouthpiece of ancient learning, literature, art, and philosophy, in favour of a language which, however useful as an instrument of scientific scholarship and an aid to the understanding of many subjects more or less interesting to modern thinkers, cannot for a moment be compared with Greek as an intellectual training for our English youth.

Dr. Forbes Watson's scheme of an "Imperial Museum for India and the Colonies" seems to have made but little advance towards realisation since we last discussed it. From a note to his latest pamphlet on the subject we learn that in the event of the Government being unable to see its way to provide the money required for the purchase of a suitable site from the Crown, it is intended to raise the amount by subscription. To those who take any enlightened interest in Dr. Watson's plan for an institution that shall worthily represent "the past history and the present resources of the British Empire throughout the world," we commend the careful study of the pamphlet in which he has once more explained and illustrated his views on a matter of undoubted importance. With regard to the site of the proposed buildings—one for India, the other for the Colonies—there can be little doubt of the superior advantages of the old Fife House site on the Thames Embankment, in the immediate neighbourhood of Charing Cross, of the Houses of Parliament, and of the India and Colonial Offices. This would also be within easy reach of the business quarters of London, while it is equally obvious that South Kensington, however suited for other purposes, lies too far away from the centres of political and business life to afford easy access to the classes directly interested in Indian and Colonial matters. Nor is it likely that the Colonies will support a proposal to place their Museum at South Kensington, whereas there are good grounds for believing that they will readily answer to the call if the Embankment site can be obtained. Dr. Watson's scheme does not appear to clash in any way with that of Professor Williams, and even if it did, there is ample room for both; the scope of the one being mainly if not altogether literary, while that of the other is rather mercantile and industrial, with something of an artistic and literary background. Dr. Watson appeals to a far wider public than the Sanskrit Professor, to all in fact who have any direct interest in the material progress of India and the Colonies, as well as those who resort to a museum for special information on this or that branch of literary or scientific research.

In accepting the post of Chief Commissioner of Mysor and Kurg Mr. C. B. Saunders does not enter on a lower appointment than the Residentship at Haidarabad. Whatever causes brought about his retirement from the latter place, it is certain that his recent departure for India involves no loss of official rank or pay. As Chief Commissioner of the province in which he served as Judicial Commissioner before his preferment to Haidarabad, Mr. Saunders will continue to draw the same salary which he drew as Resident at the capital of the Nizam. It was only, we believe, on the understanding that his new office would thus be raised to the dignity of his former one that he accepted the post which had been offered him before he left India.

We are sorry to hear that Sir Salar Jung's recovery from his late accident is likely to be slower than was at first expected. It appears that his Excellency has broken a bone in his thigh, which may keep him on his couch for several weeks to come.

Regarding the notice of an invention for improvements in the construction of men-of-war, which we publish elsewhere, the inventor, Captain Hanna, of the Bengal Staff Corps, has shown us drawings explaining the manner in which he proposes carrying out these improvements. 1. As regards the protection of the sides of ships, the inventor argues that no matter how thick the iron casing may be, the ram, torpedo, and even shot will penetrate into the vital part of the vessel. Instead, therefore, of uselessly heaping on iron for such protection, he proposes constructing the sides with a clear space between the outer and inner skin; in this open space he proposes placing what he calls a movable or shifting skin, which may consist of teak matting working in drums. The supply drum, which might contain ten or fifteen yards of such matting, should be placed right under the ship's bottom, between the outer and inner skins, and the receiving drum some few feet above the load water line. The mode of operation would be simple. Suppose, for example, a ram had penetrated, as in the case of the late disaster to the Vanguard, it would only be necessary to unwind a sufficient quantity of matting from the lower drum into the upper one, or, in other words, shift the movable skin sufficiently to cover the injured part. This might be repeated over and over again. He has also invented an automatic shutter for the same purpose. 2. His propelling apparatus is a question more suitable for a professional journal; but we might observe that he proposes placing his propellers in wells and bilge channels right under the bottom of ships safe away from all dangers of an external nature. 3. As regards the proposed hydraulic hoist for guns, &c., the inventor proposes utilising the weights of the draught of water for raising a citadel. For example, the pressure of every perpendicular foot of water acting in a citadel of forty feet diameter will raise about thirty-six tons, and in ships of ordinary draught it would be possible to obtain sixteen feet of useful pressure to raise such a citadel three or four feet, which would be quite sufficient to bring the guns into action. This sixteen-feet acting on a citadel of the above dimensions would float nearly six hundred tons. He purposes lowering the citadel again by means of a turbine pump worked by shifting level gearing attached to the propeller shafts. 4. This turbine pump might also by an arrangement of valves be employed in getting rid of the bilge water in case of a serious leak. 5. One of Captain Hanna's methods of steering without rudder is by paddle wheels working in a trough which has free access to the sea on either side, and placed within the ship at right angles to the major axis of the vessel.

Major General Walter Birch, who died last week at Brighton, entered the Bengal Infantry in 1837, became a captain in 1851, a lieutenant-colonel in 1862, and retired as major-general in 1868. His services included the Santhal campaign of 1855-56, and the Mutiny campaign of 1857-58. He took part under Havelock in the action of Mangalwár, the storming of the Alambagh, and the relief of Lucknow Residency. After the second relief of Lucknow he served under Outram in the defence of Alambagh. At one time he was lieutenant-colonel of the 104th Fusiliers.

Odds and Ends.

THE quantity of cotton despatched from the Central Provinces and Berar during the week ending 29th April amounted to 7,705 bales. This total does not include the returns from Higaghat and Wardha, which have not been received. The total for the season amounts to 211,548 bales, which is 82,761 bales less than in 1874-75.

THE quantity of cotton shipped from the Port of Bombay to foreign external ports and foreign Indian ports during the month of March, 1876, amounted to 93,811 bales, weighing 3,67,77,272 lbs., or candies 46,909 11-14, of the value of Rs. 82,25,937.

DURING the last six months of 1875, 617 human beings and 3,536 head of cattle were killed by wild beasts and snakes in the Central Provinces. During the whole year 198 tigers, 635 leopards and panthers, 275 bears, 148 wolves, and 271 hyænas were killed.

MR. J. M. MACLEAN.—The Indian Mirror pronounces the following opinion :—"Mr. J. M. Maclean, proprietor and editor of the Bombay Gazette, has again left for England. We regret Mr. Maclean's departure ; we are sure we shall miss him much. Indian journalism can boast of a few powerful writers like Mr. Maclean. His vigorous style has always invested his writings with a peculiar interest, and it has always been a pleasure to us to read the Bombay Gazette ; but the chief failing in Mr. Maclean has been that he has been rather anti-native, and a man rather of extreme views. He has been no friend to the Native States, and he has always taken a delight in writing them down ; but he has always been a bold and unsparing writer." On the above the Englishman's Saturday Evening Journal remarks :—"Whether the fact of his having always been a 'bold and unsparing writer' is adverted to as an extenuation of Mr. Maclean's hostile attitude to natives is not quite clear ; but it would be refreshing to find Bengalis forgiving their enemies on account of their boldness and ruthlessness."

THE DIAMOND FIELDS OF HAIDARABAD.

FOR some time past an Indian contemporary* has engaged in a correspondence on a subject which it will be interesting to notice at the present moment, as it refers to the territory of the Nizam, whose minister, Sir Salar Jung, is now amongst us. The mineral resources of the Nizam's country are well known to be great, although neglected. In a course of articles in the Times of India, Captain Burton, the Oriental traveller, has drawn attention to the matter, and described, in the most picturesque language, the possessions of the Nizam as being a land of "golden promises," which it is surprising should not have awakened the interest or the cupidity of speculators in mining operations ere now. Captain Burton's attractive descriptions of the Diamond and Gold Fields of Haidarabad have elicited a reply from so practical a mineralogist as Mr. W. Sowerby, C.E., F.G.S., who has been some time in the Nizam's dominions, preparatory to making a complete mineralogical survey of the country. The results of Mr. Sowerby's investigations into the mineral resources of Haidarabad constitute the scientific answer to the unscientic generalisations of the ordinary traveller. Mr. Sowerby's researches and investigations seem to go far to refute the popular belief that the famous mines of Golconda were long since worked out. He writes:—

> The geological features of the country are of a character peculiarly adapted for the production of crystalline substances, whether in the shape of diamonds, chalcedony, or quartz; but how these minerals have been produced, and whether they grow (as the Australian miners say gold grows, and Captain Burton infers), it would be extremely difficult to determine.

The earliest discoveries of diamonds were made at Sambalpur in 1500, and afterwards (in 1534) at a place called Panna, where the magnificent diamond called the "Kohinur, or Mountain of Light," was found in 1550. The diamonds found at Panna proved to be crystals of the purest water, and of great value, and so abundant, that the discoverers rewarded the miners richly. The name of "the mines of Golconda" arose from the circumstance that the crystals found were cut and polished in the city of Golconda. Mr. Sowerby's theory with regard to the formation of crystals may be new to many:

> I apprehend (he continues) the formation of diamonds, as well as of other crystals, is the result of intense heat and the gradual cooling of the substances of which they are composed; and I also suspect that the diamonds are formed in a vacuum, and the more perfect the vacuum the harder they would be—hence the difficulty of making them artificially. I have in my possession some curious specimens of quartz and chalcedony crystals, which have evidently been formed in this manner; and I have also some specimens of cornelian (white), which have all the appearance of having been in the form of paste, not unlike bookbinders' paste, where some sliding motion has produced the appearance of its having been dabbed on the stone with a brush.

Mr. Sowerby's experiences as a Mineralogist were gained some twenty years ago in the diamond fields of South Africa, but his researches there proved greatly disappointing with regard to the quality of the crystals he found. This knowledge has guarded him against too credulous a belief in the worth of the crystals said to be still found in Haidarabad. From what he saw and found in the Nizam's territory, he was satisfied that a certain sort of crystal still existed:—

> Crystals of the purest water and extremely hard are to be found close to the line of those black rocks on which the tombs of the old Kings of Golconda are built, and there are many other localities where such crystals are to be found, notably one in the very heart of Secunderabad—but these crystals are not diamonds.

Mr. Sowerby leaves his crystal researches for awhile to consider the auriferous and other mineral capacities of the rocks and soil of the country. He has little doubt that some parts of the Dakhan are auriferous, but whether sufficiently so to be worked with profit it would be impossible, according to the data he obtained, to decide. The grey and white quartz picked up contained minute but visible grains and plates of gold, and if the search were followed up he believed sufficient would be found to pay more than the expenses of its working. Mr. Sowerby points out that gold and diamonds are not the only minerals lying dormant in Haidarabad. He found indications of zinc in an unmistakable shape, and had no doubt it could be obtained in any quantity if the mines were worked with the enterprise, faith, and earnestness which at this moment mark the nickel mining works at New Caledonia. Mr. Sowerby's survey of the Haidarabad territory it appears was prematurely interrupted:—"Some reasons intervened to prevent the survey going on, and my diligent searches and copious notes became useless;" they were sufficient, however, to prove that Haidarabad is a very rich mineral country. Our mineralogist is anxious to impart, too, that there are some peculiarities in the geology of the Dakhan which resemble in a most remarkable manner other well-known mining countries he has visited as a mineralogist.

In reference to the general question of gold mining in India, Mr. Sowerby mentions circumstances deserving the attention of practical mining engineers:—

> I refer (he says) to a striking example of mismanagement in the mining operations commenced in Wynaad. Instead of the company taking the advice of an expert, machinery has been brought out, and when tried it has failed to answer its purpose—and it was unsuited to the work in some way or other, too light, too small, or too something; so the company, instead of the enterprise paying, as was expected, promises to be a failure.

The results of the survey in the Dakhan, so far as it was allowed to proceed, do not appear to be altogether satisfactory or even favourable to mining operations, except in the case of zinc. There are traces (only traces) of tin, also of copper and galena. Coal and iron exist in vast abundance. But the mineralogist cautions his readers that "the coal is not of a superior quality, and iron can be made so cheaply in England that it will be a very long time before that made in India will be able to compete with the manufactured article at home."

Notices of Books.

The Travels of Guru Tegh Bahadar and Guru Gobind Singh. Translated from the original Gurumukhi, by Sirdar Attar Singh, Chief of Bhadour. Lahore: Indian Public Opinion Press. 1876.

The return of the enterprising scholar, Dr. Leitner, to his official duties at Lahor has been marked by the publication of a work of much interest, viz., a translation of the Sakhi Book of the Sikhs, or tales of the travels of two celebrated Sikh prophets. This very useful translation was made by Sirdar Atta Singh, of Bhadaur; and there can be little doubt that it is due to the liberal minded and friendly interest which Dr. Leitner has made it his pleasing duty to create and foster in native work and native learning. The tales this book contains make us acquainted with the origin of the Sikh religion, the customs of that people, and their prophecies bearing upon political and ecclesiastical matters. The translator, therefore, not unwisely thinks that such a work must be of great value to Government, for it may be taken as certain that the Sikhs will continue subject to the sound influences as heretofore, and their past history is, accordingly, the best index to the statesman as to what may be expected in the future. These ideas have a very practical application in connection with the late Kuka outbreak, for suppressing which Mr. Cowan was sternly dismissed from his appointment.

Sirdar Attar Singh quotes and discusses the prophecies on which the Kuka sect build their hopes, and he states that these deluded people believe the time to be drawing near when their Guru's words will be fulfilled. It is well to remember that these are the words of a native gentleman who is in a much better position to judge of these sentiments than any European can be, and he says:—

If the Kuka sect is not suppressed its doctrines will spread, and lead to outbreaks far more violent and serious than the last. The Sakhi of Sohava* has made a deep impression upon their minds, and, from all I have heard, there is every probability of another attempt to realise the assurances therein given.

The Sikh religion, as found in these tales, is a mixture of the Hindu, Jaina, and Bauddha faiths; the latter possibly deduced from a leaven remaining in the Panjab from ancient times. As regards the rest, drunkenness and a love of fight, with special enmity against the Muhammadans, seem to be the characteristics of Sikhism; cowardice being held to be the worst of vices. The tales themselves are thoroughly childish in their nature; but for this very reason would impress anyone familiar with ordinary Indian life with a firm assurance of their genuineness. Their sole interest lies in the influence they exert over the ignorant peasantry. There are a few scintillations of largeheartedness, to wit, the assurance that "God's name constitutes a Ganges" (p. 23); and a striving after better things is shown by the remark that "all sins, except falsehood, may be forgiven" (p. 109).

We are glad to find that the translation of this curious work was offered to, and accepted by, the Prince of Wales; and we hope that the lessons it teaches will be duly availed of, so that the peace and happiness of India may be more and more assured.

AFFAIRS IN KHELAT.—V.

Although, as a temporary measure, the subsidising of the tribes direct from the Punjab has attained its object in the immunity of that border, nevertheless the fact has been accepted that no satisfactory and complete settlement can be arrived at, embracing both our objects, save through the Khelat State. The question which arose was whether action taken through the Khelat State should be solely through the Khan and by support of his power, or whether we should regard him under the Brahoe constitution as merely the Chief among the Chiefs, and should deal with them separately or collectively. The Sind authorities, with whom have lain till now the political relations of Khelat, inclined to the former view; the Khan was supported, the malcontents discountenanced, and the able Minister encouraged in his career—a la Richelieu. Unfortunately, however, no Oriental ruler will tolerate a Minister who leans on external support. The two ablest Indians of the day—Sir Dinkur Rao and Sir Salar Jung—the Ministers respectively of Gwalior and Hyderabad during the great rebellion of 1857, both fell into disgrace as it became evident that the British Government looked more and more to them, and they more and more to the British Government. Sir Dinkur Rao lost his place. Sir Salar Jung retained his by the uncompromising support of the British and the opportune death of the Nizam, whose successor was an infant in the Seraglio.

Notwithstanding, then, the eminent services of Wullee Mahomed, he gradually fell under the Khan's displeasure. The Khan sought to remove him, but the British Agent supported him. The Khan then sought his life, on which the British Agent took him under his protection and withdrew from Khelat. Left to himself, without his Minister's guidance and unsheltered by the ægis of British support, the Khan soon became involved in a sea of troubles. He tried the expedient of inviting six of his principal opponents, including Nuruddur Mungul, to a banquet, and there murdering the whole of them—but it it has not resulted in the pacification of the Brahoes. No doubt he only forestalled a plot which these men had framed against his life; nevertheless, the Brahoes, instead of being cowed, were only infuriated against him. In the hope of release from his difficulties he has hailed the arrival of the Deputy Commissioner deputed from the Punjab, and the Beloch Chiefs accompanying him (who are the heads of the tribes subject to the British Government). Their mediation has been accepted between the Khan and the insurgent Chiefs, and all parties have accompanied the British officer down to Sind. An arrangement will there be patched up between them, which, unless we take a decided line in the matter, will not be of six months' duration.

The question is, what is it that we want? Do we merely want a quiet frontier and a safe trade route, or do we also desire a strong frontier State like Affghanistan, with the object of continuing our line of outworks from the Hindu Kush to the Persian Gulf? The first can doubtless be attained by independent arrangements with the tribes, by allotting the subsidy, now paid to the Khan, amongst them in the proportions fixed by Nusseer Khan the Second, and by leaving the Khan to his fate, which would soon be to relinquish the throne to the strongest amongst his barons. Ever since the Khan's accession, Azad Khan of Kharan and the Jam of Lus Beyla have been endeavouring to seize the Khanate; and the two first chiefs in Belochistan, those of Sarawan and Jhallawan, have been striving to obtain increased powers to themselves, and to use the Khan as their tool, and if the Khan were left without support or money they would soon attain their objects. Such a course, however, would be politically inexpedient. It can never be wise to allow this principality to disintegrate into a collection of petty Chiefships, whose weakness and rivalries would render them a fair field for Persian intrigue, and an easy prey to her arms, unless actively protected by ourselves. It was thus that all the Beloch States between Kirwan and Mekran and Kharan have been absorbed by Persia since 1850; and it has only been our active interference that has prevented Mekran and Runjgoor from being similarly absorbed, consequent on their loosened relations with Khelat. We saw what this was in the case of Affghanistan. Independent Herat drew us into two Persian wars. Herat as an integral part of Affghanistan is so formidable that Persia rather fears aggression from that quarter than contemplates attack thereon. Similarly Belochistan united under a strong rule would be so well able to take care of itself that there would be little fear of its involving us in complications; while, like Affghanistan, it would be of immediate value to us, under certain circumstances, as an ally.

But an united and strong Belochistan can only be obtained by support extended to the Khan. He must be enabled to tear to pieces the Brahoe constitution, and to break the power of his too independent chiefs. He must be so strengthened as to be able to sweep away a state of things which has never yet been able to exist in an European State, and to the gradual extinction of which Persia and Afghanistan have owed their rehabilitation. It was partly by our assistance that this was achieved in Persia, and it has been entirely owing to us that the Ameer has effected it in Afghanistan. If not effected in Belochistan, and if the state of anarchy which would result from the other line of policy were long to continue (and it could only terminate through some one stronger than Khodadad getting the upper hand and completely subjecting the whole country to his rule) the sure result would be the adoption of the aggressive policy already looked upon in many quarters with favour, and the occupation of the Bolan Pass up to Quetta and probably of Khelat itself.

What is required to enable the Khan to thoroughly consolidate his rule? An able minister and sufficient means. No doubt a reconciliation could be effected between him and Wullee Mahomed on the basis of our refraining to urge reforms upon the Khan through the former, but, instead of dealing with him directly where interference is absolutely requisite. As to means, it was long ago pointed out by General Jacob that the subsidy was utterly inadequate to compensate for the reduction of transit duties on trade and to enable the Khan to hold in check the Murrees and Boogtees and the rebellious Brahoe clans. To double it, as proposed by that officer, and as actually sanctioned for a time, would probably still be inadequate for our purpose, unless we at the same time made him a present of money and arms, as we did to the Ameer of Cabul, to enable him to set on foot and equip a respectable force. The subjection and consolidation of the kingdom resulting from such a measure would then, as in the Ameer's case, result in the collection of an assured revenue sufficient for the purposes of administration, while the yearly subsidy of £10,000 would be adequate to compensate for transit dues and to provide for the holding in check of the Murrees and Boogtees and the protection of the trades routes. The same object could be attained in a different way by the surrender to the Khan of his whilom districts of Hurrund and Dajel on the Murree border, the resources of which, in the days of Mihrab Khan were adequate for the subjection of the Murrees and Boogtees and the protection of the Bolan Pass. We have only to resolve to recognise but one head and one Government in Belochistan—to hold relations with that only and to support that adequately, and the method of operation will not be of much importance.

It is of course easy to declaim against a policy which would give up a country to the mercy of a tyrant, but it is doubtful whether our mission is to redress the wrongs of oppressed nationalists in Central Asia—still more doubtful whether it would be politic to attempt such a rôle. The facts given in our summary will, we think, show that the Khan is as much sinned against as sinning—that the men he has crushed are men whose existence as powers in the State was incompatible with his retention of the throne. The history of Khelat, not to speak of that of other countries, shows that such a constitution as that of the Brahoes is quite impracticable, that it can only produce the struggles which have been going on in Khelat throughout the present century. No doubt the Khan is not such a ruler as we should prefer to support, but it is impossible that an Oriental throne should always be held by a fitting person. If our pursuance of the evidently desirable policy of strengthening as outworks the independent States upon our frontier is to depend upon the fitness of the occupant for the time being of the throne our action will be spasmodic indeed. The Ameer Sher Ali is not exactly the sort of ruler the British would patronise for choice, His eldest son and most of his relatives have been slain, imprisoned, or banished. Nevertheless, we support the Ameer, tyrannous as he is, and powerful for tyranny through that support, because general considerations of advantage both to Afghanistan and India dictate such a course. It is better for his country to be in his hands than convulsed by intestine struggles, and oppressed by many petty tyrants instead of one great one. And it is infinitely better for India that Afghanistan should be united under one strong hand than thus divided and weakened. The only other alternative would be to undertake the government of the country ourselves.

The case of Khelat is identically parallel, and the same arguments apply. If we are not prepared to assume its government ourselves, and to put aside all considerations of right and wrong, it would be a grave impolicy to undertake such an additional costly burden. The best course, in the interests of the country and our own, is to strengthen the Khan. We should of course be bound, as in the case of the Ameer, to keep the Khan as straight as we could. No doubt he would resent vexatious interference in his internal arrangements but he would, probably, owing to his inferior power and status, be more amenable than the Ameer to advice in matters of general policy, and his foreign relations would be as completely under our guidance as are those of Affghanistan. When once the Khan had made short work of domestic faction it is probable that, as in the similar case of the Ameer, his rule would at any rate be better than any Khelat has seen in his own or his father's day, incomparably better than would be that of a number of petty Chiefs striving for the mastery. Of course it would be best that he should manage his barons by tact and liberality, as did his brother; but able rulers like Nusseer Khan cannot always be found, nor, indeed, had Nusseer Khan such factious Chiefs to deal with. At any rate, if he and his barons cannot get on —and it appears impossible that they should—as much through the faults of the barons as of the Khan—it is best in the interests of all parties that the barons should succumb.

One thing is very certain, and that is, that the double relations of the Punjab and Sind acting under different Governments—Bombay and Calcutta—with Khelat affairs have been very prejudicial. The Sind authorities are the natural channel for such relations, both on account of prescription and through their greater knowledge and experience in the questions that arise. Such does not apply, however, to Bombay, and if etiquette does not permit of Sind acting directly under the Central Government while attached to Bombay the sooner it is included in the Punjab (as proposed by Sir Henry Durand, the late Lieutenant-Governor of that Province) to enable it to do so, the sooner will a decided and sound line of policy be adopted. The temporary measure now adopted of sending two Punjab officers to take the Khelat negotiations out of the hands of the Commissioner of Sind does not at all meet the difficulty, and is indeed rather likely to add to the complications.

THE WARORA COAL FIELDS.—By recent investigations we are enabled to state that in the Warora coal field a series of boreholes have been put down, which have proved over twenty million tons of coals, at depths varying from 60 to 450 feet from the surface. The coal seams in some instances are split up into three measures, which are separated by a few feet of shale and sandstone, but the aggregate thickness of coal, which has been proved by boreholes, is from thirty to forty-five feet, and over an area of nearly 1,000 acres, which is by no means the limit of the coal fields. The measures overlaying the coal chiefly consist of a porous soft sandstone, and to this must be attributed much of the delay that has taken place in bringing these works into shape. The sandstone was like an immense sponge full of water, and as the sinking progressed the quantity of water increased, so that the machinery from time to time was found unable to keep the water out of the shaft, and much time was spent in substituting heavier machinery in order to cope with the difficulty. About two years ago an experienced mining engineer was specially sent out from England by the Secretary of State, who placed still heavier machinery on the works, to meet the still increasing "come" of water, which reached at one time about 800 gallons per minute. As the pumping shaft could only answer for the removal of the water, a large winding shaft was also commenced to be sunk to the second seam of coal, which is fifteen feet thick; this was completed in December last. From that time to the present the preliminary openings or galleries in the neighbourhood of the shaft and surface buildings, which are now about 2,000 feet in length, have been made, and somewhere about forty tons of coal per day are being raised to the surface. The sinkings are completed, the water difficulty has been completely subdued, and the means of exit for the coals by railway are at hand.—Delhi Gazette.

THE DEPRECIATED RUPEE.

The Madras Times thinks it is not much use with the rupee at one-and-eight pence and a fraction to console oneself with the temporary character of the fall, and when wives and children in England are crying out for bread, and tradesmen and agents are earnestly demanding remittances on which the Anglo-Indian must lose by exchange some fifteen or so per cent. These persons cannot wait to contemplate, in a serene condition of mind, the future of the currency question; they ask for present eggs, and economists offer them scorpions, or what they deem quite as bad—speculations. If the one-and-eightpenny rupee is not to be considered a permanent scandal after an existence so prolonged as the one it has already enjoyed, no faith can be put in permanency, and, for our own part, we think it would be more to the point to raise the standard to one-and-tenpence at once, than to wait and see what is going to happen in the future. In the old days, when living was cheap, and rupees tolerably abundant, this exchange loss, severe as it now is, would not have borne grievously on men of moderate income; but to-day, coming as it does on high prices, and heavy customs duties, it may be compared to that last straw which broke the camel's back, for it is the culmination of many burdens. Men are unable to educate their children by reason of it, they are plunged in debt on acccount of it, and they are unable either to take a holiday trip to England, or to live there, because of this very last depreciation of income. Whether the State is legally bound or not to pay two shillings in the rupee to its servants, it is certainly the case that one-and-eightpenny rupees have been a source of infinite discomfort and disquietude to the latter. And the interest of employers cannot be in the discomfort and disquietude of the employed. We should think this a political maxim there is no denying. In several ways Lord Salisbury would act even economically, by making the salaries of Indian Government servants more proportionate than they are with prices. And there is another way to look upon it. India is getting a bad name at home as the great field of labour for the middle classes, and it will, before long, perhaps, come to this, that none but natives will take employment in the country. These people are subject to none of the heavy charges which are saddled on Englishmen here, so that exchange and home pensions are of no more significance to them than anything else peculiarly English.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS.

The Englishman discusses some most important correspondence between the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the Government of India on the subject of the late suspension of Council Bills, and the future financial arrangements of the Secretary of State. The Chamber of Commerce demand that the Secretary of State shall either furnish the mercantile community with the silver necessary for their transactions by resuming his bi-monthly drawings on the Presidency treasuries, or that by definitely declaring his intentions on the subject he will enable the local banks to arrange for the provision of the silver, or not, as the case may be. The issue of the correspondence is very much what might have been expected. Whatever question arises in the matter depends upon the peculiar position occupied by the Secretary of State. No ordinary drawer of bills against this country could for a moment be expected to disclose his hand as the Secretary of State has been asked to do. But, then, the transactions of individual drawers are not usually of such vast magnitude as to place it in their power to produce serious derangement of the Money Market by adopting an unexpected course. With the Secretary of State it is otherwise. His drawings are so large that if he ceases them for any time trade must be seriously embarrassed, unless some one else comes forward to take his place by importing the silver that would otherwise be obtainable from the Treasuries. On the other hand, we must remember that, being a large drawer, the Secretary of State is liable to be a correspondingly heavy loser, if by disclosing his plans he plays into the hands of the purchasers of bills. Then, again, a fallacy seems to us to underlie the arguments of the Chamber. The Secretary of State has not, in effect, refused the mercantile community the advantage of buying his bills. He has simply declined to sell them below a certain price. And what the Chamber require him to do, is, in effect, to pledge himself to sell them at any price, or to declare what price he will sell them at. This, we think, preposterous. What the mercantile community may fairly ask, and what, under proper arrangements, it would be to the advantage of the Government to concede, is, that the silver which, owing to the cessation of the Secretary of State's drawings, accumulates in the treasuries here, may be made as fully available as possible for the purposes of trade. Much, it appears, from the reply of the Government of India to the Chamber, has already been done in this direction. But it is evident, from the high rates of accommodation prevailing, that either the Government has not done all it might have done, or owing to the channel through which it has been done, all the benefit has not reached the mercantile community. It is obvious that if the increase in the treasury balances corresponding to the Council Bills withheld were all made fully available for the purposes of trade, the cessation of the bills would cause no stringency in the Money Market.

INDIAN ARMY REFORMS.

The Pioneer thinks that months will most likely elapse before any visible results can accrue from the action of the late Viceroy's government; and then it can hardly be expected that any great sensational coup will be struck. We should rather anticipate bit-by-bit reforms, in the first instance, at any rate. For example, one subject claims treatment at the earliest possible moment, and could be dealt with, even while others, and in some respects more important matters are left pending. The sepoy's pay has practically diminished with the diminished purchasing value of the rupee, and it is urgently desirable that in some way the losses should be made up to him. Indirect means of accomplishing this result will very likely be adopted. Perhaps a direct enhancement of pay would be comprehended better by the troops, but economists may stand in the way, for aught we know, and prudence may require that they should be circumvented rather than assailed. A question that will require still more delicate treatment has reference to the future status of the native officer. If we go back far enough in the history of the East India Company's army, we reach a time when regiments were worked with a very much smaller number of European officers than are allotted to them under the existing organisation. Old reports and military records compiled with care at a later period, when the European organisation had been introduced and had been for some time in operation, show that in many ways the rougher organisation was the more efficient of the two. The European system, with twenty officers to a regiment, left no room for the intelligent training of any native officers, and without their aid the resources of a sepoy army can hardly be brought out properly. It is not denied, however, by military men of experience that a strong party at home among the counsellors who are likely to decide the fate of the reorganisation scheme is in favour of a return to the old system under which every native battalion would have European company officers,—in fact, to what used to be called the regular organisation. Of course, Lord Napier's opinions on this subject are too well known to leave any one in doubt as to what the recommendations of the Government despatch have been. They have no doubt tended in quite the opposite direction. Already the position of the native officer is strengthened by the mere fact that he is no longer the promoted sepoy in every case. In many regiments there are native officers who have received direct commissions, and belong to the superior classes of the community. Properly watched, the reform which has brought about this state of things is one to be applauded. Spheres of activity for native gentlemen are greatly wanted. It must not be forgotten, on the other hand, that the native army is least efficient for any illegitimate purpose when officered entirely by Europeans—that in the mutiny the force was paralysed because the act of rebellion deprived it of its leaders. However, this matter is obviously one in which the middle course is the best. We would much rather see the old regular organisation restored than one which should make the native army anything like a complete fighting machine irrespective of its European leaders. However, it will be all but unanimously admitted by military men in this presidency that the restoration of the old organisation would cast a needless burden on the country's finances, at a time when this could ill be borne. Larger questions connected with this subject are being debated by the higher authorities, it would thus seem, than the Indian public has generally supposed them to be concerned with; but in reference to the very momentous subject just noticed, we should anticipate a smaller result from their deliberations in the end than the official debate—if this could be overheard—would perhaps lead the profession to expect.

FRONTIER AFFAIRS.—The Láhor paper tells us that the Deputy Commissioner of Bannu has obtained the signatures of the head men of the Hasaukheyls and Edurkheyls to an agreement in which they have pledged themselves to good behaviour towards British subjects.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO A PILOT AT CALCUTTA.—A sad accident occurred in Calcutta the other day by which a (formerly) well-known Bombay man lost his life—H. T. Platts—who commanded the Mayaram Dayaram, Krishna, s.s. Tilly, &c., Bombay vessels, for some years. For the past few years he was employed in the Harbour Master's Department, Calcutta, and on the day referred to, with his wife, had been spending an afternoon on board a vessel in the river. Mr. Platts had been ashore to his office, and was returning to bring Mrs. Platts home when the accident happened. The large gangway ladder had been removed in his absence from the vessel, and the ladies jocularly asked him if he could manage to climb the small ladder, to which he smilingly responded. In ascending the ladder his head came in contact with a projecting bolt, which caused him to lose his hold; as he fell his head struck the gunwale of the dinghy, and he went overboard—never coming to the surface again, and it is supposed the fall broke his neck.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, May 8.—Life at Simla cannot but be trying in some respects for governors and governe·l, even though some of its cares may be smoothed away. Not by the ingenuity of man alone, nor entirely from the rude resources of nature, would it have been possible to construct so inconvenient a town as Simla. Two places at a given distance apart can be further away from each other here than in any other inhabited region of the world. Madras is the city of magnificent distances par excellence, and Calcutta has a respectable expansion; Bombay knows how to make one mile of travelling through its crowded and dirty bazaars more disagreeable than two miles anywhere else, and the dimensions of Allahabad may even be startling to a guileless stranger, who, as in the case of a lady who recently told me her experience, should put up at a house on the Khushru Bagh side of the railway, and make her first call within the cavalry lines at Papamhow. The lady in question gave up the idea of any further calling in Allahabad for the time, but Simla is more trying still. The annoyance is that places do not look far, but the paths go up and down and in and out to such an extent that you feel the victim of unintentional fraud by the time you reach your destination. Every road is like a long piece of string in a small box. The two ends may not be far apart, but along the string it is a good way. All this ensues from the malignant skill with which the builders of houses have scattered their property about the hill sides without any regard to their relative positions. No level ground could have been hoped for amongst these hills; but with a little judgment one cannot help thinking it might have been possible to have found a site which would have allowed a station built upon it to grow more conveniently than Simla has grown. The Mall, it is true, holds Simla together after a fashion, but from Government House at one end to Strawberry Hill at the other would be an hour's walk, even for an honest messenger. The Indian chuprassie takes half a day to do the distance, so that if the Viceroy were in London, and the Commander-in-Chief at Brighton, they could correspond by post about as conveniently as by messenger in Simla. The best sites in the place, again, are occupied by dirty bazaars, and the longest of these is itself part of the main riding road—the Mall. Equestrians in the evening, it always seems to me, coagulate in this particular part of the promenade. A grand scheme is taked of by, the way, the object of which is the reconstruction of this bazaar—of all native Simla in fact. The idea has originated, I believe, with Sir Andrew Clarke, who has brought a little Australian experience to bear on the sanitation of this, the Viceroy's "shooting box." There was once a disreputable town in the colonies, it seems, which the local authorities determined to rebuild à la Haussmann. So a plan of the place, as it ought to be, was first drawn up, and then the ragged blocks of houses were attacked in detail. One section was bought up, knocked down, and rebuilt first, the new houses being planted in the positions they were required to occupy according to the regeneration scheme. Some of these were then let, others were sold, and so the municipality got itself in funds again, and was enabled to go to work with a second section. In this way tediously, perhaps, but economically, the whole place was reconstructed without any outlay to speak of. Indeed, the authorities were merely a few hundred pounds out of pocket when the work was done. Starting with a capital of half a lakh, the local Government of Simla believes it could reconstruct the native town on these principles; and in the interests, not merely of æsthetics, but of health for every one required to live here, it is ardently desirable that the resolution should be carried out. At present I believe the drainage of native Simla will not bear talking about. How to set it right, is a question which cannot very readily be answered, even by the regenerated municipality; at best a makeshift system is all that can be attempted on a parched mountain without a drop of water to spare for the establishment of purifying streams. The folly of building Simla just here is more obvious when one comes to deal with the water question than in reference to any other objections to the site. But if the grand sanitation scheme be only sanctioned, water will be brought hither in sufficient quantity to provide not merely for the daily wants of the population, but for flushing drains as well. Two reservoirs would be established under this project, one near the church, I believe, a covered-in receptacle big enough to contain fifteen days' supply of water. The road would pass over it, and if some evening, when Simla residents are gaily cantering about, the roof falls in, there should be a group of senior vacancies next day that would refresh the service all along the line, as pleasantly as the irrigation scheme itself that would refresh this dirty station.—Pioneer Correspondent.

TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.—Temperance seems to be rapidly increasing in the British troops in India, for the last number of the magazine On Guard says, "that 7,405 men and 812 women and children connected with British regiments serving in India are enrolled as members, of the Temperance Association. In addition to that band of 8,217, we find that 3,121 are registered as 'off canteen.' All this shows earnest and successful working."

PANTHAY REFUGEES IN KASHGAR.—The Rangoon Gazette has received information that Esau, nephew of Ta-sa-kone, the late Panthay Governor of Momein, who, with about thirty of his officers, died sword in hand in defence of the last stronghold of Panthay, or Muhammadan independence, has been most cordially welcomed by Yákub Khán, the Ruler of Kashgar, and appointed to a military command. Yákub Khán, we hear, has expressed his hope that more of the Panthay refugees would succeed in making their way to Kashgar, where they would obtain military employment.

SUICIDE.—A private of the 59th regiment committed suicide at Agra on Sunday morning last; he was seen coming out of the wash-house, and shortly after a stifled report was heard, and upon a comrade going outside the barrack-room, the unfortunate man was discovered crouched on the ground clasping his rifle, the contents of which had just been discharged under the chin, and having passed through the head had blown the skull to pieces. Deceased had been for some long time suffering in hospital. He was buried in the evening in the Roman Catholic Cemetery.—Pioneer, May 20.

THE NAGA HILL SURVEY.—The Pioneer informs us that the Naga Hills survey party has finished its work. "Lieutenant Woodthorpe and all the others, except Mr. Hinde, who left them at Jaipur, reached Dibrugarh on the 22nd of last month. Every one will be glad to hear of their safety; for surveying the Naga Hills is a dangerous task, and in this same expedition already one fine officer has lost his life, and another had a very narrow escape. But all the danger is over now; and about twelve thousand square miles of new country can be added to the map. Of course, expeditions of this kind are being gradually justified by the progress of Assam. That there is a considerable progress is shown almost daily; perhaps, among the latest signs of the times is the Tonga dak, that runs between Gauhati and Nongho, half way, that is, to Shillong. Colonel Thuillier himself is going to Shillong, to inspect the Survey party, and this is another indication of the growing importance of our possessions towards the North-East."

GALLANT CONDUCT.—About two months ago, we read in the Lucknow Times, a party from the Garrison Instruction was out surveying towards Chinhut. Lieut. Ryland, of the 11th Regiment, in attempting to swim across the lake, either became entangled in the weeds or was affected by the sun, so that he became quite helpless, and was in imminent danger of drowning. Four natives of village Katwa, with great promptitude, swam some three quarters of the distance across the lake to his rescue, and brought him insensible but safe to shore. After some twenty minutes, by the means of stimulants, Lieut. Ryland was brought to again. Were such an institution as the Humane Society in existence in this country there is no doubt these natives would have received the medal. The matter having been brought to the notice of Sir George Couper, he has ordered a reward of fifty rupees to be paid to each of the four men who saved Lieut. Ryland from drowning, and has further presented each of them with a commendatory perwanah, acknowledging his appreciation of their gallant conduct.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—The Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 11th May, 1876, that slight rain has fallen in all districts of Madras except Kurnool; some has also fallen in Mysore. From Assam copious and very beneficial rain is reported. In Bengal there have been heavy falls in Dacca, Tipperah, Rungpore, Cooch Behar, and Purneah, good rain in Bogra, Chittagong, Julpaiguri, Darjeeling, and Bhagalpur, and lighter falls in several other districts, except in the Chota Nagpore and Orissa divisions. No rain is announced from any other province. In Sind the Indus continues to rise. In Bombay and the Central Provinces preparations for the autumn crops are beginning. In Bengal the sowing of early rice is progressing, and rain is much wanted where it has not fallen. The harvest is over in the North-West Provinces, Oudh, and the Punjab; in the latter province the outturn has been fair.

THE LATE FAMINE.—On the subject of the forthcoming important meeting at Calcutta to consider the questions raised about the late famine in Bengal, the Englishman writes as follows:—"The requisition to the Sheriff requesting him to convene a meeting to consider the numerous questions involved in the management of the late famine has, we understand, been signed by all the leading barristers and pleaders, and by many of the foremost members of the mercantile community. This is, so far, as it should be, and it is to be hoped that the leaders of the native community will be equally true to their interests. It is but natural that a Government, conscious of having done a great wrong to the country, should be only too eager to conciliate the chiefs of the people whose taxes they have squandered. The shower of khillats and rajahships that distinguished 1875 were, we hold, virtually douceurs of the most insincere kind. The question may be stated thus:—Whether the native gentlemen of Calcutta will sacrifice the great trust which their countrymen have in them for a mess of potage. That such men as Babus Kristodas Pal, Rajendralala Mitra, Keshab Chandra Sen, and Mohendralal Sarkar, however much they may appreciate the private virtues of the late Viceroy and Sir Richard Temple, would refuse their support to the thorough investigation of the greatest Indian domestic question of the present day seems to us incredible. Every native of this country must feel the utterness of the disregard of its best interests that influenced the Home Government in its refusal of a Famine Commission. The rayats of India may be burdened with four or six millions of unnecessary taxation, squandered in objectless waste, that Mr. Disraeli's Ministry may pose as a saviour of men. There is yet another point to be remembered—how little of this enormous famine expenditure ever reached the really poor. Much of the greater part of it, it is well known, was diverted from the purposes of charity to form the profits of transport contractors, rice merchants, native baniyas, railway companies, road overseers, boat contractors, horse jobbers, steamboat manufacturers, and fodder contractors."

CAPTAIN CROHAN.—The result of the Court Martial by which Captain Crohan was recently tried amounts substantially to an acquittal, the Commander-in-Chief confirming the finding of the Court, of guilty upon the first charge, but not guilty upon the second, and ordering Captain Crohan to return to duty, from which, of course, he had been suspended while under arrest. Captain Crohan, it will be remembered, was Station Staff Officer at Banáras. As such, it formed part of his duty to pay the pensioners there their pensions. Captain Crohan failed for a month to pay two pensioners their stipends, amounting to 200 rupees, due at the end of November last. On inquiry being made, he stated that he had been robbed, and previously he had made good the loss out of his own pay. The late Commander-in-Chief, Lord Napier of Magdala, ordered Captain Crohan to be tried by General Court Martial on these two charges:—First, with conduct unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in withholding payment of the said pensions. Second, with behaving in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in falsely asserting, in a letter to the Presidency Paymaster, that he had been robbed of the said pension money, such statement being false, as he well knew. The following are the remarks made by the Commander-in-Chief, in approving and confirming the sentence of the Court Martial upon Captain Crohan:—"The Officer Commanding the Allahabad Division will have the goodness to reprimand Captain Crohan in the severest terms for his serious breach of duty in withholding payment of pensions from Government pensioners for an unreasonable time. A perusal of these proceedings has left on my mind an impression most unfavourable to Captain Crohan's conduct and character. It is with reluctance that I direct him to return to his duty on release from arrest." Captain Crohan has served with some distinction. He has received the thanks of the Governments of India and Bengal for gallantry in the field. He took part in the Bhután campaign, for which he wears a medal; served throughout the Lushai campaign; and commanded the expeditionary force that marched from Kachár to the relief of the Rájá of Manipur.

Madras.

THE WEATHER.—There has been rain in the Madura and Tinnevelly districts to the southward, and round by Cape Comorin to Travancore, off and on since the 28th April. The rainfall in Travancore has been plentiful, a great blessing, as that favoured country had suffered, like many other districts, from excessive drought during the last year.

ACCIDENT TO LIEUT. LODWICK.—The Madras Times reports that Lieut. Lodwick, son of the Accountant-General, Madras, has met with a severe accident on the Hills. A shell cartridge, which he was adjusting, exploded, and injured the left hand so severely that the thumb has had to be amputated, and the palm of the hand is much hurt.

THE PRINCE OF ARCOT.—It is stated that his Highness the Prince of Arcot intends shortly to pay a visit to the shrine of Boothoo Shabeed Saheb at Palaveram, and that the officer commanding St. Thomas' Mount has been directed by the Government to fire the usual salutes and to accord to his Highness the customary honours on the occasion.

SURGEON-MAJOR DICKENSON.—It may be considered settled, the Madras Times believes, that Surgeon-Major Dickenson, now stationed at St. Thomas' Mount, will be the Acting Principal of the Medical College and Physician to the Madras General Hospital. The appointment is one that requires a joint recommendation from the heads of the Educational and Medical Departments; hence, perhaps, some of the delay that has occurred in filling it up.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Madras was thrown into some excitement last Saturday by a very disastrous accident, by which a few persons were killed and several others injured. An engine shed that was being constructed by the South Indian Railway Company in Egmore, and at which some hundreds of coolies were employed at the time, came down with a tremendous crash, and it is fortunate that the casualties have not been more serious.—Madras Times, May 20.

FRENCH INDIA.—A contemporary tells us that Pondichari, Chandanagar, Karikal, Mahé, and Yanaon, comprising French India, have elected their representative for the Chamber of Deputies at Versailles. Fifty-seven thousand six hundred and eight people in French India took part in the election. Among the candidates, M. Godin (Jules), Avocat au Conseil d'Etat, obtained 18,614 votes, and was consequently proclaimed Member of the Chamber of Deputies.

THE LATE SURGEON-GENERAL STEWART.—The Madras Times announces the death of Deputy Surgeon-General Lestock Wilson Stewart, Indian Medical Service, in charge of the Southern district, at Trichinopoly, on the 4th of May, from sunstroke. Dr. Stewart had been complaining for some days of suffering from "a touch of the sun," but his speedy end was totally unexpected. He was a courteous and energetic officer, and his loss will be much felt by the many who knew him. He leaves a wife and family in England. Dr. Stewart recently made a laborious tour of inspection throughout his district.

DARING ROBBERY.—A robbery was perpetrated at Fern Hill, Ootacamund, a few days ago, of an extensive and daring character. Colonel Malleson left a box containing bank notes and jewellery to the value of about Rs. 2,500 near the window of his dressing room. While he was dining, a servant came and informed the Colonel that the box was gone. The window had been left open. The police were immediately sent for, and a search was made for the missing property. The box was found not far from the house, broken open, and a lot of valuable papers that had been in it were strewn on the ground. Some of the servants were suspected, and the police took care to let all of them understand that the numbers of the lost notes were known. The following morning the whole of the missing property was found on a seat of the carriage. The thief had evidently become afraid of detection. The police had probably arrived before he had had time to take the booty away to a safe place.

THE WATER SUPPLY.—The water supply of the town is, under the present state of the weather, engaging serious attention, and the Municipal Commissioners have shown themselves alive to the importance of the subject. A special meeting of the Commissioners was held on Thursday afternoon to take measures for setting up a pumping apparatus at the Red Hills Lake, owing to the supply of water in the Municipal reservoir being greatly reduced; and a discussion ensued as to the share the Government ought to bear in the cost of raising the water from the lake, which has been estimated at Rs. 10,000. A resolution was passed to the effect that, as previous to the commencement of the works for which a loan of Rs. 14,30,000 has been contracted, there was an understanding that the Government would supply the Municipality with water from the Red Hills to any quantity not exceeding thirty-two millions of cubic yards at the rate of one rupee per thousand cubic yards, the President should appeal to the liberality of the Government to carry out this measure by undertaking the cost of pumping, if it should become necessary to resort to that expedient. In the meantime, pending the receipt of a reply from Government, the President has been authorised, in communication with the Water Supply Committee, to take such measures as may be found necessary to prevent any failure in the supply of water from the Red Hills Tank.—Madras Times, May 13.

COLONEL MALLESON AND THE MAHARAJA OF MAISUR.—We don't know whether the Government of India are aware of the deep dissatisfaction that pervades all classes of the people of Mysor in consequence of the extraordinary treatment of the young Maharaja and his brothers by their guardian. The real cause of a late unpleasant incident at Ootacamund has now leaked out, and though to European eyes it may seem very trifling, not so is it regarded by the natives. In the first place, Colonel Malleson, in direct defiance of those caste prejudices and social customs which the Government has pledged itself to respect in the case of the very meanest of its subjects, engaged a house at Ooty, one-half for himself and his friends, and the other for the Rajah and his suite. The Maharaja has not yet been converted to Christianity, or whatever particular form of faith Colonel Malleson professes; and that officer's experience of this country should have told him that in housing himself under the same roof as a high-caste native—we say nothing of his rank and position—he was acting in a manner to deeply offend the legitimate prejudices of his Royal charge, and of the natives of Mysor in general. But as if this were not enough, we are told, and Colonel Malleson should be formally called on to contradict the statement, that he and his friends after dinner are in the habit of sending for the young Prince and his brothers—mere lads, be it remembered—and endeavouring to force them to partake of refreshments, and on the lads naturally refusing, horse play has followed, which, in the case of one of the young brothers of the Rajah, forced him to fly in perfect terror from Ooty to Mysor in a common cart. Now, it is all very well to be tender of Colonel Malleson's reputa-ion, and no one denies that he is a very clever fellow in his peculiar ne, but, nevertheless, we strongly object to the treatment and upringing of the young Prince, for which that gentleman is personally esponsible. It so happens that a considerable proportion of the native Princes of India are, and will be, for many years under the guardianship of British officers, on account of their extreme youth. But if it becomes the fashion for them to interfere, in the manner indicated above, with their young charges, and to treat them to horse play, it will not be wonderful if the British name be disliked by both princes and people. Some years ago Punch published a scathing denunciation of the conduct of certain cads who, wearing her Majesty's uniform, disgraced themselves and their profession at Mysor by conduct which was all the worse because they happened at the time to be the guests of the good-natured old Rajah. Apparently we have improved on those days, and now horse play and coarse practical jokes are carried on with impunity in the very household of the young Prince, and on his own person and that of his relatives into the bargain. We believe a strong effort is being made to hush up this most discreditable business; but we really don't see why it should be hushed up. Colonel Malleson may have powerful friends, but that should not screen him if he is clearly in fault. Nay more—if the caste prejudices of the very lowest of the natives are jealously respected, surely native princes are entitled to the same consideration.—Bangalor Examiner.

SHOCK OF EARTHQUAKE.—A letter from the Political Agent, Cutch, to the Bombay Government, dated 12th May, 1876, reports that a slight shock of earthquake was felt at Ghudsisa, Rajpur, Dhunna, and two or three other villages in the same direction, about thirty miles north-west of Bhuj, at 11 A.M. on the 2nd inst., accompanied by a slight rumbling noise.

NEW SWIMMING BATH.—Bombay has got a swimming bath at last, thanks to General Barr, Mr. Pedder, and the Executive Engineer to the Municipality. It is sixty feet long by thirty feet broad, and is built of rubble masonry. Its depth when full is about ten feet, but varies according to the tide. There are dressing boxes round the bath, and there are also two fresh water shower-baths.

GENERAL KENNEDY.—It is said that the Government of Bombay has asked the Government of India to allow General Kennedy to remain two years longer, although he ought to retire from the service now, having come in for his off-reckonings. Surely this report cannot be true. If it is, the Bombay Government should be ashamed of itself. We presume that Bombay could exist even without General Kennedy.—Bombay Gazette.

MR. W. PEGLER.—We regret to learn of the death of Mr. William Pegler, sub-engineer on the Indus Valley State Railway. The melancholy event occurred on the river while the deceased was on his way up to rejoin his appointment. The cause of death was an accident, through which an eye sustained serious injury by a nail running through the lower part of it. The remains of the deceased were consigned to their last resting-place at Sehwan. Mr. Pegler was for many years a resident of Kurrachee, where he had a rather large circle of acquaintances.—Sindian.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A serious accident occurrred at Ajmere a few days ago. A number of opium merchants have been in the habit of assembling at a house known as Chowk, in the principal street, the custom being to bring opium to Ajmere from the districts for sale to the Calcutta dealers at this season of the year. The merchants went to sleep in this Chowk, and at ten o'clock at night on the 6th instant the roof suddenly fell in, killing one young merchant on the spot and seriously injuring four others. Twenty-five other merchants were present, but they escaped. The injured men were taken to the hospital, and are reported to be doing well.—Bombay Gazette, May 22.

THE NEW BRIDGE OVER THE SABURMUTTE.—(AHMADABAD, May 22.)—Captain Marryatt, the Consulting Engineer to Government, having inspected the new bridge over the Saburmutte at Ahmadabad, it was opened yesterday for traffic. There was no ceremony. The bridge has been constructed entirely under the supervision of the Company's officers, and from materials in the Company's stores. It consists of twenty-two spans, sixty feet each. Since the last flood much has been done, though much still remains to be done in the way of rebuilding, and a great portion of the city is yet in ruins. All the new buildings as well as the streets which were inundated last year are now being raised four feet. Thermometer 106 deg.— Times of India Correspondent.

THE AHMADABAD HORSE SHOW.—The following Government resolution, regarding the result of the Ahmadabad horse show, has been issued:—"Government have read these papers with interest, and are very glad to learn that the shows are, in the opinion of competent judges, effecting improvement in the breed of horses. It is too late to alter the figures in the Budget of 1876-77, and the Collector must do the best he can with the sum at his disposal. In the Budget of 1877-78, the Accountant-General should enter the sum of Rs. 2,300. Copy of the report should be sent to the Military Department, with an expression of concurrence on the part of the Revenue Department in the opinion, with regard to the purchase of suitable colts and geldings by the Remount Agent.

THE BOMBAY POLICE.—In the course of some remarks on the police, the Calcutta Statesman says:—"Charles Forgett was probably the finest policeman India had ever seen. When he took charge of the Bombay Police, two or three-and-twenty years ago, it consisted of a set of the greatest scoundrels under the sun. They were at once the accomplices of all the crime, and the terror of all the honest classes, in the island. Now Forgett could make himself anything; and within a month he had drawn the police into wholesale complicity with crime, under one or other of the hundred disguises he assumed. The wonder is that he was not assassinated. His safety lay in the terror he had excited in the force. One policeman hardly dared speak to another, for fear that Forgett was concealed under the blue frock and yellow turban before him. The result was that the whole island could go to sleep with doors and windows open, where a couple of months before complete terror had existed, the police being the effective cause of it."

THE GAIKWAR'S GUNS.—Reports have been current in Baroda for some time past that the British Government had ordered the destruction of all the Gaikwar's guns, except a few, which were to be kept for saluting purposes; and that the order had been rigorously carried out. Those who are well versed in Baroda affairs will easily believe that a large number of the most extraordinary "gups" clustered round such an interesting story. The most amusing one is that the young Gaikwar protested to Mr. Melvill against such unwarrantable action on the part of the Paramount Power. Mr. Melvill, it is said, shook his head and his stick at the young Gaikwar, and said—"Tum bote chota hai bat ke waste." "Be good, my child; ask no questions, and he will tell you no fibs." However amusing and interesting such stories may be, there is one feature about them which is particularly gratifying; they are not true. The only foundation for them is that, amongst the Gaikwar's artillery there were six old useless cannon, and Sir T. Madhava Rao ordered them to be broken up for the sake of the metal. Those who do not know the difference between an effective and a non-effective weapon naturally concluded the step was the beginning of the end of the Baroda army.—Times of India.

OPENING OF NEW MILLS.—We are glad to find that some of the up-country mills, which were projected in 1874, have been completed, and will commence work in a few months. The other day we noticed that the Goolam Baba Mill, at Surat, would begin work in July next. There is another new mill in Guzerat at Neriad. From the progress report of the company, just issued, it appears that the erection of machinery has so far advanced that the directors believe it also will be ready to begin work in July. The mills are planted in a favourable locality, and this is the only manufacturing concern in the whole of the Kaira district, of which the population, including that of the Punch Mahals, numbered by the last census over a million of souls. There is a considerable handloom industry going on in the district, the demand of the local weavers for yarn being at present supplied partly by importation from Ahmedabad in the north, and Broach, Surat, and Bombay in the south. Not far from the town is a great seat of Hindoo pilgrimage—Dakore—where a branch line of the Baroda Railway runs, and where gatherings of Hindoo pilgrims from different parts of Guzerat take place every full moon. Large quantities of merchandise are, accordingly, bought and sold there in fairs held on the occasion. Again, labour in the district is cheap, and the raw material in close proximity. The machinery of the Neraid Mills is adapted to spin high as well as low counts of yarns; but if the promoters of the concern remain satisfied with simply meeting the local demand for yarn and coarse cloth there will be enough of work for them to do. Dyeing and calico printing, after the native fashion, are carried on to a considerable extent in this district, and we observe that it is the intention of the promoters to direct their attention to this branch of industry, after a fair start has been made in carrying out their principal undertaking. Besides these two new manufactories in Guzerat, there is, we believe, another nearly ready in Khandeish; but we are most anxious to hear of ground being broken for the large undertaking which has its site not fifty miles from Bhosawul, where a well-considered project for utilising water-power in spinning and weaving is to be carried out. Much time is, however, required to mature novel plans of this kinds.—Times of India.

COURT-MARTIAL.

CAPT. F. W. CROHAN, GENERAL LIST, INFANTRY.

Head Quarters, Simla, May 3.—At a General Court Martial, assembled at Benares on April 1, Capt. F. W. Crohan, general list, infantry, was arraigned on the following charges:—

Charges—1st. With conduct unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, when employed as station staff officer at Benares, on Dec. 8, and having, in that capacity, received on that day pension money for disbursement to Pensioned apothecary John Armstrong Fleming, and to Mistress Matilda Eliza Franks, due to them up to Nov. 30, inclusive, failed to pay them the said pensions, and withheld payment of the same from them until Jan. 17. 2nd. With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having at Benares, in a letter sent by him to the Presidency Paymaster, dated Jan 9, falsely asserted that half of the sums received by him on Dec. 8, on account of pensioners, has been stolen, such statement being false, as he, Capt. Crohan, well knew.

Finding.—The Court finds that the prisoner is guilty of the 1st charge, and not guilty of the 2nd charge.

Sentence.—The Court sentence the prisoner to be severely reprimanded.

G. A. St. P. FOOKS, Colonel, President.

Benares, April 4, 1876.

Approved and Confirmed.

The officer commanding the Allahabad division will have the goodness to reprimand Capt. Crohan in the severest terms, for his serious breach of duty in withholding payment of pensions from Government pensioners for an unreasonable time. A perusal of these proceedings has left on my mind an impression most unfavourable to Capt. Crohan's conduct and character. It is with reluctance that I direct him to return to his duty on release from arrest.

F. P. HAINES, General, C. in C. in India.

Simla, April 27, 1876.

OFFICIAL TRICKERY.—The following General Order issued by the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army appears to point at a nefarious practice which we should hope is not carried on with the knowledge or connivance of British officers themselves:—With reference to para. 141, section 18, Bombay Army Regulations, it is notified that officers commanding native infantry regiments will be held personally responsible that no unseasoned wood, or other improper material, is used in the construction or repair of their lines. The Final Survey Committee will invariably note on its proceedings the description of timber and other materials used in construction.

CIVIL FURLOUGHS. — The undermentioned officers obtained leave (in May) to Europe, on furlough and medical certificate, under the Regulations of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Mr. H. K. Disney, assistant superintendent, Poona and Nasik revenue survey, is allowed forty days' leave of absence, from March 18. Mr. A. Lyon, acting judge and sessions judge of Khandesh, is allowed leave of absence, on urgent private affairs, for six months. Mr. P. Ryan, assistant secretary to Government in the political and educational departments, has been allowed three months' privilege leave of absence.

MILITARY FURLOUGHS.—The undermentioned officers obtained leave (in May) to Europe, on furlough and medical certificate, under the Regulations of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Dep. surg. gen. W. G. Trousdell, M.D., British medical establishment, Bengal, to Europe for six months. Capt. M. P. Moriarty, Bengal staff corps, is allowed to proceed to Europe, in anticipation of the furlough which will be granted to him by the Government of his own Presidency. The furlough to Europe for eighteen months granted to Major T. H. Turner, staff corps, examiner, pay department, Bombay, is under Rule 9 of the Furlough Regulations 1868. The furlough to Europe for eighteen months granted to Capt. E. S. Walcott, general list, sub assistant commissary general, 1st class, is under Rule 14, Clause 2, of the revised Furlough Regulations of 1868. Lieut. C. W. H. Sealy, staff corps, cantonment magistrate, Aden, is allowed furlough for eighteen months from date of departure in June next. Lieut. H. F. Smith, staff corps, 1st wing subaltern, 30th regiment N.I., to Europe for eighteen months.

MUSKETRY INSTRUCTION.—In the latest musketry return for European regiments in the Bombay Presidency, published in the General Orders of H.E. the C. in C., the following "figures" are shown to have been obtained up to Jan. 31 last:—3rd Hussars, 32·66, best troop F 33·83; 2-25th Foot 100·97, best company E 109·13; 83rd Regiment 87·58, best company F 97·56; 1-2nd Queen's 86·42, best company B 92·12; 56th Foot 95·52, best company G 87·43; 108th foot 81·56, best company B 90·44; 68th Foot 78·65, best company K 90·32; 66th Foot 75·14, best company H 78·66; 2-15th Foot 69·01, best company A 79·83; 2-7th Fusiliers 65·23, best company F 79·06. From this it would appear that the worst shooting regiments are those last arrived from England, and that the best are those who have served the longest in India. In individual shooting, Captain Broderick, ex-musketry instructor, 2nd Queen's' heads the list with 97 marks, obtained between 400 and 800 yards, but the rank-and-file in Private Battersby, 108th Foot, are well represented with 110 marks over the same distances; this soldier stands first in the Presidency between 400 and 600, with 63 marks, and between 100 and 800 with 170 marks. From 150 to 300 yards, Private W. Sutton, 56th Foot, takes the lead with 170 marks; and from 150 to 600 yards, Colour-Sergeant Richardson, 2nd Battalion 25th Regiment, is number one with 127. These scores indicate careful training and steadiness in the use of the rifle.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF SHIPS OF WAR, &c.

Captain H. B. Hanna, Bengal Staff Corps, Quarter-Master General's staff, has recently patented an invention for improvements in the construction of ships of war and coast-defence vessels, part of which improvements is applicable to any ship. The first portion of his invention relates to the construction of the hull, and is of such a nature as to effectually protect the vital parts of a ship when struck by shot, ram, or even Whitehead's fish torpedo.

Captain Hanna has also invented a novel manner of propelling vessels, which is an application of the principle of the turbine to the ordinary propeller. By his plan the inventor anticipates no loss of power from friction, which has hitherto been the great drawback to the introduction of the turbine proper into the navy and mercantile marine as a motive power; and as by his arrangement the propellers will be working in "solid" water—a gain of actual power from 20 to 30 per cent. may be expected, as little or no "positive slip" will occur. The screws are perfectly secure from injuries from external causes short of the fixed torpedo; and even should the ship get on shore, or into shoal water, the propellers would still remain intact.

Captain Hanna has also introduced three methods of steering without rudder, and they are, as in the case of the propellers, quite secure from injuries from external causes. These may be employed simultaneously, or used separately; but he recommends that every ship of war should be fitted with at least two of them, as—being quite independent of each other—the ship, in case of accident to one method, would still be manageable. One of these inventions is exceedingly novel, being in principle exactly the reverse of the hydraulic jet.

Captain Hanna also proposes fitting ships with self-acting bilge pumps, capable of discharging much larger volumes of water than the ordinary bilge pump.

Finally, Captain Hanna has also invented a self-acting hydraulic hoist for raising and lowering the heaviest ordnance, and for loading and unloading vessels.

This invention, No. 1,136 of 1876, has been published in the London Gazette, and is now filed in the Patent-office, Southampton-buildings.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF DR. HAUG, ORIENTALIST.—The death is announced of Professor Haug, the distinguished Orientalist, who died at Ragalz on the 3rd inst.

MR. PERCY SANDERSON, late Madras Artillery, and brother of Mr. Thomas Sanderson, private secretary to the Earl of Derby at the Foreign-office, has been appointed to be Consul at Galatz.

THE 14TH FOOT.—(WAR-OFFICE, June 6.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve of the 14th Foot being in future styled "The 14th (Buckinghamshire), or the Prince of Wales's Own Regiment of Foot," and of it being permitted to bear the Prince of Wales's plume on its second colour.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £700,000 in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday, the 7th inst. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £210,000, to Bombay £171,794, and to Madras £10,000. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8d. will receive in full. No allotment under that price.

ADDRESS TO SIR SALAR JUNG.—The natives of India resident in London, Parsees, Mohammedans, and Hindoos, being desirous of presenting an address to Sir Salar Jung, have this week intimated the fact to his secretary. That gentleman has just replied that Sir Salar is too ill to receive any applications at present, and no day can be fixed.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The following were the exports to the East by the steamers of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company:—From Southampton, per Siam May 25—Silver, to Bombay, £129,100. Per Nepaul, June 1—Gold, to Gibraltar, £57; silver, to Bombay, £86,400; to Ceylon, £27,800; to Madras, £1,000; to Calcutta, £71,000; to Penang, £16,000; to Hong Kong, £39,000; to Shanghai, £29,200; to Hobson's Bay, £800; to Glenelg, £5,000. Per Tanjore, June 8—Gold, to Malta, £25,000; silver, to Bombay, £289,400.

LORD NORTHBROOK.—Friday night's Gazette announces:—"The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, granting the dignities of a Viscount and an Earl of the said United Kingdom to the Right Honourable Thomas George, Lord Northbrook, G.C.S.I., lately her Majesty's Viceroy and Governor-General of India, and his heirs male, by the names, styles, and titles of Viscount Baring, of Lee, in the county of Kent, and Earl of Northbrook, in the county of Southampton."

REECE'S ICE-MAKING MACHINE.—For the first time we hear of the luxury and comfort of an ice-making machine being applied to a passenger steamer trading by way of the Red Sea to India. The British India Steam Navigation Company's steamship Almora, which sailed from London for Colombo, Madras, and Calcutta on June 2, had one of these on board, capable of producing 12 cwt. per day, and this quantity of clear, pure ice was actually delivered by the machine before the pilot left the vessel at the Isle of Wight.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The report has been issued of the Madras Railway Company. It states that, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, the gross earnings from all sources have been £294,364, against £270,309, an improvement of £24,055, or nearly 9 per cent., but the net earnings show a decrease of £6,341, owing to the increased working expenses, of which a large part—£4,607—is occasioned by the value of a number of worn-out and condemned vehicles being charged against revenue during the half-year.

THE EASTERN TELEGRAPH SERVICE.—As the Eastern Extension Company's Madras-Penang Cable may possibly be interrupted during the continuance of the monsoon, and the Java-Australia Cable is not likely to be restored for some time, the Eastern Telegraph Company have issued a circular giving particulars of a mixed telegraph and postal service to places in the Far East, and the dates of the sailings of steamers from India during the next three months, together with the reduced rates which will come into force on July 1st next.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—The report of the Land Mortgage Bank of India for the year ending the 31st December last states that the accounts do not show so much improvement as was anticipated, although they evidence substantial progress, such as the reduction of the debenture debt from £613,140 on December, 1874, to £576,520 on the same date 1875, the reduction of the estimated deficiency to the extent of £10,392; and the fact of the profit and loss account for 1875 showing a credit balance of £5,605. 1s. 11d., as against a debit balance of £2,136. 4s. 11d. in the accounts of 1874. The debenture liability has already been further decreased during the present year by purchases on the bank's account, and the payment of drawn and matured debentures to the extent of £20,440, with still further reductions to be made on the 1st July next.

INDIAN HONOURS.—Lord Northbrook, who is immediately to be raised to an Earldom, in recognition of his services as Governor-General of India, has chosen the titles of Earl of Northbrook, of Stratton-park, in the county of Southampton, and Viscount Baring, of Lee, Kent. He is the eldest son of the first Lord Northbrook, better known by his former name as the Right Hon. Sir Francis Thornhill Baring, by his marriage with Jane, fifth daughter of the late Hon. Sir George Grey, K.C.B., and niece of Charles, second Earl Grey. He was born in the year 1826, and was educated at Christ Church, Oxford; but he left the University without taking a degree. He entered Parliamentary life in 1857 as M.P. for Falmouth and Penryn, and held his seat down to the year 1866, when he succeeded to his father's peerage. He was a Lord of the Admiralty in 1857-58, and held the posts of Under-Secretary of State for War and the Home Department and for India at various dates between 1861 and 1872, when he was nominated Governor-General of India on the assassination of Lord Mayo. Lord Northbrook married in 1848 Elizabeth Harriet, daughter of the late Mr. Henry Charles Sturt and Lady Charlotte Penelope Short, of Critchill, Dorsetshire, by whom he has a family. His eldest son and heir, Francis George, Lord Baring, who was born in 1850, is a Lieutenant in the Rifle Brigade. Sir Richard Temple, who is about to be raised to a Baronetcy, is a son of Mr. Richard Temple, of the Nash, Kempsey, Worcestershire, and was born about the year 1828. He entered the Bengal Civil Service in 1847, and has held at various dates the appointments of Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, British Resident at the Court of the Nizam of Hyderabad, and Foreign Secretary of India. In 1868 he was appointed Financial Member of the Council of the Government at Calcutta. He was created a Knight Commander of the Star of India in 1867, and in the following year was appointed secretary to that "exalted" Order; in 1874 he was made Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Sir Richard Temple has been twice married—firstly, in 1849, to Charlotte Frances, youngest daughter of Mr. B. Martindale, of London; and secondly, in 1871, to Mary Anne, daughter of Mr. Charles Robert Lindsay, of the Bengal Civil Service.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, June 9.—THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Mr. HARDY stated, in reply to a question put by Captain NOLAN, that the lately-granted increase of pay to acting non-commissioned officers in the Royal Artillery had not been stopped, but merely suspended, in order that they might be apportioned among the different batteries. The recruitment of gunners was now in a more satisfactory condition than it had been.

THE SUEZ CANAL SHARES.—Mr. DODSON asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the meeting of the Suez Canal Company, which he stated would be held in the course of May, had been held, and whether any arrangement for the representation of this country in the administration of the Canal had been decided upon; and if so whether he would state to the House the nature of those arrangements.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER replied that the meeting had not yet been held. He understood that it was to have been held in May, but it had been called for the 14th June, and subsequently M. de Lesseps had called a special meeting for the 27th June, for the purpose of considering the proposals which had been made. He proposed to introduce a Bill on Monday next to make provision with respect to the shares of the Suez Canal Company, and he hoped to be able to state in the course of the proceedings on that Bill what arrangements had been made.

RECRUITING.—On the motion to go into Supply on the Army Estimates, Sir G. CAMPBELL called attention to the subject of recruiting, contending that in the circumstances of this country it was necessary that sufficient provision should be made for two classes of soldiers, viz., men to enter the reserve after a short service at home, and long term men for general service, including India. He believed that the six years' enlistment system would not supply the army in India, inasmuch as it would allow the soldier only three years in India—a period entirely insufficient to acclimatise him to India; and it was upon this system that the Secretary for War relied. He was of opinion that we should have both a long and a short service, and that adequate inducements should be offered to the long service men—such inducements as would lead men to enter the army as a profession. There should be a provision that men should be allowed to enlist for home service and then pass into the reserve. At present the men they got were those who enlisted in a fit of disgust, but he saw no reason why they should not obtain a large class who, with a year's training, might become good soldiers, and who, with a small retaining fee, might be associated for the rest of their lives with the militia or reserve. He was afraid that, under our present system, the requirements of the Indian army were doing harm to our home army, and our home requirements militated against our requirements in India.—Mr. HARDY was of opinion that no man should serve for less than five years in India and more than eight, the medical testimony being emphatic on that point. He was of opinion that the connection between the army in India and that in England should be kept up as well for purposes of practical efficiency as for the advantage that comes from glorious associations. As to the character of the men who entered the army, he was convinced they were better then those who joined in the time of the Duke of Wellington. He was strongly of opinion that the utmost should be made of the reserves.—Colonel MURE pointed out the difference between the duties cast upon our army and those which fell upon the armies of other countries.—Captain NOLAN said what we wanted was a short service army for the reserves, and for this purpose a period of six years was too long. What with the climate and the comparative luxury of India, they could not expect a man coming from India to enter upon an active life here, but they should suffer him to serve out his time for a pension in India if he chose.—Mr. CAMPBELL BANNERMAN thought we should not keep our men more than nine or ten years in India, because they got worn out and unfit for service elsewhere.

THE "BLACK PAMPHLET."—The Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer confirms the statement made that Sir R. Temple has been trying to find out who wrote the 'Black Pamphlet.' He says:—"The report that Sir Richard Temple has been at some pains to identify the writer of the 'Black Pamphlet' is, I am informed, mainly correct. The Lieutenant-Governor's overtures did not, however, meet with that ready response which under the circumstances might have been expected from the supposed culprit. The public, however, affect to recognise, in the sudden deportation of a young civilian to one of the out-of-the-way districts of Bengal, the fact that Sir Richard is by no means unmindful of the familiar aphorism that silence gives consent. It is possible, of course, that public opinion, in its eager desire to associate cause with effect, may have been induced to lay too great a stress on a circumstance which after all may be nothing more than a curious coincidence; a tinge of probability is, however, lent to the transaction in the fact that the district magistrate under whose fostering care the supposed offender has been placed enjoys a reputation similar to that of the eccentric pedagogue who occasionally advertises himself in the Spectator as the sole inventor of a magic process which infallibly reduces the most refractory boy to perfect obedience in the short space of three weeks. As the patient in the present instance is an adult, we may fairly take it, I think, that a much shorter period will be sufficient to make him see the error of his ways."

CHART OF INDIA.
BY
ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery.
Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, A.D. 1859; with the date of each historical event according to the various eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Offices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asia, and Europe.

A RELIEVO MAP OF INDIA.
BY HENRY F. BRION.
In Frame, 21s.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefly of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indian geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the sea-level. To the historical as well as the geographical student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns, in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a neat frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily-coloured picture, and its price, a guinea, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.
SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as
COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,
and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but
COCKLE'S PILLS,
as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 76 years for
INDIGESTION.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 76 years for
BILIOUS AFFECTIONS.

LIVER COMPLAINTS.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

LAMPLOUGH'S

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.
Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."
SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.
SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.
For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See article in the Civil Service Gazette.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 29; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, May 27; Calcutta, May 26.

ADVICES from the Camp beyond the Sind frontier down to the 12th May tell us that the Khan of Khelat declined to meet his rebellious Sirdars, but would go himself to Mastang to meet the Deputy Commissioner. The Khan is said to have expressed his soreness at the steps taken by Major Sandeman, who entered his territories to make some friendly arrangement between himself and his Sirdars, but began by collecting together and making friends of the Sirdars who were the greatest enemies of the Khan. He complained also that Major Sandeman had encouraged the Sirdars in their rebellion and had given them a large portion of the taxes collected from the Kafilas which belong really to the paramount ruler in the country. According to the Bombay Gazette "there is still a strong feeling amongst the Sind officials at the conduct of the Government of India in summarily depriving them of the power to take part in the settlement of Khelat affairs, although their policy is being really adopted, notwithstanding the objections that were at first urged against its adoption."

MASTANG, where Major Sandeman is, or was lately, encamped, is described by correspondents as a pretty valley, and very fertile, containing large fields of lucerne grass, wheat, barley, &c. Fruit-trees, such as mulberry, apricot, fig, peach, plum, &c., abound, and the vines are said to be very fine. Roses and numerous wild flowers grow naturally, and many herbs. Water is plentiful and good; the temperature pleasant, the valley being 5,700 feet above the sea level; and the natives have shown every disposition to be friendly by readily bringing into the camp whatever supplies are required. The ground is undulating and hilly, intersected by numerous ravines. Owing to the sandiness of the soil, the water frequently disappears under ground for considerable distances. The health of the troops continued very good, and a postal communication with Jacobábád was kept up by Beluch sawárs.

FROM Simla we learn that the construction of both the Eastern and Western Rajputana Railways has been sanctioned by the Secretary of State, subject to certain financial considerations; but it is not certain yet when the Government will be able to begin either work.

ON the 27th May Lord Lytton granted a private interview to the Maharajah of Jaipur. His Lordship also received Saiyid Ashgar Ali Diler Jung, C.S.I., a member of the Bengal Council, and the Princes of Jhind and Nabha.

WE learn from the Madras papers that the Madras Government has telegraphed to the Secretary of State for India a request that Mr. Parkes should go to Madras for three months, to watch the effect of the action of the surf on the concrete blocks to be shortly laid for the new harbour, and to submit a report on the subject.

THE news of Sir W. Muir's retirement, says the Pioneer, "will create more regret than surprise. After thirty-nine years' residence in India, the dignified leisure of the Home Council is more than due to a man of his varied and honourable service; nor was his appointment to financial membership more from the first than an arrangement terminable at his own convenience. Lord Northbrook originally asked him to join the Council for two or three years, or for the full term as he pleased. The fact that, if his own programme had been carried out, he would have remained in India to prepare the next financial statement, will dispose in advance of any rumours that might arise from his identification with the policy of a recent measure of which the Secretary of State has disapproved. Whatever might have ensued under other circumstances the state of exchange has long since thrown all questions connected with the cotton duties into the background. No secret irritation, therefore, will be connected with his final departure from this country, whence he will carry home the true regard of all who, whether they may have generally concurred in, or dissented from his measures in detail, can appreciate purity of public character and private worth."

A MEETING, consisting entirely of natives, was held on the 27th May, at the Town Hall in Calcutta, under the auspices of the Indian League, Professor Banarji presiding. It was resolved to present an address of congratulation to her Majesty the Queen on her assumption of the title of Empress of India.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL R. H. M. AITKEN, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Inspector General of Police in Oudh, is about to retire on the extra pension. This officer joined the Bengal army in 1847, being posted to the 13th Native Infantry, and served with that corps throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848-9, and in the Santhal campaign of 1855. The 13th regiment was stationed at Lucknow when the mutiny broke out in 1857. He was present at the action at Chinhut, throughout the defence of the Residency from 30th June to 22nd November, including four sorties, in two of which he commanded. He next served during the operations before Cawnpore and in the battle on the 6th December, and throughout the subsequent campaign in Oudh. He was granted the Victoria Cross for "various acts of gallantry and distinguished bravery performed during the defence of the Residency of Lucknow."

SIR JOHN STRACHEY is evidently resolved to carry out the principle of washing dirty linen at home. With special reference to some official utterances of the Commissioner of Benares, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces has just issued an order to all heads of departments, commissioners, and district officers, strictly forbidding them from allowing public reports to be made a vehicle for censure or criticism on officers of other departments of the Government. Any complaints of the kind they may have to make are to be reserved for separate and special report to the Government. "His Honour," as the Pioneer puts it, "is resolved to have a pax Romana all round,—to establish, in fact, an administrative millennium. No more shall the Board amuse its leisure by worrying the Secretariat; nor shall the latter be allowed to relieve itself by flouting the judges. The munsiff may put his hand on the settlement officer's den; and even the Public Works Department will be allowed to break down in peace. All this is very nice, and the order is beyond question proper. But we may be pardoned, perhaps, for a sigh, when we think on the effect it must have on ourselves. What good sport will be lost to us, to be sure. If a magistrate may not make fun on his bench, and commissioners must let their Parthian shafts rust in the quiver, their reports and their records will no longer form a part of the amusing literature of the day. The service, like Punch's Irishman, 'will take no delight out of itself at all;' all will be dull, dreary, decorous. Beattie's hermit 'thought like a sage, but he felt like a man;' the public gain in this matter is our private loss."

IT would appear from the Calcutta Englishman that Sir Richard Temple thinks he has discovered the author of the "Black Pamphlet," and has already made him feel the weight of his official displeasure. Some time ago, according to our contemporary, Sir Richard "caused a letter to be written to a junior civilian, then on duty in Bahar, in which he informed him that a rumour existed in Calcutta that he was the author of the pamphlet. Sir Richard Temple also assured him that he placed no credence in this rumour, "which is probably unfounded.' The officer addressed confined himself to thanking Sir Richard Temple for refusing to give any credence to the rumour." In this answer the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal read a confession of the writer's guilt, and forthwith set to work in punishing the supposed delinquent.

During the past three weeks, this gentleman has been three times in orders for three different districts, and has had his privilege leave, which was long overdue, refused. The instructions under which he has been lately posted to an eastern district came, we are informed, direct from the Lieutenant-Governor, the choice of a station within these limits being left to the Secretaries; but only to be exercised, as it would appear from the sequel, with a due regard to their chief's estimate of the heinousness of the offender's guilt. Being indisposed, perhaps, to take upon themselves a heavier burden of odium than the letter of their orders demanded, the Secretaries posted the gentleman in question to Dinajpur. Sir Richard Temple's ideas of geography appear, however, to differ from those of the Secretaries, and Dinajpur has been disallowed, as not coming within the definition of Eastern Bengal. Whether the Secretaries referred back to his Honour for a more precise description of the boundaries of that portion of the province we do not know; but as a matter of fact the suspected author of the "Black Pamphlet" has been posted to Attia, a remote and disagreeable sub-division of Maimansingh.

Malarious fever prevails in Attia, and if the object of Sir Richard Temple's resentment should happen to catch the fever it will be easy of course to show that somebody was required to carry on the duties of that district, and that nobody was to blame for the selection of this particular victim. We only hope that Sir Richard Temple will not be greatly disappointed if the officer in question should turn out to be fever-proof.

ABDUL AZIZ—not he of Turkey, but the late Sultan of Oman—has lately shared his namesake's fate, in the matter at least of compulsory retirement from his throne. His supplanter is the same Saiyid Turki who after a strange series of misadventures made his way back in triumph to Muscat on the fall of his rival, Sultan bin Khaiz. He soon grew weary however of the cares of State, and his abdication was hastened by a paralytic stroke. His younger brother, Abdul Aziz, succeeded him, but soon fell into financial difficulties. Saiyid Turki was seized with a longing to resume the post he had so lightly abandoned, and his reappearance in Oman was followed by a struggle which ended in the downfall of his younger brother. After the surrender of Ismailli, towards the close of April, Abdul Aziz was so disheartened that he consented to accept such terms as his brother was disposed to offer. To this end he agreed to meet Saiyid Turki's deputy at the little seaport town of Korriate; but when the appointed hour arrived, and his Highness's minister, accompanied by her Majesty's Consul, reached the spot, Adbul Aziz did not appear for some time. When at length he did turn up he refused compliance with the terms proposed, and even pretended not to understand the conditions under which a pension was offered to him. Not long afterwards Adbul Aziz seems to have fled to Sind, where he was placed under the charge of Sir W. Merewether. But the fugitive Prince is not to be a burden on India; for his brother undertakes to disburse the stipend of Rs. 400 monthly for the entertainment of Abdul Aziz. The tribute from Zanzibar to Oman, the payment of which was again enforced, we believe, under the recent treaty with Sultan Bargash of Zanzibar, is paid through the Government of India at Bombay, and H.H. Saiyid Turki agrees that the sum needful to provide for Abdul Aziz during his enforced retirement in Sind shall be deducted therefrom.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of June 18 from Calcutta, Mr. Grosvenor has returned straight to China from Rangoon with his colleague. It is stated that the Indian Government knows nothing of his report, which has been sent to the Foreign Office, the question being Imperial. On first arriving at Manwain, the people said that Mr. Margary had never been there; but a Kakhyen guide showed the officers of the escort the spot where Mr. Margary was murdered, and the tree on which his head was exposed. The impression in Calcutta is that the Imperial troops committed the murder. Fourteen men are imprisoned at Talifu pending the receipt of the report. At Bhamo, Lisitahi's wife came and protested her husband's innocence. In Yunnan the Mission found everywhere traces of civil war, trade was almost destroyed, and Manwain is a miserable village, the people apparently being Shans. The King of Burmah wished to receive the Mission, but as they refused to take off their shoes an interview was not granted. The British Resident has had no audience since the order forbidding him to take off his shoes, and all business has been transacted through the Ministers. The King showed a friendly disposition towards the escort, and it is the general opinion at Rangoon that the real instigators of the murder escaped detection, though the humbler instruments, perhaps, were caught.

FROM the same source we learn that the Khan of Khelat arrived at Colonel Sandeman's camp at Mastang on the 21st ult., escorted by a body of native cavalry who had been sent to meet him, and was received with a salute. The negotiations for keeping the Bolan Pass constantly open progress favourably, and another caravan has passed safely through.

IT is stated by the same informant that Sir John Strachey, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-west Provinces, comes home shortly for six months, owing to failing eyesight, and it, is uncertain who will act in his absence; probably, either Mr. Inglis or Sir George Couper.

IT is rumoured in Calcutta that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce is about to move the Government to stop coining rupees on account of the present low value of silver. Why don't they urge the Government to adopt the double standard of value?

The Government of India has thanked the Government of Madras and several of its officers for the prompt measures taken to suppress the recent outbreak at Bastar.

IF the Times correspondent has telegraphed the truth concerning a village which he calls Golwood, a village of 200 people, on the Bombay and Baroda Railway, the cholera outbreak there has been frightful indeed. More than half of the population are said to have died in three days. The disease appeared at noon on the 4th, and before daybreak next morning there had been fifty-seven deaths. On the 8th all the survivors fled, but were refused admission by the adjacent villages. Some cases proved fatal in twenty minutes. In these the ordinary cholera symptoms were absent, and the body at the first stroke of the disease became livid, convulsed, and shrunken. There is no resident doctor in the village, and medical help was some time in arriving. Gross neglect of sanitary measures is the apparent cause, as it is stated that the people were living in inconceivable filth. Cholera appears to be unusually prevalent this year, outbreaks being reported from various parts of India; though none approach that of Golwood in violence.

WE learn from the Morning Post that "a new table of precedence has been recently arranged for all India. One of the changes effected will unquestionably afford great satisfaction to the navy, for by it the Naval Commander-in-Chief on the Indian station has been placed in a position in keeping with his high rank in the service." Hitherto the Admiral holding that appointment has been assigned a place among the local officials in Bombay. For the future, however, he is to rank next after the Commander-in-Chief of the military forces in India. Our contemporary thinks that this concession, to which some resistance was offered in a quarter which we can only guess at, is due to the presence at the Council-table of an officer who served for many years at the Admiralty, Sir Andrew Clarke.

IT appears from the Athenæum that the University Library of Cambridge has lately secured a valuable collection of Sanskrit MSS. from Nepal, illustrating the history and doctrines of Northern Buddhism. It is well known that the sacred books of Northern Buddhism, as it exists in Tibet, Tartary, and China, are translations from original Sanskrit books, now found only in Nepal. These Northern Sanskrit MSS. were first brought to light many years ago by Mr. Brian Hodgson, the British Resident in Nepal, who presented a good many Sanskrit MSS. to the Asiatic Society in Calcutta, and to the Royal Asiatic Society in London. Many more were given to the Société Asiatique, and to the learned Frenchman, M. Burnouf, who turned the gift to much better account than did Mr. Hodgson's own countrymen. The collection now secured by Cambridge was made, it seems, by Dr. D. Wright, while lately living in Nepal as the medical officer attached to the Residency. "It contains some 300 MSS., and probably embraces nearly all the extant Sanskrit literature of Northern Buddhism. One of the main features of the collection is the great antiquity of some of the MSS. All the older MSS. are on palm leaves, and many of them are dated in the Nepalese era or Samvat, which commences A.D. 880.' Dr. Wright, we are further told, is printing at the University Press a work on Nepal, to which will be appended a brief account of the MSS. Specimen pages of some of the oldest will be included in the next part of the Oriental Series of the Palæographical Society.

The death of Dr. Martin Haug, the well-known German Orientalist, took place at Ragatz, in Switzerland, on the 3rd June. Dr. Haug's researches led him to India, where he spent, if we mistake not, several years among the Pandits of that country, hunting out MSS. and studying Sanskrit and its kindred languages at the chief seats of Indian learning. The writer of a letter to Dr. Rost, since published in the Athenæum, was informed two years ago by Dr. Haug that he "had revised and enlarged his volume of 'Essays on the Parsees,' and that he had preserved in MS. a record of his observations and studies in India. I urged him at that time to write them out and arrange them, so that they would be ready for publication at least after his death. He said he would do so, but whether or not he ever found leisure for the work I am as yet unable to say. He also projected a series of critical studies of the Veda, of which he published only a translation and interpretation of Rig Veda I., 164, under the title of 'Vedische Räthselfragen und Räthselsprüche,' a pamphlet of about sixty pages. Perhaps some studies of other hymns may be found in his 'Nachlass,' and also further interpretations of the Avesta."

IF the Government wanted a decent excuse for withdrawing the last Fugitive Slave Circular they have got it in the Report of the Commission on Fugitive Slaves. Its recommendations completely justify the outcry which both the Circulars evoked. The old principle of leaving naval officers a large discretion in the treatment of runaway slaves has been virtually reaffirmed in the ruling of the Commissioners, that "the commander of a ship of war should not be altogether prohibited from exercising his discretion as to retaining a fugitive slave on board his vessel, whether such slave has come on board clandestinely or in any other way." It is beyond dispute that "the cases that present themselves to naval officers vary so much in character that it would be inexpedient, even were it possible, to lay down any strict rules for their guidance, under all the different circumstances which may occur." Nor is there any fault to find with the suggestion that "the commander of a man-of-war "should, before retaining a slave on board, satisfy himself that there is some sufficient reason for so doing." "Considerations of humanity" are to be the officer's guide in all doubtful cases. When the slave "has been or is in danger of being cruelly used," he should not be surrendered; and even if his surrender is demanded on the plea of his having committed some crime, "the officer ought, before complying with the request, to satisfy himself that the charge is not merely a colourable pretext for procuring the restitution of the slave, and also that the slave, if delivered up, will not be treated with inhumanity." As it is next to impossible for an officer to satisfy himself on this latter point the slave in such a case is pretty sure to go free. "Reasons of humanity" may also step in to save a runaway who has come on board with his master or on his master's business. Even when an officer has made up his mind not to harbour the escaped slave, he is to consider the best way of getting rid of him; but it is expressly enjoined that he "should not compel the slave to leave the ship unless satisfied that such measure would not lead to any ill-treatment of him on account of his attempt to escape." An officer who acts on these instructions will be free to gratify alike his humanity and his sense of power as representative of a nation which proclaims every man free who sets his foot on British soil. The Commissioners further propose that the British Government should enter into some arrangement with those Powers whose possessions are in the immediate neighbourhood of the slave-trading districts. If the Red Sea is to serve the purpose of the slave dealer, and the hoisting of the Turkish or Egyptian flag is to protect this traffic, our efforts to abolish the slave trade, in the opinion of the Commissioners, must be ineffectual. So, again, in Portuguese waters, they think we should seek to obtain the right of search which, under former Treaties, we possessed. It would also be desirable to obtain some modification of the Treaty with Madagascar.

FROM what Mr. Hardy said the other day in the House of Commons in answer to Sir George Campbell, we gather that the scheme which he has laid before the India-office for an adequate supply of men for Indian service embraces "a system under which no man shall serve less than five years in India, and, as a general rule, not more than eight." Such an arrangement would certainly go far to meet the objections which Sir G. Campbell urged to the new system of short service, which, as applied to India, means practically an average of only three years' service for every soldier sent out there. Eight years, or even five, would at least be better than three for Indian requirements; but how is such an arrangement to to be made to fit into the new system of six years' service with the colours? Mr. Hardy himself admitted that he "could not see how a long service army for India was to be provided from a short-service army for England;" and that is the very difficulty which stares every one in the face, as soon as he begins to deal with the question of recruiting for the Indian Army. Sir G. Campbell would get near it by obtaining two classes of recruits for the British Army,—"men to enter the reserve after a short service at home; and long-term men for general service, including India." All such proposals, however, seem to us vain attempts at solving the problem of maintaining one army alike for home and Indian service. A system of short enlistment, with a further term of service in the reserves, can never be made to work well in conjunction with long service in a foreign country. It is a waste of time, money, and brain-power to try and reconcile things so irreconcilable. The only way out of the mess in which all recent measures of army reform have landed us is to revive the good old system of a separate British Army for India.

WE hear that Dr. George Badger has in the press an important work, which will place within reach of Oriental scholars the very special knowledge of Arabic which he has acquired. "Dr. Badger's English-Arabic Lexicon," as about to be published by Messrs. King and Co., in a volume of at least 1,000 quarto pages, will enable the student to gain a thorough mastery of what its author calls "the most perfect of Oriental tongues, possessing a vast literature—albeit now somewhat antiquated—in almost every department of science." Arabic being the sacred language of the Muslims throughout the world, and now forming an integral part of several of the living languages of the East, the importance of Dr. Badger's work can hardly be overrated, as a means of supplying a long felt want. In his prospectus the author avows his confident belief that the new Lexicon "far surpasses in every way any attempt of the kind yet made, and that it will be found eminently useful to those for whom it is primarily intended," and his confidence would seem to be justified by the written testimony of the well-known Arabic scholar, Mr. Lane. To subscribers the work will be delivered for six guineas, or two guineas below the advertised cost.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

AN UNSEAWORTHY SHIP.

A STRIKING example of the risks and uncertainties involved in the question of a ship's seaworthiness was lately reported from Bombay. It appears that the Persia, Captain Duncan, bound for Liverpool, has been compelled to discharge her recently loaded cargo, in consequence of her leaky condition, and go into dock. She is a wooden ship, twenty-three years old, of 1,700 tons, and before her last voyage out to India was re-classed A1 at Lloyd's for four years. In April last, soon after her arrival in Bombay, five of her crew refused to do duty, and on being brought before the Senior Magistrate alleged that she was in a dangerously leaky state, making from twelve to thirteen inches of water daily even in harbour. Upon this the Chief Magistrate requested Captains Dixon and Blackmore to survey the vessel and report upon her real condition. These gentlemen examined the vessel thoroughly, when there was very little cargo on board, and the result was that the magistrate told the seamen not to be anxious about the trifling leakage, which was generally to be found even in the best built vessels at that time of the year.

The men, however, were not to be so easily satisfied. They accused the captain of sharp practice in shifting whatever cargo there was on board into such a position that it almost stopped the leakage for the time. Thereupon the shipping master, Lieutenant Brebner, was asked demi-officially to overhaul the vessel and report upon her actual leakage and general condition. On the evening before his visit the ship was pumped out by steam. On his arrival the next morning the well was sounded and gave twenty-seven inches of water. The pumps were then set to work, and the general result appeared to be that, while the vessel made twenty-seven inches of water in seventeen hours, she could be freed by a third of the crew at the rate of one inch in three minutes.

From the ship's log it appeared that she was strained and worked heavily off the Cape on the voyage out to Bombay, but subsequent entries convinced Lieutenant Brebner that the tightness of the vessel had not been materially affected thereby, as the average leakage during the remainder of the voyage was only three to five inches a day. Both Captain Duncan and Mr. Flinch, his chief officer, implicitly believed in the ship's seaworthiness. As the loading was pretty well advanced, the shipping master had little opportunity of examining the hull. He told the seamen that the sides of wooden vessels usually warp and dry in heat, but take up again when the hull has been for some time immersed. He did not think the leakage excessive, and himself considered the vessel perfectly safe. His report to this effect was laid before the Chief Magistrate, but it failed to shake the convictions of the seamen concerned. They were sentenced accordingly to three weeks' imprisonment.

Thus far, therefore, the case had gone dead against the complainants. But the event proved how rightly they had acted. A few days after the sentence, Captain Duncan informed the Shipping Master that the Persia was making water rapidly, and that he feared he would never be able to take her out fully loaded as she was then. He also requested the magistrate to release the prisoners, and released they were. Lieutenant Brebner, on his second visit to the ship, admitted that she had gone down a good deal, and leaked considerably. The surveyors also went again on board the Persia, and satisfied themselves by ocular proof as to the extent of their former error. The previous surveys indeed were made when the Persia was only immersed to her copper line, but it seems strange that public surveyors, especially deputed to ascertain her seaworthiness, and to make a thorough examination of the ship, should have so greatly misjudged the character of the mischief they actually saw. Had they been more careful or keener sighted, the injustice done to the seamen would not have occurred, nor would time and money have been lost in loading a vessel unfit to go to sea.

THE ENGLISH PRESS IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In the article in your paper of the 6th inst. (page 544) you have commented on the wish entertained by some of the authorities to gag the English Press in India.

The misgovernment of India of late years has arisen, not from the unseasonable publication of its measures, but from the secrecy with which the latter have been concocted and carried out.

In England there is always an active opposition to the Government which ferrets out and puts a stop to abuses: in India there is no legal opposition: no one who wishes to criticise the measures of Government can legally obtain the information which alone renders criticism of any value.

Any officer of Government who may venture to communicate official information to an independent and unofficial newspaper is liable to be dismissed; some years ago a very talented Civilian was removed from out of the Province of Oudh for this very fault.

The Directors of the late East India Company were not particularly fond of the course which the English Press took of making unpleasant strictures on their proceedings, but one of them expressing the opinion of all recorded—

> The Court were of opinion that publicity would afford the best security against maladministration; since men acting under the public eye may be expected generally to act with caution and correctness.—P. 47 of "Memorials."

If India is to be well governed the present system of jealous secrecy must be abandoned. The English Press is always loyal; it must be permitted to exercise its useful career either in India or in England; in the former country the editors are on the spot, and are less likely to make the gross mistakes which are so frequently committed in England in articles on Indian affairs. Editors in India are incited to do their duty carefully by the most pressing reasons; their property is liable to be lost if they fail to give due notice of native public opinion.

As an instance of the gross ignorance of the English Press in England regarding the condition of the natives of India, I may remind your readers that the leading London journals sent out in 1874 special correspondents to Tirhoot and Sarun to report regarding the wants of the poor. The chronic destitution which has existed in those districts for at least thirty years past, and which exists now, was interpreted to be a sudden famine; the high price of rice was supposed to be a sure index that the grain eaten by the poor must be dear. The shameless ignorance of some of the local officers was concealed by a boundless prodigality which made the fortunes of men, whose consciences ought now to be disturbed by the reflection that in order to pay interest on the seven and a half millions sterling, which have been recklessly borrowed and wasted, any reduction in the present iniquitous rate of salt tax has been postponed. How were the correspondents of London newspapers to acquire true information when nearly all of those with whom they could converse cried out the word Famine, and when most of those natives who could have told them that tens of thousands of the poor are always underfed were ignorant of the English language?

So sensible are natives of rank of the darkness in which the unofficial press in India is kept, that they have found it necessary to appeal to the Press in this country for redress; unfortunately, few editors in this country have leisure to master the great questions of Indian policy, viz., the strength of the army, the wants of the poor, the prevalence of crime, the assessment of the land tax, the weight of the salt tax, the imposition of octroi exactions, &c.

The Government of India objects to give information to the independent English Press in India partly because information might be published which could be made use of by the disloyal, and partly because editors have been known to publish inflammatory articles tending to produce hatred between the white and black races. But to prevent danger from the Press it will be sufficient to declare martial law in disturbed districts, and wherever martial law may be proclaimed, editors must be content to preserve a discreet silence.—Your obedient servant,

June 10. T.

THE INDIAN TRADE IN WHEAT.

The Englishman remarks that upwards of thirty years have elapsed since the question of an export trade from India in corn was agitated in Calcutta. A large body of useful and interesting information was then obtained as to the ratio of production in several districts, the costs of producing and the profit derivable by the grower and speculator, and the practicability of exporting the wheat when produced. So satisfied were the movers, among whom were included several active and enterprising members of the mercantile community, that India was able to grow wheat that would find a ready sale in the home market, and that it could be produced and exported at such cost as would yield a fair return for the capital employed, if due encouragement were afforded, that petitions were prepared and forwarded to the two Houses of Parliament, praying for the admission into the ports of Great Britain of wheat from this country on an equalised duty with the production of Canada. The petition was entrusted to the Earl of Auckland and Mr. Joseph Hume; but, though strongly supported by them and by the President of the Board of Commissioners for the affairs of India, the prayer of it was rejected. While this agitation was in progress there were also other shrewd observers who were entirely opposed to it, contending that, considering the length of voyage, the cost of freight, and, chiefly, the destruction of the grain by weevil, it was hopeless to expect that the Indian produce could successfully compete with that of other grain-growing countries, except, perhaps, California and Australia, which laboured under similar disabilities. Experience has, however, proved the fallacy of the last assertion, seeing that wheat properly prepared has defied the ravages of this insect in a long voyage. But this and other considerations have been recently nullified by that wonder of the age, the Suez Canal; and we now witness the result in our Indian wheat already receiving a fair share of support. The abolition of the export duty more than three years since has also had its due effect, for we find that the trade rose in one year, from the period of abolition, from an export of 394,000 cwt., valued at £167,690, to 1,755,954 cwt., valued at £827,606; and this has now increased in 1875-76 to 2,156,000 cwt. An opinion has, we observe, been advanced by one who appears to have given much attention to this important subject, that the time may come when the whole foreign annual supply required by Great Britain, amounting to about fourteen millions sterling, will be forthcoming from India. This assertion, though startling, may be realised in the course of time. It is true that some of our varieties of wheat are flinty, and otherwise poor in quality; but others, those especially of the Central Provinces, are fine descriptions, some yielding as much as sixty-three pounds to the bushel, and containing a large proportion of gluten. The system, at present in force in many districts, of the admixture of other crops with wheat, would have to be abandoned; and, though native cultivators are very reluctant to change the practice of their forefathers, it might no doubt be effected if purchasers for export would steadily reject all grain so grown. Moreover, a steady remunerative price for their produce would act as a powerful incentive to improvement. If, as we have seen advanced, India, with all her deficiencies, in rough implements and poor manure, can grow wheat at one half the cost that is required in England, we have another encouraging item in the calculation. But to improve the stock it is desirable that steps be taken towards the introduction from Europe and elsewhere of the best known varieties most likely to be suitable for various localities. The Punjab, portions of the Bombay Presidency, the Central Provinces, and various parts of Behar, all afford a fair field for such introductions; and the sooner they are attempted the better.

PUBLIC WORKS EXTRAORDINARY.

The Pioneer remarks that by "reproductive works," as Lord Northbrook explained last year, are meant works which, although they are not expected immediately to return the full amount or interest on the expended capital, will at least yield some direct and annually increasing net return. They are constructed from borrowed money, simply because, if the capital was not thus borrowed, they could not be constructed. There is, it is true, always a danger that the liabilities incurred by thus raising loans should outstrip the financial progress of the country. The bankrupt States of the United States, Egypt, Italy, Russia, all owe their financial difficulties to the thoughtless haste with which they have attempted to cover the country with railways or intersect it with canals. The Indian Government, from the first, has been keenly alive to this danger. No sounder rule of restriction could have been laid down than the one enunciated last year by Lord Northbrook. The borrowing in any year must not exceed the increased revenues which the reproductive works, already in existence, will yield in that year. Suppose the capital account of reproductive works to be ten millions sterling, and their net yield £300,000; if next year they yield £340,000 the State may borrow an additional million sterling without adding any further burden to the finances. The interest on the sum borrowed will be provided for by the additional earnings of the reproductive works already in operation. This principle has been strictly observed, at all events, in recent years. Take the guaranteed railways for example. From 1869 to 1873 there has been a steady expenditure of borrowed capital on extension of these lines. The gross amount of guaranteed interest rose from £4,013,871 in the first year to £4,613,511. The Times might point to this as an example of the reckless way in which the Government is adding to its liabilities and overweighting the resources of the country. But apprehension is removed when one finds that the net deficiency of the earnings as compared with the gross amount of the guaranteed interest was in 1869 £1,492,919, and in 1873 £1,428,442. The country paid in 1873 less than it did in 1869 for an immensely improved system of railway communications. The same holds good in a still more marked manner for canals. The net revenue derived from them increases much more rapidly than the extra interest annually incurred on account of borrowings for the construction of new ones. In the North-West Provinces, to take a special instance, the canals not only are yielding a net profit on all the capital sunk of about 6 per cent., but they are rapidly diminishing the accumulated arrears of interest which have accrued during their construction, and before they began to pay the annual interest charges. The attack of the Times is based on a misapprehension. The Times noticed that the revenue does not appear to be advancing, and at the same time that an intended loan of several millions sterling is announced. It jumps to the conclusion that the resources of the country are stationary, and the liabilities of the country increasing. The mistake lies in not seeking the reason for the apparently stationary condition of the finances. The revenue of countries, in which taxation is not co-extensive with every shape which wealth assumes, cannot be an infallible index of its increasing or diminishing prosperity. This is precisely the condition of India. There is wealth in divers shapes which is absolutely untouched by taxation. The accumulation of capital by the trading and banking classes, which enables them to build stately houses after an English fashion, to spend vast sums on marriages and festivals, to add field to field and village to village, pays nothing to the State. The dividends received by shareholders in guaranteed companies, over and above the guaranteed interest, are untaxed. An immense industry has grown up on the slopes of the Himalayas, of whose prosperity but the beginnings are seen; yet tea has been untaxed since 1860. The same may be said of the wealth that has been created by the jute trade. An income-tax would have tapped some of these streams of wealth, and yet it was voluntarily abandoned in 1872. The fact is, that the stationary condition of Indian revenues, of which the Times complains, arises from precisely the same causes that keep down the revenues of Great Britain. It is due to a steady process of diminishing direct and indirect taxation and customs dues.

RAILWAYS.—The line between the Palar river and Cuddalore is being pushed forward vigorously, in view to traffic being undertaken between Madras and this old seat of the Local Government by July next.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, May 12.—An impression that the first thing Lord Lytton would do when he settled himself in the saddle would be to ride straight at the North-West frontier and perform several surprising feats in connection with Sind, Punjab, Khelat, and Afghan politics was widely spread in India before he came, but it has grown obvious now that he means to do nothing in a hurry, and that however strong, eventually, his foreign policy may turn out to be, it will at any rate not be precipitate. There is no urgent necessity for any immediate measures on the Khelat border. Major Sanderson's expedition has tided the Government over current difficulties, and I venture to say that even if any reconstruction of the border administration should be ultimately determined on, the hot season will, at all events, pass by quietly without sensational disturbances of the status quo. In fact, there has been an inflammation of public feeling lately in reference not only to frontier politics, but to still more delicate questions affecting the peace of the Government of India, which may usefully be allowed to pass off before any new measures of importance are undertaken. The relations between the Government of India in India and the India-office have been somewhat strained for one thing. The strain is not likely to be felt any longer, but the foremost subject of public discussion here — and at home, so far as Indian affairs are discussed there — has recently been the extent of the Governor-General's authority as compared with that of the Secretary of State. Friction of that kind appears to be over now, and a quiet summer will probably witness the subsidence of all excitement on that score. The true theory of Indian government leaves no room for such friction indeed. Under a wholesome condition of things, no questions of privilege, or encroachments on authority from either side, can possibly arise. Probably it would be impossible to construct an Indian constitution which should so accurately define the relative powers of the Government here and ministry at home as to provide for the harmonious co-operation of a Governor-General and a Secretary of State, really antipathetic to, and mistruthful of one another; but on the assumption of moderate friendliness between those two great functionaries, and confidence on both sides, no hard-and-fast constitution is required to ensure the harmony of their relations. I do not feel called upon to analyse the difficulties which arose between Lord Salisbury and the late Viceroy, nor to attempt a distribution of blame. I have touched on this subject merely to point out that it has already drifted into the past. Whatever may occur to give interest to public affairs here for the next year or so, internecine warfare between the two great halves of the Indian administration is certainly not to be expected. So these two great subjects, which have been very interesting to the Anglo-Indian world for some months past, are practically dead, and one turns to survey the political horizon afresh to discover whence the next breeze is likely to spring up.

May 15.—Clouds came rolling up from the southward all Saturday, and drew a welcome screen between us and the sun, which for the last few days had shown a disposition to dissipate its energies at Simla in a very reprehensible manner, considering that the department to which it belongs is not under the Supreme Government. The distant hills faded into the mist during the day, and the outlines of the nearer ridges were gently softened, while the fir woods grew dark, and a dull, heavy sensation in the air gave promise of a coming storm. About eight the engagement began, the big guns opening at once in a way which evoked a furious reply from the beleaguered hills, while the rain discharge all along the line, mingled with frequent volleys of the newest improved hail, was kept up for hours in a very spirited way. The operations were continued fitfully during the night, and resumed with augmented ferocity on Sunday. By this time Simla had been washed clean of all the warmth accumulated during the previous fortnight, and the damp cold set in, all calling for fires indoors and great coats in the verandah. I heard a rumour to the effect that a captain of native infantry tried to go to church in the afternoon—Sunday hangs so heavily on the hands of some people—but fell back instead on the amusement of changing his clothes. When the season is more advanced, and the regular bursat trains us all to live like water-rats, we shall no doubt organise ingenious Mackintoshes, and be in a position to treat the weather with contempt. But yesterday's untimely downpour took the station at a disadvantage. This morning it cleared partially, but as I write a chilly drizzle has been re-established. Luckily the Viceroy's party had the final days of the fine weather last week for going to the fair. I did my duty as court newsman and sent you word of this expedition by the wires. The fair is called the Serpee mela, and takes place near Mushobra, eight or nine miles away along the Tibet road. Of course, there are various ethnological types gathered together at these hill fairs which have a certain interest on that account; but the piquancy of the Serpee festival turns upon the fact, that besides Indian antiquities from Birmingham there were wives for sale there if any one chose to buy. At all events, on a certain hillock were assembled crowds of women in many-coloured garments, and these were generally believed to be for sale, ruling, I was told, about five rupees for brown C.B. young ladies, sound in wind and limb. I would not for worlds rob Serpee fair of its principal charm by hinting any doubt as to the perfect bonâ fides of all transactions in the girl market, though an English lady among the visitors, a little shocked at their primitive nature, reconciled her conscience to the idea of assisting at such ceremonies by declaring that the girls were not really for sale, but only for hire.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—The Wesley College, Colombo, and Cuttack College are affiliated to the Calcutta University, with effect from 1st January.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—We regret to hear that Mr. Alonzo Money was thrown from his buggy on Sunday evening. His collar-bone was fractured, and he was a good deal cut about the head.—Indian Daily News, May 23.

DEATH OF SERGEANT BOOTH.—An old soldier has just died in the person of Bazaar-Sergeant J. Booth. The deceased entered the service five and thirty years ago, was present at the battles of Sobraon, Chillianwallah and Goojrat, and received the Sutlej and Punjab medals. Last year the good conduct medal was also presented to him. For a little over ten years, he has been Bazaar Sergeant at Sealkote.—Indian Public Opinion, May 18.

THE LATE CAPTAIN HOUGH.—We observe the announcement of the death at Calcutta, on the 8th May, of Captain Harry Wainwright Hough, brother of Major-General Hough. The deceased officer entered H.M.'s 50th Regiment, and was present with that corps throughout the Sutlej campaign, where he was wounded. He proceeded with the regiment to England in 1847, and exchanged into the 32nd Regiment, and after some years' service retired on half-pay.—Times of India.

COLONEL CURRIE.—It is rumoured that Colonel Currie, commanding the 39th Foot, is to be honoured with the Companionship of the Bath, when her Majesty's birthday honours are being distributed, and also rewarded by a good service pension. Colonel Currie, if he gets what report says is in store for him, may well say, at the end of his thirty-eight years' service, "Better late than never." This officer has served in all parts of the world, being well to the front with the 39th at Maharajpore, and serving with it all through the Crimea.

DEATH OF MRS. REDSLOB.—The Agra paper has heard with much regret the death of Mrs. Redslob, wife of the Rev. Mr. Redslob, Moravian Missionary, located at Kyelang, near Kooloo, on the borders of Thibet. Mrs. R. arrived in the country only about three years ago, and since her taking up her residence in what may be called the wilderness, she has not once left it, thus debarring herself almost entirely from all social ties, and confining herself to her missionary labours among the Thibetans. Sickness first attacked her on the 26th March, and after an illness of exactly a month she was removed from her labours.

PRIVATE M'GRATH'S CASE.—ALLAHABAD, May 28.—Soon after three o'clock the jury returned into Court and declared M'Grath not guilty of murder, on the ground of temporary insanity. The prisoner is remanded to Nynee Jail pending the orders of the Governor-General. Mr. Justice Turner, in discharging the jury, thanked them for their close attention to the case. For M'Grath it was deposed he was under the earlier influences of delirium tremens when he fired at and killed the three Mohamedans at Shajehanpore. During more than eighteen years' service he was confined thirty-six times for drunkenness, but in other respects he was a quiet and steady soldier.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE WEATHER IN CALCUTTA.—The climate of Calcutta upon the whole is certainly pleasanter than that of the other side of India. The hot season is so tempered by the constancy of the south wind, and the recurrence of gales from the north-west or north-east—for they seem to come from both points—that the sea breeze of the Malabar coast gives far less relief to European residents, if we may judge by ourselves. The weather has cooled down sensibly the last week. We have had heavy refreshing rains for the cultivator, who is hard at work in the fields, and in the city we are hardly less thankful, for allaying the heat and dust. There is a very sensible lowering of the death-rate, we are glad to observe, in the city.—Calcutta Statesman, May 23.

THE ZEMINDARS AND THE RYOTS.—The Zemindars of Bengal have, we notice in a Calcutta paper, offered to settle the disputes between themselves and their ryots by consenting to limit their exactions to one-fourth of the produce of the land. This looks well at first sight, and if the zemindars will not make exactions in some other shape on their ryots those poor people will have a chance of improving their position. The customary rental of land in civilised countries is about one-third of the produce, so that the zemindars of Bengal, by demanding only one-fourth, have openly professed their willingness to settle disputes which have already caused disturbances in Bengal, and have exercised the ingenuity of Sir R. Temple in vain to settle by legislative enactments.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal returned to Champaran on the 11th May from his visit to Nepal, and proceeded to Darjiling, via Darbangah and North Bhagalpur.

STORM AT MASURI.—It is reported from Masuri that on the 14th May torrents of rain fell, accompanied by lightning and thunder. There was one terrific flash and clap which startled every one in the station. On inquiry it was ascertained that the electric fluid had descended upon and struck the Himalaya Hotel, entering a thick stone wall of one of the rooms, setting fire to an almirah containing a lady's wardrobe, which was instantly consumed. It then passed along a hall, killing the servant who was asleep in a passage (the man never rose), and stunning severely two other natives, one of whom died soon after. The lightning then appears to have passed out, and ran along a lengthy verandah, splintering several of the wooden posts, then took an angle downwards, touching the corner of a house, and finally flashed down the khud, killing a native who was proceeding along the lower road on horseback.

CHOLERA AND QUARANTINE.—Doctors are rather disagreeing at Murree about the quarantine at Kohala. Dr. de Renzy, Sanitary Commissioner, thinks that the quarantine is useless and only an unnecessary annoyance to travellers. The Civil Surgeon and the Garrison Surgeon are of a different opinion, and the quarantine is accordingly maintained, a European doctor and a European police officer being stationed at Kohala to see the arrangements are properly carried out. The quarantine arrangements during the great outbreak of cholera in the Punjab last time were very successful as far as they went, and I think a good quarantine is certainly a safe and desirable measure, whatever differences of opinion may exist as to the mode in which the cholera poison is transmitted. Meanwhile, I am sorry to say the dread disease is very bad in Kashmir, and touring there is quite out of the question.—Pioneer Correspondent.

THE LAW'S HARSHNESS.—Another victim has fallen to our legal system. It may be remembered that some years ago we greatly interested ourselves in the case of Jai Chand, son of Gouri Shanker of Batala, who from a state of great affluence fell into beggary in consequence of an execution of decree, now admitted to have been carried out in an improper manner. Mr. Boulnois, to his credit be it said, seemed to take an interest in the matter, but nothing could be suggested beyond an appeal to the Privy Council, and to do this Jai Chand had not the means. He died a few days ago of starvation, at Amritsar, whilst his brother wandered disconsolately about to beg for a sufficient loan or gift to buy the wood wherewith to burn the dead body. The brother now constantly passes and repasses the houses and other property of which law, which is not justice, has deprived him, and we trust that he feels the advantage of his rights having been sacrificed to technicality and routine, the combination of which is sometimes synonymous with the "impartial administration of British justice."—Indian Public Opinion.

THE LATE M. LAMOUROUX.—We regret to have to record the death of a gentleman well known in Calcutta, and whose familiar face will be missed from the places of general resort, and his loss more severely felt amongst a numerous circle of friends. We refer to Monsieur Lamouroux, the Italian Consul-General for Calcutta, and the agent for the Messageries Maritimes. M. Lamouroux was en route to Mussoorie, where he intended to spend a short time during this trying season. He left Calcutta on Wednesday, and feeling unwell at Allahabad stopped there for two days; on Saturday evening he continued his journey, but had again to leave the train at Etawah, suffering from strong fever, and died at ten o'clock on Sunday morning from apoplexy; his remains were interred on the evening of the same day. Mons. Buralau, a member of his firm, accompanied him on the journey from Calcutta, and was happily able to pay him every attention possible to the last. This sad result, of what was hoped and expected to be a trip of pleasure and health, has fallen very severely upon the friends of the deceased, who was full of kindly feeling and hospitality.—Indian Daily News, May 19.

SPIKE STEALING ON RAILWAYS.—A correspondent on the Loop Line of the East Indian Railway writes to the Railway Service Gazette:—Three spike extractors were disturbed a few evenings ago, at their little game, near Bahawa. Two escaped, but one fellow—having heavily handicapped himself by placing spikes in his waist string—was nabbed; he awaits his trial, which, I think, will lead to a committal to the Bhaugulpore Sessions. The depredations of these men have been great; no less than sixty and seventy spikes extracted during a night is no joke, and that in various portions of the line. I trust for the sake of the travelling public and train service these depredators may be captured. It is not the value of the iron spikes stolen, although for the company to continually lose on an average of 4,000 to 5,000 in a district in a month costs something to replace. For the past three months, although special police have been told off to the duty of tracing and apprehending them, consultations between Mr. Rochfort, Superintendent of the Railway Police, the Superintendent of the District Police, and the several magistrates, have met to devise means of stopping this crime, up to this capture their efforts have been baffled; let it be trusted a few others may be captured, and the crime stamped out.

THE RELIEFS.—We hear the relief of regiments will not be carried out extensively this year. The cavalry changes that were ordered last year will possibly be carried out. The 15th Regiment 2nd Battalion move to Mhow, the 66th from Poona to Deesa, and the 83rd Regiment relieve the 56th Regiment at Kurrachee. Some few native corps will also exchange stations.—Times of India.

STATION TALK.

RANGOON, May 6.—Since I last wrote we have sustained a great loss in the departure of the Rev. A. H. Etty, our cantonment chaplain, who left for Madras en route to Kamptee by the British India Steam Navigation Oriental on Sunday last. His farewell sermon was both eloquent and heart-stirring; in it he spoke most feelingly of the late Mr. A. C. Bainbridge, of whose sudden death I told you three weeks ago. Mr. Bainbridge, a hardworking member of the Bengal Civil Service, was also a sub-deacon of the Church of England; and often, when required, assisted Mr. Etty in his services—reading the lessons, taking the service at times in the jail, and otherwise making himself useful. Oh! by such help! Mr. Etty has lately been working hard and successfully to establish a Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals—a society as much needed in Rangoon as in every large town. The Pegu pony seems to be, of all others, the most ill-used animal; the practice of starving them to death when too old or ill to work—starving them simply by turning them out of home and shelter to die by the roadside—is abominable. Numbers of these poor creatures are to be seen in various stages of starvation, truly pitiable objects. Mr. Rivers Thompson, the Chief Commissioner, has warmly espoused their cause, and has, I hear, promised five hundred rupees towards it for the purpose of building drinking troughs, &c., provided four other people will give the same amount; and considering the numbers of immensely rich Burmese in Rangoon, not to speak of the merchants here, who live in such grand style, it will be hard if the money is not speedily subscribed. Two rather successful meetings have been held lately, at which Mr. Etty and other gentlemen spoke. Mr. Etty was Master of the Freemasons' Lodge "Rangoon," and he was entertained by his brother masons before leaving.—By the same steamer the Oriental, the two senior officers of the 1-5th Brigade R.A. went en route to England on sick certificate. Major Armstrong and Lieutenant Quayle had only been two months in Burmah, had gone up to Tonghoo, and after remaining there three weeks were ordered suddenly home. Major Armstrong was on the sick list when he went to Tonghoo, and is now very seriously ill indeed, while Mr. Quayle's illness—abscess of the liver—was, it is greatly to be feared, aggravated by overwork while on the voyage up the river. He had no conductor sent with him, and consequently, ailing as he then was, had to give out himself the daily supplies for the troops, and that in the hottest weather that Burmah can produce. A third officer from Tonghoo, Colonel Waterman, commanding H.M.'s 17th Regiment N.I., is, I hear, on his way down here on sick leave en route to Europe. Mr. Rivers Thompson and Mr. Wilkinson, the Recorder, have both returned from Calcutta, and Colonel Dyer, Officiating Assistant Adjutant-General, has arrived from Madras.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE HARBOUR WORKS.—A portion of the north groyne of the proposed harbour at Madras has been washed away. The iron rails are now protruding about fifteen feet beyond the embankment.

ELEPHANT SALES.—Some time since an officer of the Madras Police and his assistant were very successful at elephant-catching in the Coimbatore District. Mr. Wedderburn, the Collector, has obtained the sanction of the Madras Government to sell a good batch of elephants at public auction, and it is expected that about the early part of next month (June) thirty elephants will be brought to the hammer at Coimbatore.

CHINCHONA.—The Mysor Government maintains two Chinchona plantations, one on the Bababudan Hills and another on the Bilagirirangam Hills, the former containing 30,526 trees. The bark has been favourably reported on by Mr. Broughton. In Kurg there is a similar plantation maintained efficiently by Mr. Richter, where the C. Succirubra alone is cultivated. The gardens are not self-supporting as yet, though in time they are expected to be so.

THE GOVERNOR.—The Governor has returned to Ootacamund from Wellington, whither his Grace and family had proceeded for the annual races. While at Wellington the Duke held a levee for the special benefit of the gentlemen of that station and Coonoor, and Lady Mary Grenville held a reception for the ladies, and both were well attended. The levee and the reception were followed up with a grand pic-nic at the Hoolicul Droog, one of the most picturesque spots on the Neilgherries.—Athenæum, May 27.

THE NEW EPIDEMIC.—A correspondent from Cuddapah writes to a Cochin paper that a new epidemic, which was some time back reported to have prevailed in Salem, has made its appearance there. At first the patient complains of a curious sensation in the soles of the feet, the sensation gains ground, and is felt about the stomach, the tongue becomes very parched, and death quickly ensues. A few cures have, however, been effected. The natives, especially the poorer classes, are panic-stricken, owing to the frequent deaths that occur.

BANGALORE.—We hear from Bangalore that a shower of rupees is likely to descend on the fortunate heads of those people who own land in the neighbourhood of the Rajah's new palace there. The idea is to enclose the castle in park-like grounds, and as the land must be forthcoming somehow or other for the purpose, money will be no object in obtaining it. A number of small holders will have to be bought out at their own price, and the Rajah will find his new house a rather expensive toy—but he can afford it. The weather at Bangalore is reported as tolerably cool, with rain and thunderstorms at intervals.—Madras Times, May 27.

BELLARY.—Not long ago it was suggested to start a weaving and spinning mill in Bellary, on the plan on which the mills at Royapooram and Choolay in this city are worked. The leading native merchants in Bellary and some of the European tradespeople promised to give the project every support, and it was proposed to work up the company and give its shareholders a large profit. Bellary is a large cotton-producing district, and the promoters of the scheme were under the impression that they would experience no difficulty in attaining their object. They have, however, been disappointed, as the company has already been wound up, and at a meeting held at Bellary a few days ago it was resolved to return to shareholders the moneys deposited by them, less expenses.—Madras Times.

COTTON IN KADAPAH.—It is estimated that the total quantity of cotton produced in the Kadapah District may be valued at forty lakhs of rupees every year, but that the largest portion of the cotton is exported. In 1804 the total number of looms at work in the Kadapah District was 19,626, and these looms produced annually 1,235,412 pieces of cloth, valued at 5,57,787 star pagodas. The looms, moreover, produced cumblies and blankets valued at about fifty thousand pagodas. Under favourable circumstances it was then said that the looms in the district will be capable of producing cloths valued at twenty lakhs per annum. It appears, however, that the number of looms at work in 1867 were 8,702, employing 14,508 workmen, and the value of cloths produced was a little above a lakh of rupees. It will thus be seen that the weaving industry in the Kadapah District has fallen off very considerably in the last few years.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—The Queen's birthday at Madras passed off very quietly, and there was nothing to mark the occasion with the residents, except the usual birthday parade of the troops on the Island, which was a poor affair, and so little did people think of it that very few took the trouble to go out to witness it. The mercantile offices were as usual closed on that day, but the Government servants had to work as on any other day. To-day, however, they get the holiday in honour of the birthday, and we have already remarked on the shabbiness of this arrangement, which has deprived the hard-working servants of Government of a holiday. His Grace the Duke of Buckingham celebrates the birthday this day by a popular entertainment at Ootacamund, at which all the residents there will have an opportunity of amusing themselves. In Simla, Lord Lytton holds a levée in honour of the occasion. Our Calcutta neighbours were to have celebrated the birthday by a subscription ball yesterday, one of the foremost promoters of the undertaking being Sir Richard Garth, the Chief Justice of Bengal. —Madras Times, May 27.

LUNATICS AT LARGE.—A number of European and East Indian lunatics of the Bangalor Lunatic Asylum having been temporarily sent back to their relatives and friends on account of cholera having broken out among the native inmates in the asylum, some curious results seem to have followed. According to one of the local papers (the Examiner), one insane gentleman attended St. Mark's Church one Sunday morning, and walking up to the communion table, entered within the rails, and gravely desired the officiating minister to inform the Chief Commissioner of Mysore that he (the lunatic) "was the King of the Twelve Stars." The Rev. Mr. Kidd quietly put the man out of the rails, and he was subsequently removed with some difficulty from the church. He repeated his visit in the evening, and took the very first seat in the church. On being threatened to be given in charge of the police he left the building. Another "unfortunate victim of one idea," the same paper states, is at large in Richmond town, and is putting the residents to unutterable bodily fear by threatening to kill anybody he meets! This is the one probably alluded to by the other local paper as having, immediately on his return home, "cut off his wife's hair."

DIALOGUE BETWEEN TWO ARYAN BRETHREN.

PANDOO FROM THE DUSKY EAST AND BROWN FROM THE MIGHTY WEST.

Pandoo: Brother Brown, did you read that able editorial article which appeared yesterday in that champion of our liberties, yclept the Times of India, touching the forcing of carts during the relief season? Don't you think this is carrying authority with rather a high hand, and that the cartmen should receive batta from the date they are pressed? I will read the article to you.

Brown: Hem. Look here, Shaik Boodhin, I mean Pandoo. I have got so many brethren of so many different creeds and colours that I forgot your name. Before I answer your question, solve me this physical problem. Do, the thermometer standing at 105° and your housebored platitudes about British justice, energy and too good naturedness raise the British blood over 97½° or not?

Pandoo: I cannot answer; I give it up.

Brown: Nor can I just now. But as it is getting cooler I will tell you something about your country cartmen in general and the Southern India ones in particular. In 1865 the 2-21 Fusiliers were ordered to march from Bellary to Secunderabad by wings. Tenders were called in for the supply of carts, and a Mussulman contractor undertook to supply them for 35 rupees a cart. The right wing went off without hitch or hindrance, though the unfortunate contractor had to pay the contract rate for a good many carts of that wing. The time arrived for the left wing to move. The contractor furnished a little over half the number of carts required, for some of which he had to pay over Rs. 37. With tears in his eyes he rushed off to the General and the Collector to beg of them to make their own arrangements. He was told he must abide by his contract, and the unhappy man had to pay 48 rupees for the rest of the carts but two, which were wanted to complete the requisition. At this juncture the contractor was at his wit's end, because your country cartmen, acting up to the principles of free trade, wanted Rs. 80 per cart. The contractor, a ruined man, could not furnish them, and the commanding officer of the wing ordered two carts to be pressed. They were wheeled up to the barrack square, and the poor owners were promised they would get 40 rupees for the trip. No, that did not tempt your free agents. Away they went, leaving their carts and bullocks to take care of themselves, to the General commanding who, with more misplaced sympathy and weakmindness than judgment and decision, ordered the two carts to be released forthwith. The left wing marched off, leaving as a legacy to the barrack authorities three or four soldiers' families to be forwarded on when a favourable opportunity occurred. You see your country cartman, though it is said he gets no batta during a day or two of first detention, makes a good thing of it as a rule. Even at stations where there is only one native regiment, numbers of carts are always to be found at the Bhandypoorah or Gharrywada without going to villages for them. At stations where there are European troops carts simply swarm. Admitting a few carts were pressed from villages, it is no more hardship on their miserable owners that it is to the Britisher in the kingdom, who has, whether he likes it or not, to supply not only drays with one or more horses at fixed rates, but also to billet the soldiers on the move during time of profound peace. Generally tents are sent on camels. I presume you would like to hire a cart and have the cartman carried in a muncheel, fanned all day long with a refrigerator at his sides. I tell you what—you have forgotten all the stories handed down to you by your direct ancestors—Vickermagite, Boderas or the Great Mogul, would not only have taken the cartman's liberty, but his cart, bullocks and his head into the bargain. It is fortunate for you that Mother Britannia has taken you by the hand to pamper you; but you must not forget that if cousin Prussia had anything to say to you, your cartmen Rajas and Nabobs, they would swallow you and them up and skin you alive with the "Peitjebe," or knout. It is getting too warm now, and you are not grateful, I won't speak to you again from this day.—Bombay Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

COMMANDER GILES.—It is rumoured that Commander Giles, of the late Indian Navy, for some years port officer of Kurrachee, will not return to India, but contemplates retiring.—Sindian.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—We regret to learn that a Mr. Nappin, an overseer of the Public Works Department, died very suddenly at Haidarabad the other day. The cause of death was heat apoplexy.—Sindian, May 10.

THE GOVERNOR.—H.E. the Governor has been made a G.C.S.I. H.E. is already a K.C.B. The new decoration is doubtless intended as an acknowledgment of the splendid hospitality accorded to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales by Sir Philip during the Prince's stay in Bombay.—Times of India, May 29.

PARSEE GENEROSITY.—We learn that with characteristic and discriminating generosity Sir Cowasjee Jehangir Readymoney, K.C.S.I., has presented Rs. 3,000 for the construction of a set of drinking reservoirs for the various castes and for animals in connection with the Penn Waterworks, which are just completed. We trust the first birthday Gazette of the Empress of India will confer on this liberal gentleman the additional honour which he has so well merited.—Bombay Gazette, May 29.

MEDICAL.—It is stated that Dr. Davidson will take the appointment of Superintendent of the Yerowda Jail. No one could be better qualified for the work, and we shall consider Government exceedingly fortunate in securing his services; but we shall regret Dr. Davidson's withdrawal from general practice here, where his skill has been so widely known and appreciated. The Yerowda Jail is so exclusively work among natives that it will limit the sphere of his extended and increasing practice.—Deccan Herald, May 15.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY FINED.—On the arrival of the P. and O. steamship Bokhara in Bombay harbour last week, from Southampton, the Customs preventive officers seized 57 crates which were intended for transhipment to China. On a closer inspection they were found to contain ammunition waggons, gun carriage wheels, &c., and were accordingly detained. The Commissioner of Customs has now disposed of the matter by confiscating the crates and the munitions of war which they contained, and fining the P. and O. Company Rs. 500, one-half the maximum amount of fine authorised by the Customs Act in such cases. The Company paid the fine at once.—Bombay Gazette, May 29.

BRUMMAGEM CIVILISATION.—Sayyid Burgash, the Sultan of Zanzibar, who professes to be very civilised, has met with great attentions during his visit to England, and has, for suppressing the slave-trade in his dominions after considerable pressure by Sir Bartle Frere and by those who went before him, been much praised. It is well-known that the abolition of slavery is not real but merely official, and also the individual proclivities of Sayyid Bergash have proved that he always was, and is now merely shamming. When he was in Mekka he bought a number of slave women and boys for his harem, whom he carried to Zanzibar. We may, to prove our statement, mention that a slave-boy of Sayyid Burgash is at present in Bombay; he is as fair as a European, about fifteen or sixteen years old, and the son of a Circassian slave girl; this boy escaped from Zanzibar, and is charitably provided for by Dr. Anderson, of the J. J. Hospital, who feeds him, clothes him, and sends him to school.—Native Opinion.

RIFLE SHOOTING IN THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.—The return of the progress made by European regiments in this Presidency, in their annual course of musketry for 1875-76, has just been published, but the figures of merit are not, we regret to state, very good, though we are quite unable to assign any reason for this. The 2nd Battalion of the 25th is the best, the figure of merit being 100·97, and this too at the conclusion of the regiment's Indian service, for it went home in one of the troop-ships the other day. So this would seem to prove that service in India does not impair a man's shooting powers, but the reverse. The lowest figure of merit is very low, being only 63·32. The best shot among the officers in this Presidency, from 400 to 800 yards, is Captain Broderick, of the 1-2nd Foot, and the best among the soldiers at the same distance is Private Battersby, of the 108th Foot. The best shooting regiment at present in this Presidency is the 55th, which has the very respectable figure of 98·07, none of the others reaching 90. But though the figures of merit are low, there are a very large number of individual good shots in the various regiments, as is proved by the fact that in the ten British regiments in the Bombay Presidency there are no less than 1,487 marksmen, or very few short of 150 per infantry corps, for we have not included cavalry in our calculation. The 83rd Foot has the highest number of marksmen, there being as many as 219 in that corps.—Times of India.

OPIUM SMUGGLING.—The Customs authorities made an important seizure on last Tuesday evening, at the Carnac Bunder, of a considerable quantity of opium, of the value of about Rs. 15,000, while the duty payable amounts to thirty or forty thousand rupees, smuggled into Bombay, evidently for exportation, as dubbers of mustard oil booked from Ahmedabad, Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway station for Bombay. It appears the information was given to the Commissioners of Customs by the station master of the Grant-road Station from an information which he received through a policeman doing duty at his station. On the Commissioner of Customs receiving this information he immediately issued an order to the preventive officer stationed at Carnac Bunder to make a seizure of certain dubbers of mustard oil that arrived at the Carnac Bunder by train from Ahmedabad. The dubbers were just then being unloaded from the wagons, when the seizure was made. On examining the first dubber it was at once found to contain mustard oil, and it would have been difficult to discern that it contained anything else but the oil if the secret had not been divulged. A small dubber was fixed in a larger one; the inner dubber contained the oil and the larger one the opium. The opium that was found in each of the dubbers weighed in some 70 lbs., in some 60 lbs., and in some 90 lbs. On an average it might be said that each dubber contained 70 lbs. of opium, besides the oil. This system of smuggling is said to have been carried out successfully for a length of time, and probably from some disagreement amongst the partners of those who have practised this fraud upon Government the matter has come to the knowledge of the Customs Department. The owners of the property, who are suspected to be Mohammedans of the Borah caste, cannot at present be discovered, the goods having been booked at Ahmedabad under a fictitious name. The Customs authorities are, however, instituting further inquiries into the matter.

FESTIVITIES AT BARODA—(BARODA, May 28).—Saturday, being the first anniversary of the installation of the Gaikwar, was observed as a general holiday. In the evening there was a grand procession of elephants and soldiers. I noticed that the crowd was greater and more enthusiastic than at Tamashas a year ago. Mr. Melville joined the procession at the Dewan's cutcherry. All then went to the Motibagh Durbar. Afterwards the officers of the garrison were entertained at dinner on invitation. After the usual loyal toasts the healths of the Gaikwar and her Highness Jumnabai were drunk. Sir T. Madava Row, in responding on their behalf, referred to what he could call the momentous event in the life of the Maharajah, which was also a momentous event in the history of the State itself. He said that during the past year the Raj had not been idle; it had made steady progress in every branch, with careful regard to existing conditions and sound principles, so that what had been done would stand the test of time. They had diminished extravagance and promoted security of life and property. They would still continue that policy. He spoke in high terms of the assistance received from Sir R. Meade and Mr. Melville, and said that the Imperial Government, in sending such able and select agents, showed its wisdom and discretion. He concluded by proposing the health of Mr. Melville, who, in response, spoke of the progress made by the young Gaikwar in his education under Mr. Elliot, and considered the education of the Gaikwar of vital importance, and hoped that when his Highness came of age he would be able to take charge of the State with credit to himself and the British Government, and that he would acquire the love of his subjects. That, it would be remembered, was the policy recommended by the Prince of Wales in his speech at Baroda. Mr. Melville then stated that the Gaikwar would visit England as soon as convenient. He concluded with high encomiums on Sir T. Madava Row and his officials, who had found Baroda a chaos, and were getting it into order. It will take years to do it; but in future Baroda will be found to be a model state. Colonel Thompson responded for the officers of the garrison, and said that should the Gaikwar ever want protection he would find the army most ready and willing to give it. Afterwards there was a first-class display of fireworks.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE PRINCE'S INDIAN AIDES-DE-CAMP.—Mr. Sydney Hall has been commanded by the Queen to paint in oil the heads of the two native officers, Mahomed Afzul Khan and Anoop Sing, who accompanied the Prince of Wales from India, and to make a water-colour sketch of their orderlies.

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE CIRCULARS.—The Report of the Royal Commission on the Fugitive Slave Circulars has been published. Sir George Campbell, one of the Commissioners, has refused to sign the document, not approving of its recommendations.

A NEW INDIA OFFICE PUBLICATION.—We (Home News) are informed that there will be shortly published a selection from the Minutes which the late J. S. Mill wrote when at the India-office. As is well-known, these documents are masterpieces of composition, and models of their kind, and a volume bringing them together would be of great value and interest.

THE EARL OF NORTHBROOK took his seat and the oaths, on his promotion to an Earldom, in the House of Lords on June 15. Lord Northbrook, accompanied by Lord Cottesloe, paid a visit to the House of Commons on Thursday evening last for the first time since his return from India. The noble lord received the hearty congratulations of many of his former colleagues and old Parliamentary friends.

SIR SALAR JUNG.—Sir Salar Jung is still confined to his room. At the Oxford Commemoration, which is to be celebrated on Wednesday next, June 21, the hon. degree of D.C.L. will be conferred, amongst others, on Sir Salar, on Lord Northbrook, and on Dr. Birch, Keeper of Oriental Antiquities, British Museum. It is in contemplation by the Corporation of London to confer the freedom of the City upon Sir Salar Jung, K.C.S.I., during his stay in this country.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—In anticipation of the half-yearly general meeting, the directors of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway have issued their report and accounts made up to December 31. The receipts were £224,982, an increase of £41,026, and the expenses amounted to £158,136, against £131,503, leaving a net profit of £66,846. The total receipts on capital account amounted to £7,830,986, including £35,386 not bearing interest deposited with the Secretary of State. The total expenditure for the construction of the railway and branches has been £7,393,820, of which £18,100 was spent during the six months.

MILITARY.—Captain R. Alexander (late Madras) succeeds to the vacant adjutancy of D Brigade R.H.A., at Dublin, vice Captain W. H. Montgomerie. The 1st Battalion 10th, at Penang, is to leave that station in the course of the autumn or winter on being relieved by the 2nd Battalion of the Buffs, now under orders of readiness to proceed out from Ireland. In future the limit of age for men enlisting for short service into the Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, Foot Guards, and Infantry of the Line is to be extended to thirty years. The names of Lieutenant Rose, 84th Regiment, and Lieutenant Stokes, 105th Regiment, have been added to the list of officers of the Aldershot Division who have executed very good sketches and reports.

GENERAL A. HARDINGE.—Major-General Stephenson, C.B., will succeed Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar in the command of the Home District. General the Hon. A. Hardinge, who returned from India for the express purpose of assuming that command, has declined the post for the following reason:—General Stephenson and Michael Bruce remained their full time as colonels of the Guards, thereby losing their purchase money, but General Hardinge preferred taking his money and an Indian command. Hence he feels, or has been made to feel, that his appointment to the Home District would not only be unfair, but also unpopular. He now returns to India. It has been decided by the authorities to arm the Life Guards with lances.—Vanity Fair.

INDIA AT THE PICTURE GALLERIES.—Mr. George Landseer has just opened the Gallery, 148, New Bond-street, with an exhibition of his Indian drawings and sketches, with trophies recently made in India. This apropos collection bids fair to become popular.—Mr. W. Simpson, the artist sent out to India by one of the illustrated papers to pictorially describe the tour of the Prince in India, exhibits at Burlington Gallery, 191, Piccadilly, a collection of special sketches made, as he progressed in the retinue of the Prince, from Bombay to the Punjab. The exhibition affords an hour or two's lounge of the most agreeable character.—We have already noticed Mr. Hamilton's dioramic views of the Overland Route to India, painted by Mr. Telbin and the late Mr. Weedon. There has now been added some splendid scenes of the Prince of Wales in India. Among the Indian views are two to which prominence is deservedly given by the exhibitor; these create a lively interest in the spectator; they are representations of a tiger-hunt, in which the Duke of Edinburgh took part on the plains of Bengal. They were painted from drawings in the private collection of his Royal Highness at Clarence House. The scenes are full of life and action.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The annual general meeting of the Madras Railway Company was held on June 13; Colonel J. T. Smith, R.E., the Chairman, presiding. The report was taken as read. The Chairman referred in his speech to the report of the Commissioners appointed by the Government of India to inquire into the cause of the falling off in the traffic on the railway, &c. This report, he said, had come before the directors, who had arrived at the conclusion that very great pains had been taken by the Commissioners, who had made several most valuable suggestions. One was a proposition for constructing a branch from their main line. The board said they would guarantee to construct it, providing the Government guaranteed the interest, but at the same time they expressed their preference to a diversion of their line from Sholingur, to pass through the town. The cost of the diversion—the proposal for carrying out which was now before the Government—would be about one-fifth more than the other plan, but he was convinced that it would be far more advantageous to the company. The falling off in their net profits was entirely owing to the increased working and maintenance expenses, the causes of which were explained in the report of Mr. Elwin, the agent and manager of the Indian establisment. As to the telegraph, they had received a proposal from the Government of India for a transfer of their telegraph lines, and as the terms of purchase offered were reasonable the board had expressed their willingness to make the desired arrangement. The terms were that the Government should pay them the whole capital cost at which the lines, &c., stood in the company's books, renting to the company a certain number of wires. Mr. W. H. Crake, the deputy-chairman, seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The ordinary general meeting of this company was held on June 14, Mr. W. Dent, the chairman, presiding. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said at the first glance it did not appear quite as satisfactory as could be wished—he meant in respect to the working expenses, which were in excess of the figure at which all interested would wish to see them. The high rate, however, was entirely owing to the revenue having to bear in the past half-year a very considerable portion of the cost of maintenance, which in the two previous half-years was charged to capital. The opening of the Cawnpore bridge, as the agent pointed out, was the principal event of the half-year, and the company was to be congratulated on its successful completion and opening. They had now two bridges over the Ganges—the one just alluded to, and the other on the Chundowsee and Allyghur branch; and at both points they served as a means of communication with the East Indian Railway. The extension of the railway from Moradabad in the north, to join the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, had been under consideration for several years. Two alternative surveys had been completed, and the agent had very lately, in a very able and exhaustive letter to the Government, pressed that an early decision might be come to; and the board had likewise addressed a letter, to the same purpose, to the Secretary of State, and they hoped the question would be settled without further delay. The proposed extension, about 100 miles long, would be likely to receive much traffic. The line would be most valuable to the Government, and it would afford them a second approach to the frontier in case of war or of local disturbance. Major-General Beadle, R.E., a director, seconded the adoption of the report, and it was carried unanimously.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, June 12.—APPELLATE JURISDICTION BILL.—Mr. DISRAELI, in moving the second reading of the Appellate Jurisdiction Bill, which has come down from the Lords, said with regard to this Bill it proceeded on four principles—that the ultimate Court of Appeal should be identical for the three Kingdoms, that it should be an adequate Court of Appeal, that it should be continuous and economical. The appellate functions of the House of Lords would be exercised by the Lord Chancellor, the ex-Lord Chancellors, Peers who had held high judicial office, with two salaried Lords Ordinary of Appeal with the rank of Baron. These two Lords would be increased to four gradually as the present salaried Judges of the Judicial Committee died; and they would sit both in the House of Lords and the Privy Council. There would also be two Judges added to the Intermediate Court of Appeal. He recommended the Bill to the House as a Court of ultimate Appeal.—The references to Indian interests made in the course of the short debate which preceded the second reading emanated from Sir GEORGE BOWYER, (who fully approved of the Bill) and Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL (who advised the transfer to the Court of Appeal of two of the Judges of the Privy Council).—Sir GEORGE BOWYER said he objected to mixing up the House of Lords with the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The Judicial Committee was a most satisfactory tribunal, having the confidence both of India and the Colonies. It had very seldom to administer the English law, but it administered the Mohammedan and the Hindoo law, together with the peculiar statutes which prevailed in India; it also administered the French and Dutch Civil Law, which prevailed in the Colonies. It was peculiarly fitted for those functions, as it had among its members Indian and Colonial ex-Judges who were versed in those peculiar branches of law. Those learned persons were required for the Judicial Committee to perform their duties to the Colonies and to India, which had not been consulted in that matter, while, on the other hand, the men who were experienced in Mohammedan and Hindoo law and in French and Dutch Civil Law would be perfectly useless in the House of Lords, which had never to decide any of those questions that belonged peculiarly to the Judicial Committee.—Sir G. CAMPBELL approved the Bill both from an Indian and a Scotch point of view. The only complaint he had to make was that it did not take immediate effect. It seemed to him public interests were being sacrified to personal considerations.—The Bill was then read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 15.—THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Lord G. HAMILTON, in reply to Mr. LEITH, stated that when the report of the committee on the depreciation of silver was issued he might be able to state when the Indian Budget would be introduced.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, June 16.—DEATH OF MR. MARGARY.—Mr. BOURKE, replying to Sir. G. CAMPBELL, was understood to say that the report of the missions into the circumstances of the death of the late Mr. Margary, in China, had not been received.

FUGITIVE SLAVE COMMISSION.—Sir W. HARCOURT wished to know when the report of the Royal Commission on the Slave question would be in the hands of members; it was several days since it appeared in the newspapers.—Mr. CROSS stated that the report was laid on the table in both Houses on Tuesday, and how it got into the papers he had no idea. He would give instructions that it should be printed and circulated as early as possible.

THE GOVERNOR.—The Duke of Buckingham has, it said, already discovered that Utakamand is not Elysium. The climate of Madras agreed with him much better than does the rarefied Nilgiri air, and he will beat a retreat as soon as the season admits of his paying the western coast a visit.

THE KHOTES.—A friend from Ratnagiri writes to us :—"After a world of trouble and anxiety to the Khotes of Ratnagiri and Government regarding the rights of the former as Khotes, the latter have at last issued a very carefully worded resolution, dated 24th April, 1876, fixing the relations of the State, the Khotes, and the tenants. Although the Khotes have not got all that they claimed, still we think that the concessions made to them are very acceptable. Thus it is decided that the Jama of a Khoti village shall be fixed at from 15 per cent. to 25 per cent. less than the full survey assessment of all the lands comprised in it ; that when the existing assessments are found to be too high they should be corrected ; that the tenants should pay the Khote the rent in kind, not in money ; that the produce rent to be levied by the Khote on the Khote 'nisbat' lands should be one-half the gross produce for rice and one-third for warkas ; that the customary or stipulated rent is exclusive of all cesses of every description ; that the Khote is entitled to assistance free of payment in the recovery of his rents. But it is also decided that those tenants of Khote 'nisbat' lands who have been cultivators in the village for twenty years prior to the passing of Act I. of 1863 are to be treated as occupancy tenants ; that twelve years Government management of a Khoti village deprives the Khote of his right to re-entry." We have not yet seen the resolution, neither do we see it published in the Government Gazette. May we inquire why such an important resolution has not yet been made public?—Native Opinion.

MAIL ROBBERIES.—"Shahabad appears to be the nest of mail robbers," says the Behar Herald. "These bandits, who belong mostly to the Ahir or Gowala caste, wander far from their home, and seem to be particularly afflicted with pity for the forlorn mail runner, whom they seek every opportunity of relieving of his burden, the mail bag. The two successive robberies committed near Sili, on the road between Burrakar and Maunbhoom, about the beginning of the past year, as also the plundering of the mail cart on the night of the 7th March, 1875, near Titalia, on the road to Darjeeling, have been traced home to four men, namely, Bisheshar Ahir, Ramdin Ahir, Ugra Ahir, and one Ugra Tiwari, the last of whom was a police constable. The clue to the thieves was obtained by four full notes for Rs. 50, which had been lost on one of the above occasions, having been found in the possession of one Timal Ram, of Chawgain, Shahabad, who was convicted of dealing in stolen property, and sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment. The Shahabad police, having thus got the scent, proceeded with the inquiry, and their exertions resulted in the recovery of a quantity of half notes from the persons named above. A wealthy man of Shahabad, named by Bisheshur Ahir, is supposed to be implicated in the system of robbery, which appears to have been pursued for some time past. He was arrested, but we do not know whether sufficient evidence of guilt as receiver of stolen property was found for the institution of criminal proceedings against him."

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 2; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, May 31; Calcutta, May 30. These dates, which are only four days later than those given in our last issue, show the alteration in the time of departure caused by the Monsoon, which broke over Bombay in the middle of this month.

THE Indian papers are as nearly newsless as the hot weather and the short interval between two mails would have conspired to render them. What of excitement stirred the local public was due to the tidings lately received out there from Turkey, regarding the dethronement of Sultan Abdul Aziz. In the opinion of the Bombay Gazette, which on this point guesses quite as near the mark as the wisest of our own dailies, "the change will probably have the effect of bringing affairs more speedily to a crisis. It cannot have been effected without confusion, and of this confusion the Servians and Montenegrins, if not the Russians, are certain to take vigorous advantage. We should not wonder if before two months are over the Danubian Principalities and the States on the Adriatic littoral had shaken off all connection with Turkey; and as for the assembled German and English fleets in Besika Bay, it seems clear to us that they will soon be called upon to do something more energetic than remaining stationary where they are. The revolution which has occurred is only a nominal change at the best, and it would be as reasonable to suppose that Turkey will benefit by it as to believe that a demoralised and insolvent firm could weather its difficulties and glide into the smooth waters of calm and prosperity by putting one member of the firm at the head of affairs instead of another."

THE season at Simla is described as being unusually gay. Lord Lytton had quite recovered from his fit of illness, and was pleasing every one by the way he dispensed the hospitalities of Government House. There had been picnics, flower shows, rinking, and badminton without end, but no legislation as yet. It appears uncertain indeed when the Legislative Council will begin. There was a rumour that the Calcutta season will be a late, and therefore a short, one, owing to a trip which cannot take less than two months, all along the frontier. If the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief carry out the intention laid to their charge, it will be a grand opportunity for speculative talk both here and in India. Sir Philip Wodehouse is at Mahableshwar, which is very hot and dull this year. The Duke of Buckingham has had a grand celebration of the birthday of the Empress of India at Utakamand. The station is very full, amusements abundant and the climate delightful.

THE latest reports of the cholera epidemic in Kashmir as received at Rawal Pindi were still far from comforting. The quarantine between Kashmir and Marri affected only natives and such Europeans as showed symptoms of the disease. Eight distinct cholera camps had been formed at Kohalla, on the river Jhilam, twenty-two miles from Marri. A European medical officer had been placed in charge, and it was hoped that the quarantine would prove effective.

IN one of the Rajputana States administered by a well-known native minister, a special commission of three members has, we are told, been appointed to investigate certain charges of bribery and corruption laid against some of the highest officials in the State. The Special Commission have already begun work, and the whole city was greatly excited about the matter.

CHOLERA was decreasing in British Burmah, but it had broken out in Faizabad and some other parts of Oudh.

THE great meeting at Calcutta to discuss the alleged excess of outlay on the late famine in Bengal was to have taken place on Monday, May 29, but it was found advisable to postpone it. It appears that there was a native combination to attend the meeting, and swamp the voters for the resolutions; but whether this had anything to do with the postponement we are not informed.

MR. C. B. SAUNDERS, late Resident at Haidarabad, arrived by the overland mail steamer at Bombay on May 30. He proceeded to Bangalore on the 1st June to take up his appointment as Chief Commissioner of Mysor and Kurg.

WE are sorry to hear that the Rajah of Vizianagram was by last accounts lying dangerously ill at Vizianagram, with little chance of his recovery. The exertion of travelling to and fro in order to pay his respects to the Prince of Wales appears to have overtaxed his strength.

COLONEL HALL, Deputy Commissioner of Amritsar, is mentioned as the successor to Colonel MacMahon, Deputy Commissioner of Simla. Colonel MacMahon goes as officiating Commissioner of Hissar.

IT is stated that Dr. Hunter, Principal of the Grant Medical College, Dr. Lumsdaine, and Dr. Beatty, are the new Deputy Surgeons-General. Dr. Vandyke Carter is likely to be made Principal of Grant College in place of Dr. Hunter. Doctors Wiehe, Davey, Murray, Sylvester, and Brown will, in all probability, retire.

THE rumour which made its way out from England that Captain Richard Burton would be posted at Kabul as our Political Agent has been rejected in India as utterly without foundation. Nor does there seem to be any reason to believe that the Indian Government means to take any decided step, at least for the present, towards establishing a British Agent at Kabul.

FROM a tabular statement appended to the Wynad Planters' memorial, we gather that the extent of coffee cultivation in Wynad has increased from 7,275 acres in 1860-61 to 32,180 acres in 1874-75. The total value of the land under coffee is £965,430, and the amount expended annually in coolies' wages alone is £182,500; other expenses in connection with cultivation, carriage, and shipment of crops, amounting to £100,000. There appear to be altogether 117 European planters, 16 of whom are in North Wynad, 74 in South Wynad, and 27 in South-east Wynad. From another statement accompanying the same memorial, we find that the total revenue of the Wynad Taluk from all sources has increased from Rs. 2,00,886 in 1871-72 to Rs. 2,31,971 in 1874-75.

IN every age and nation the oddest possible remedies have been applied with perfect good faith to this or that form of disease. We are not surprised, therefore, to learn that the Native Public Opinion of Madras believes in the efficacy of a remedy lately devised for the "new" disease that is said to be just now causing a panic among the natives in Madras. Its readers are informed that—"We have ourselves ordered a supply of this sovereign remedy to be tried on ourselves if need be." It consists, according to our contemporary, of "goat's dung dried and powdered, and taken in small doses in a cup of water."

IT appears from a Bengal paper that a grand scheme for developing the extensive traffic between Eastern and North-Eastern Bengal and Calcutta, by means of canals, is "under consideration." It is proposed not only to save time by shortening the distance of the present roundabout traffic route by the Sundarbans, but also to improve the drainage of extensive "bhils," and the supply of fresh water into the Sundarbans, besides increasing the accommodation for local traffic by a branch canal through the Jessore district, and above all, by utilising the Calcutta Circular Canal and Tolly's Nullah as high level basins for the proposed canal. Four different routes have been proposed for one same purpose, namely to make for the mouth of the Megna, where the bulk of traffic at the East is met. The first of these routes, as proposed by Sir R. Temple, runs direct from Cossipore to Madaripur, and thence to the mouth of the Megna, by means of the existing natural channels. The second runs from Calcutta to Khulna, thence by the Attarabanka to the Madhumatti, and thence to the mouth of the Megna. The third also runs to Khulna then utilises the Bhairab between Alipur, Hat and Kachua, whence a canal would go to Barisal or Phultila Gang, while the third existing river routes would reach the mouth of the Megna. The fourth route is the same as the third, as far as the Madhumatti, thence by improving existing channels it would reach to Barisal, and finally the mouth of the Megna by existing river routes. The length of the first route is 158 miles, of the second 169 miles, of the third 191 miles, and of the fourth 216 miles. The length of the existing route for country boats is 263 miles, and for steamers from 460 to 500 miles. These new routes are now being surveyed, and we trust that one of them will soon be carried out.

FROM the Trade and Navigation Returns for British India for the twelvemonth ending the 31st March last we gather that the past year's trade of the country, both exports and imports, has been satisfactory. Under each head there is an increase in value. Taking the single month of March last, the new official year begins with the total of imports valued at Rs. 4,04,34,167, or about £4,000,000 sterling, as compared with Rs. 3,66,76,524 in 1875 and Rs. 3,29,93,023 in 1874. The total value of the exports for the same amounted to Rs. 6,06,03,454 as compared with Rs. 6,74,36,548 in 1875 and Rs. 6,53,85,773 in 1874. There is thus an increase in the value of imports for the month of March last of 37 lakhs of rupees over the previous year, and nearly 70 lakhs of rupees over the month of March in 1874. On the other hand, the total value of exports for the month of March this year has fallen off 68 lakhs of rupees compared with 1875 and 47 lakhs compared with 1874. On the whole year we find the total value of imports stated at Rs. 38,51,50,572, as compared with Rs. 35,96,90,745 in 1875, and Rs. 32,59,36,088 in 1874, or an increase of about 2½ millions over 1875, and nearly 6 millions over 1874. The total value of exports also shows an increase, the figures being Rs. 58,04,15,069 compared with Rs. 56,31,22,498 in 1875 and Rs. 54,96,07,780 in 1874, or an increase of 1 2-3 millions over 1875 and three millions over 1874. The imports of treasure last year were Rs 5,30,00,724; in 1875 they were Rs. 8,14,10,466; in 1874 they were Rs. 5,79,25,326. The exports for the same periods were Rs. 2,20,02,363, Rs. 1,62,53,091, and Rs. 1,91,40,711. The total value of the imports which passed through the Suez Canal is put down at Rs. 29,55,94,937, and of the exports Rs 22,18,81,075, so that about three-fourths of the import trade passed through the Suez Canal, while only about three-eights of the export trade went by that route.

THE export trade in linseed to the United Kingdom increased in value from Rs. 78,26,809 in 1874-75 to Rs. 2,45,26,655 in the following year; but the same trade to the United States fell in the same period from Rs. 1,00,97,236 to Rs. 67,97,043. The grand total value of the trade in linseed last year was nearly double that of the previous year. The trade in rape-seed to the United Kingdom rose in value from Rs. 35,93,241 in 1874-75 to Rs. 74,88,265 in 1875-76, and the value of the entire export of rape and poppy seeds, which are given together, rose from Rs. 37,23,429 in 1874-75 to Rs. 1,08,48,208 in 1875-76. The trade in wheat to the United Kingdom for 1875-76 was valued at Rs. 73,90,268, compared with Rs. 17,95,174 in 1875 and Rs. 64,33,150 in 1874. The total value of the trade in wheat was last year Rs. 90,10,255; in 1875 it was Rs. 40,04,352, and in 1874 it was Rs. 82,76,064. The wheat trade shows great fluctuations in value, but the trade in seeds shows a very remarkable increase; and it is likely that these two branches of trade will in time become the most important items in the exports of India. The number of vessels employed in the carrying trade last year was 5,347, making up 2,674,122 tons, compared with 5,241 vessels of 2,280,361 tons in 1874-75, and 5,600 in 1873-74 of 2,253,910 tons burden. The total import duty paid last year amounted to Rs. 4,25,02,322, and the export duty to Rs. 71,27,435.

A PAPER is being circulated among covenanted civilians in Lower Bengal, setting forth the grievances of the junior civilians there, and suggesting a remedy. For the seniors and the more junior of the juniors the system of promotion appears to work well, but not so for officers of over seven and under twelve or thirteen years' standing. There are about sixty of these officers who, for the most part, fill the office of joint magistrate of head-quarter stations; have to live in comparatively expensive stations, and keep up "a certain position." They have, moreover, no emoluments besides their salaries. To be a joint-magistrate on Rs. 900 a month after seven or eight years' service would be deemed a boon indeed by a North-West Civilian, however hard it seems to those of Lower Bengal. The remedy suggested in the paper under notice is that of paying according to length of service. There are objections to such a system, but, as the Pioneer puts it, "The present system of having a certain number of appointments to which men are promoted by seniority is just as much open to objection on the score that it does not reward merit as the paying according to the length of service scheme. It has besides the great disadvantage that if the service is recruited too largely in one or two years it works most unjustly. A man who comes before the over-recruitment began gets his joint-magistracy, say, at seven years' standing, while he who comes behind the block, though, perhaps, only two years junior, does not get promotion to that grade till he is of twelve or fourteen years' standing." It is accordingly proposed by the authors of the paper to pay £480 a year for the first year, £540 for the second, £600 for the third and fourth, £840 for the fifth and sixth, £960 for the seventh and eighth, £1,080 for the ninth and tenth, and £1,200 till the grade of collector or judge is reached at from twelve to fourteen years' standing.

IT is said in India that Colonel Robinson, the Director General of Telegraphs, who is now at home, is engaged in arranging the terms on which Government will take over the railway telegraphs. The principle of this proceeding has long been accepted by Government, and no one can doubt the advantage of bringing all the telegraph lines in India under one system of control. We believe that the telegraphs of one or two lines are already in the hands of the Government; but be that as it may, Colonel Robinson has found means to effect a good understanding with all the companies. The East India Railway is said to have given in its adhesion to the transfer.

Digitized by Google

The negotiation of the terms on which this is to be made is now going on, but it presents no real difficulties. Fortunately, as the Pioneer remarks, "there is no need to come on the financial department for any assistance in the matter. No sums of money will pass, and the purchase is merely a question of account between the companies and the Government. Nor will any serious reorganisation of the Telegraph Department be rendered necessary by the impending expansion of its functions. The existing personnel of the lines will pass under the authority of the Government, most likely without any serious modification."

THE Mayo College at Ajmir is attracting aristocratic students in a very satisfactory way. The first of Major St. John's pupils, the Maharao Rajah of Alwar, went into residence at Ajmir in October last. During the following month seven more were sent by the Maharajah of Jaipur, and six came from Jodhpur, the younger brother of the Maharajah being among the number. At present, there are twenty-three pupils at the College, and there are reasons for hoping that the Udaipúr State will shortly send a further reinforcement. As yet there appears to be no enthusiasm for the college among the Chiefs of Rajputana generally, and a certain amount of benevolent pressure has no doubt been brought to bear on the fathers of the boys already enrolled, in order to procure their attendance. But the object in view, the general elevation in character and intelligence of the future generation of Chiefs throughout a great province, would amply justify the exercise of some little influence from above. The Mayo College has now become a solid reality. The education of the youths is rather backward, some of them being unable to read or write their own language, to say nothing of ours; while their taste for active games is limited, we hear, to lawn tennis played only in the early morning, or just before sundown.

A GENERAL order just issued in India provides that "field firing" is to take place at all stations where suitable ground can be obtained, in lieu of the ordinary "range skirmishing," as hitherto practised by the drilled soldiers of European and native regiments.

THE total number of bighas under poppy cultivation in the Bahar and Benares Opium Agencies during the year 1874-75 was 869,666, which yielded an out turn of 98,178 maunds of opium. An opium bigha contains 3,015 square yards, or about five-eighths of an acre. In Bahar, 510,313 bighas, under cultivation in the year under review, gave an out-turn of 58,977 maunds, as against 60,861 maunds from 410,278 bighas under cultivation in 1873-74. In Benares 359,353 bighas yielded 39,201 maunds in 1874-75, as against 43,000 maunds from 328,654 bighas in the previous year. It will thus be observed that in the past year, with an increase of cultivation, there was a decrease of out turn in both agencies. In the case of the Benares crop this is partly explained by the damage done by violent hailstorms in February; but no particular cause is assigned for the falling off in the Bahar yield. The experimental sowings during the season were confined to seed selected by the Curator of the Botanical Gardens. In seven instances only out of twenty-two was the produce of seed supplied by Mr. Scott larger than the yield from the ordinary seed. During the present season it is hoped that the experiments will be more carefully conducted. The experiments in Persian and Malwa seeds not proving successful, have been discontinued. The interchange of seeds between the sister agencies, and in the case of Bahar a further interchange between the districts lying north and south of the Ganges, although at first successful, has not answered expectations, and Government has directed the abandonment of Benares seed for Bahar. The services rendered to Government by Mr. R. Abercrombie, the late Bahar Agent, and by Mr. C. F. Carnac, the late Benares Agent, are suitably acknowledged in the report from which we have quoted. Dr. Sheppard's work in connection with the preparation of morphia and narcotine at the Ghazipuri factory is also commended. "Dr. Sheppard's labours," we are told, "have at last been attended with complete success, and there is now a steady demand for morphia from all three presidencies."

SUFFICIENT proof of the inefficacy of Professor Halford's great ammonia remedy for snake-bites comes to us from Melbourne itself. A number of medical men in that city went quietly to work the other day, and procured a good many different specimens of Australian snakes. In some cases dogs were bitten directly by the snakes, and ammonia applied. The fangs were extracted in other cases, and the whole poison infused into the dogs so as to insure a perfectly fair trial. The ammonia failed, although immediately applied, and the dogs died all round, except in cases where the snake itself proved to be almost harmless. The verdict of the conclave was against the Professor, and supported the view of the best authorities in India.

IT is stated in a telegram of yesterday's date from Bombay, that although the result of Mr. Grosvenor's mission has not been allowed to transpire, it is surmised that his report will strongly implicate the Chinese General Seetahi, who was degraded by Imperial decree, and sent to take his trial at Yunnanfou in February last.

DEATH OF LORD SANDHURST.

It is with much regret that we have to announce the death, after a few days' illness, of General Lord Sandhurst, colonel of the 38th Regiment, which took place at his residence in Grosvenor-square yesterday (Friday) afternoon, between four and five o'clock. The malady that terminated thus fatally was congestion of the lungs, and his lordship may be said to have died comparatively in the prime of life, having only completed his fifty-seventh year on Wednesday last.

The deceased, Wm. Rose Mansfield, Baron Sandhurst, was the fifth son of the late Mr. John Mansfield, of Diggeswell House Herts, by his wife, Mary Buchanan, daughter of General Samuel Smith, of Baltimore, Maryland, U.S. He was grandson of Sir James Mansfield, formerly Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. He was educated at the Military College at Sandhurst, and on leaving there, in November, 1835, entered the 53rd Regiment, with which he served several years in India, being in the Sutlej Campaign in 1846, while he was present at the battles of Buddiwal, Aliwal, and Sobraon, acting as aide-de-camp to the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Hugh (afterwards Viscount) Gough, at the last named, and for which he received the medal and clasps. Lord Sandhurst commanded the 53rd in the Punjab campaign in 1849, and was present at the battle of Goojerat, for which he also received the medal with clasp. On the outbreak of the Indian mutiny he was ordered to India, and left within a few hours' notice to take an important part in the active operations which followed. He was appointed chief of the staff of Sir Colin Campbell, afterwards Lord Clyde, with the local rank of major-general in the East Indies, and served throughout the war in 1857-58-59 in that capacity. His Lordship greatly distinguished himself at the relief of Lucknow, and was mentioned in the highest terms of praise by Sir Colin Campbell in his despatches, and for his gallant services on that occasion was made a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath. In May following he was promoted to the rank of major-general in the army as a further recognition of his valuable services as chief of the staff. He was present at the battle of Cawnpore, where he was slightly wounded; the advance on Futteghur, and the action on the Kalee Nuddee; the siege of Lucknow, the campaign of Rohilkund, battle of Bareilly, &c. Lord Sandhurst also served in the campaign in Oude in 1858-59, including the actions of Doondea Khaira, and the Trans Gogra campaign, resulting in the complete subjugation of the Province of Oude. For his military services in India he received in April, 1859, the thanks of both Houses of Parliament "for the eminent skill, courage, and perseverance displayed by him during the military operations, by which the insurrection of India was effectually suppressed." Lord Sandhurst returned home, and was appointed in August, 1870, successor to General Lord Strathnairn, G.C.B., General Commanding the Forces in Ireland, which appointment he relinquished in August last year. He was raised to the peerage in March, 1871. His lordship married, Nov. 2, 1854, Margaret, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Robert Fellowes, of Shotesham Park, Norfolk, by whom he leaves surviving issue four sons and a daughter. His eldest son, Hon. William Mansfield, born August 21, 1855, succeeds his father in the peerage.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, June 24, 1876.

THE INDIAN ASPECT OF THE DEPRECIATION IN THE SILVER CURRENCY.

IT is only a few years ago that the last panic cry was raised in the monetary world; and that was "the scarcity of silver." The new financial shibboleth proclaims a depreciation of the silver currency, and a fall in value so great and serious as seriously to affect the exchanges and financial systems of the world.* Long experience has proved how prone and susceptible the money market is to currency fluctuations; and we know that on frequent occasions the Government has had to come to the aid of the Bank of England with Parliamentary amendments of the Bank Charter Act, of which Peel's Act of 1844 was the most remarkable for the elasticity it gave to the Bank issues of the period. Whether we are to attribute the recent extraordinary fall of silver in the markets to financial connivance in maintaining a highly artificial system of exchanges, or to the ordinary working of the natural laws of currency we are not practical economists enough to pronounce a dictum on. But we have a right to assume, at any rate, that the enormous amount of the French tribute paid into the Berlin Exchequer—as the result of the Franco-German war—representing, as those payments did, the French silver currency, was in itself well calculated to produce a disturbance in the silver circulations of those countries as well as all others. But it will be thought it really requires only a fair application of monetary laws to meet the present "silver" difficulty with an equipoise and a satisfactory solution.

In what way the Indian money market is affected by the silver glut it will now be our task to set forth.

The "Indian Budget" for 1876-77, published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 31st March last, points to the discovery of the depreciation of silver as a matter that must perforce affect financial calculations all through, in regard to Indian interests. We propose, therefore, to state the question as viewed by the Indian Finance Minister, Sir William Muir, in preparing his latest financial statement. An examination of the figures of the Indian Budget for 1876-77 enables us to discern the extent of an evil which has for some time been foreshadowed, however obscurely, in the absence of the proper statistics to guide us in judging how far the "block" established in European currency must be participated in by India.

A simple arrangement of the general figures of Sir William Muir's statement, and the laying down of as clear an explanation as it will permit of, may afford some general idea of the "difficulty" that has confronted and confounded the Indian financial system.

The subjoined extract is from the Economist:—

The revenue, expenditure and deficit of the three years with which the Indian Financial Statement deals are as follows:—

	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Deficit.
1874-5 (actual)...	... £50,570,000	... £54,501,000	... £3,931,000
1875-6 (regular estimate)	50,991,000	... 53,887,000	... 2,896,000
1876-7 (budget estimate)	50,480,000	... 54,095,000	... 3,515,800

And the explanation we have to refer to as showing how the depreciation of silver operates is the following, afforded by a financial contemporary whose words we shall here use. Analysing the Indian Budget the Economist (May 27) observes:—

That while the expenditure on public works extraordinary is estimated as about half a million less in the current year than in 1874-75, and although there was in 1874-75 an expenditure of £2,238,000 on famine relief, which is now wanting, yet the estimated deficit in 1876-77 is pretty much the same as it was in 1874-75. There is no famine now, but the finances of India show as great an annual deficit as ever; and to a large extent this must be due to the increased loss by exchange, which operates as prejudicially as a famine. This loss is now estimated at £2,322,000.

The silver depreciation does not account for the whole sum by which Indian finance is to the bad, as compared with 1874-75 (leaving out the finance expenditure), there being still a difference of about £800,000 to be accounted for, but the depreciation is manifestly the main evil.

Comparing the Budget estimate of 1876-77 with the regular estimate for 1875-76 our financial contemporary discovers a similar result, observing that the figures are conclusive as to the great effect of the fall of silver.

This fall (the Economist points out) clearly helps to make India as badly off in 1876-77 without a famine as it was in 1874-75 with a famine, and worse off by over a million than in 1875-76, although there was then a famine expenditure of over £600,000, and the increase of loss by exchange had already begun to be felt.

The writer, in reviewing the general accounts of the last Indian Budget, approves of one marked feature in it; he approves, namely, of the care that has been used to keep down general expenditure and the diminished appropriations for public works. That the chronic evil plight into which Indian finance has got by the fall in silver should be thus met by a tight rein upon the expenditure, inspires confidence that the financial system will be extricated from its present monetary handicapping.

The Economist complains that it is not altogether the fall in silver that produces the Indian deficits, but a much more important item—Army expenditure—which, however justifiable, ought not to be "slurred over," as the writer criticising Sir William Muir's estimates considers it is, and most unduly so, by the Indian financier.

* The largest coinages of silver were in 1854 (£2,432,116), and in 1862 (£1,035,412). The coinage of silver fell in 1869 to the small amount of £76,428.

THE LATE INDIAN NAVY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Indian correspondent of the Times has telegraphed that the Supreme Government have sent home a report on the unsatisfactory state of the Indian Marine, and proposes the re-establishment of a local navy. But to re-constitute an Indian Navy will be no easy task, and one that will require at least a generation to effect. The officers must acquire the language and a knowledge of the feelings and prejudices of the races among whom their lot will be cast. The old Indian Navy could also point to a glorious roll of service, and their traditions acted as an incentive to the young officers to emulate the example of their predecessors. Esprit de corps and traditions count for something in the profession of arms; they are plants of slow growth, but a service can scarcely be complete without them.

In 1613, nearly half a century before the existence of the Guards or any regiment of the line, the Indian Marine was struggling victoriously with the Portuguese Navy for the dominion of the Eastern Seas, and afforded protection to the infant commerce of the East India Company, who never would have so ill requited their faithful protectors as to abolish the service. The following are the principal achievements of the service:—The capture of Ormaz; the operations against Kharrack and for the relief of Bussorah; the capture of Surat; the extermination of the power of the pirate chief

Angria; the actions fought with the Mahratta fleets and French privateers, when the small Company's cruisers never lowered their flag save to greatly superior force; the two expeditions of 1809 and 1819 against the Joasmi pirates; the expedition to Mauritius and Java; the two China wars; the Persian war; the two Burmese wars; and finally the Indian Mutiny, where they had no less than 1,800 officers and men engaged, and of which General Sir George Jacob has written in the following terms:—"The services of the Indian Navy during the rebellion are beyond praise. They deserved a better reward than its abolition after the danger had passed away."

This, Sir, is only a brief summary of the services achieved by the Indian Navy during the two and a half centuries of its existence, and their surveys of the Eastern Seas are not less commendable and extensive. Wherever they served, like their brethren of the Royal Navy, whose example it was their proudest boast to follow, they did their duty, and yet their existence was cut short by the stroke of the pen of a Secretary of State. Probably Lord Halifax has learnt to look back with regret to this act, one of the last of his long administration of Indian affairs.—Yours faithfully,

C. R. LOW, Lieut. late Indian Navy.

INDIA AND THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The IndianDaily News remarks that the belief is very general in India that the charm of the Prince's genial manner won over the native chiefs and gentlemen who came into contact with him in a remarkable way, and it believes that this belief rather under-estimates than exaggerates the fact. But it seems to be mischievous, or at all events in questionable prudence, to treat the personal conquests thus made over native hearts as lasting or valuable: and it is doubtful whether the political feint of flashing about an imaginary trust in native loyalty compensates all Englishmen sufficiently for the loss of respect which they suffer in native estimation, whenever Englishmen attach undue importance to native sentimental outbursts. Englishmen are in India by the right of conquest, and whatever is bitter in such an occupation will probably last so long as race antipathies and religious prejudices separate Englishmen from natives. If the influences which led to the mutinies of 1857 were to recur to-morrow no one in his senses can believe that they would be counteracted by the outbreaks of sentiment which followed the Prince's interviews with native chiefs. And if this be the case, what is the precise value of the loyalty of which so much parade is made; and is the parade itself calculated to do any good? Either the Prince's visit had so completely charmed native princes, and through them all native society, that no grievance, however bitter, could ever again make them disloyal, or the loyalty of which his Royal Highness was pleased to speak is the merest moonshine. It is an open question whether moonshine is ever of much use in adjusting the graver complications of life; and the English tenure of India is made up almost exclusively of complications of this kind. But his Royal Highness's most serious error was contained in his last remarks. In concluding his speech, "he made a complimentary allusion to the native troops." Now, it may seem like carping to take exception to so seemingly innocent a remark, and it may perhaps be said that we have no right to infer from the meagre wording of the telegram that any very extravagant praise was bestowed on the native army. But a demi-official discussion that has already taken place in India has prepared us for the particular class of views about the Indian Army with which efforts were made to impregnate the Prince of Wales in this country. We know, too, how with seemingly careless jealousy, picked troops were "accidentally" thrown together about Delhi at the time when the Royal visitor went to the camp, and what care was taken to leave on his mind the idea that the troops which he saw were fair specimens of the entire Indian army. And if the Prince, on his return to England, does or says anything to spread this mischievously false notion of the Indian army in England, at a time when that army is publicly referred to as half-demoralised and is said to be falling to pieces, and if his observations should in any way tend to the postponement of urgently needed reforms, his Royal Highness will have ill-requited the country for the pleasure which it is acknowledged to have given him.

RAILWAYS OR CANALS?

The Friend of India observes that General Cotton has been telling us for these twenty years past, and is telling us in more earnest tones every year, that we may connect the whole North-West of India by navigable canals with Calcutta, that will carry any quantity of produce whatever at one-tenth of a penny per ton per mile; and that we may construct these canals for one-tenth of the sum per mile that we have spent over our lines of railway. And while there is no one who says "We cannot," there is no one that has ears to hear. We are like deaf adders to it all. He tells us that we may make the rivers navigable at all seasons, and connect the whole of India therewith by canals, covering the country with waterway, and may do it all at the most trifling cost; while we work on like moles at our railways, and doubtful projects of irrigation, pulling up every now and again to take "Morrison's pill," and stop our public works expenditure. And the mercantile community is as deaf to it all as the Government; painfully labouring to bring down wheat to Calcutta at a cost of carriage that precludes its entering the unlimited market for it in Europe. We know that wheat is selling at this moment, 180 miles on the Calcutta side of Nagpore, at six shillings the quarter, and the height of our statemanship is "Morrison's pill." And no remonstrance is made, no step taken, to rouse the Government from its profound sleep and profound delusions. It is of no use to tell the State what other lands are doing; that men are everywhere waking up to the fact that railways cannot carry raw produce at the required rates; and that the improvement of their water communications is what other Governments are earnestly bent upon accomplishing. We have slept over it all for a generation of years, and shall wake up to it probably by the year 1900. We would not have the light railways stopped for a moment, but, instead of "Morrison's pill," would press on the work of cheap communications with all our might.

THE CIVIL SERVICE OF THE FUTURE.

The Pioneer remarks that the Indian Civil Service, as at present constituted, owes its origin to Lord Cornwallis. From the very first it was stamped with class prejudice, not to say injustice. The principle was that, while all the lucrative appointments in all departments were given to covenanted Europeans, almost all the real work was done by Asiatics with little or no pay. It is actually a fact that at first the moonsifs were "left to find a subsistence in a small commission on the value of suits" (vide "Marshman," Vol. II. p. 38). How this system worked may be read in the pages of the Hon. F. Shore, himself a member of the privileged class. On the the other side, no doubt, was to be set what Marshman also records, that "many of the civilians were connected with some of the best families in England, and served to give a high tone to the service . . . . and their intercourse with the people was uniformly marked by kindness and consideration." All that state of things has passed away. The administrative Jack-of-all-trades, maintaining an aristocratic position of control, while the real work was done by the obsequious native experts, was a sort of ingenious Robinson Crusoe, making the best of his desolation, and happy in the assistance of many a willing Friday. No idea of any other division of labour had ever presented itself, in those days, except that by which the white man did the decorative duty, and the black man the practical, It was like Sydney Smith's image of the rector and his curate expressed by the embroidered bell-pull with the string behind. At the present day, though in a shorn and withered condition, the so-called Civil Service no doubt exists. But it has no longer the advantages of old. As the Commissioners write: "The brilliant pictures drawn of the attractions of an Indian career have lost something of their brightness . . . . At the same time the pecuniary value of an Indian appointment has been sensibly diminished; if it be true that while the salaries of civilians have remained the same, the price of commodities has greatly increased." This was written in 1874. Since then the discontent of the service has flamed out in the sight of all. Crowded in their own ranks, they have to undergo a fierce competition in various branches of employment with the experts who in each department have qualified by a long special training and apprenticeship. Nor, indeed, apart from class prejudice, is it reasonable that this should not be the case. It can scarcely be expected that a man who has successfully conducted the duties of an officer of the departments of finance, education, sanitary inspection, police, or what not, will sit quiet while he sees all his just expectations confiscated. Yet this is what happens so long as the lucrative posts, as fast as they become vacant, are bestowed upon outsiders, just because they happen to be either successful schoolboys or disappointed graduates of an university. Here, then, is the source of the whole of the extraordinary divergence of opinion to which we have referred. It is required of people that they should solve the insoluble, and show the way to produce, so to say, a breed of cattle that shall be good for all purposes at once. We want to have horses equally suitable for the plough, the hunting-field and the omnibus, though they are to receive all their training on the Newmarket racecourse. If, however, there be any truth in the doctrine of "Division of Labour," it will follow that each department ought to be recruited departmentally from candidates possessed of departmental knowledge and guaranteed departmental prospects. And the reason why no two people can agree as to an uniform training for a general civil staff corps with priority of claim to all well-paid appointments, will then perhaps be found to be that such a body ought not to exist any longer. There would probably be but little difficulty in applying this conclusion to practice. The members of the body now in employ might be distributed among the various departments according to taste and fitness. For the future each department would be separately recruited according to its own needs. Thus the lower judicial posts would be given in the first instance to pleaders and barristers, and the judges afterwards would be promoted from one grade to another. For administrative work, which must before long be detached from judicial duty, officers can be found in the staff corps and among the unconvenanted service, native and European. Financial appointments might be made from home by maintaining, so far, the present system of competition. The officers of the educational service ought, of course, to be taken from the high honour men of the universities. A committee could soon prepare a detailed scheme of this sort. Official routine may be, and in all probability will be, immensely scandalised at such a proposal.

STATION TALK.

PESHAWAR, May 21.—The statement advanced some few days back in one of the papers, to the effect that the aide-de-camp of the Governor-General, after a short interview with the Commissioner, had proceeded viâ Michni to Cabul, seems to be one of those numerous wild fancies in which frontier correspondents so often indulge. Anyhow, if the aide-de-camp had passed through Michni he must have done so with great secrecy and without any escort, as nothing is known of any British subject having passed our frontier at Michni. I have heard of a certain Arab, whose name I cannot recall, who, having a great desire to visit the hill country, determined on making an excursion there, and now finds himself in durance vile, and a ransom of some Rs. 4,000 put upon his head. Foolish Arab to leave his peaceful valley and the safe shelter of British territory; I am glad to see that some effort is being made to keep the bridges of boats down on the rivers between this and the Doaba forts, and the arrangements now in force on the Shubkuddar roads are extremely good. There has been a most marked change in the weather during the last ten days, and so cold has it been that every one has had to go back to winter clothing, and one night a fire was quite acceptable. Fancy that in India on the plains in May! The mornings and evenings are wonderfully cool, and one can still do without a punkah at night, if the mosquito curtains are fine enough to ward off the sandflies, for those annoying insects abound here. The detachments have left for Cherat, and now everyone is able to go there. The British officer from Fort Mackeson has come in, and I am told that everything has been satisfactorily arranged with the Affridi, who has at last consented to give up the road for a certain sum. I am not, however, in possession of full particulars, but will give them to you when I hear them; but I have no reason to doubt the truth of what I have told you, and that next cold weather will see our friends the Affridis admiring the engineering skill of our D.P.W. I trust, however, the feelings of those wild gentry will not be so unfavourable to that department as those entertained in a certain quarter, not one hundred miles from Peshawur, where punkahs that should be supplied by them, although most urgently required, are kept back. They say that those now suffering from this negligence on the part of the Public Works can hardly be recognised, so disfigured have they become from sandflies and other pests. Dr. Tandy, whose wife was so seriously injured some time back by the fall of the roof of the room in which she was sitting at the time, has succeeded in obtaining damages to the amount of Rs. 8,200 against the houseowner, one Ramjee Mull, a commissariat contractor. I trust that other landlords will take a lesson from this in future, and keep their houses in a better state of repair than they have hitherto done. I believe that Ramjee Mull has appealed, but I do not think he can have any chance of getting the judgment in the case upset.—Pioneer Correspondent.

SIMLA, May 27.—Of course there is not much to tell you in the way of news, as the changing of the mail day brings round the time for a weekly letter too soon for much of interest to have happened in the interval. The ball at Benmore was reported as even a greater success than the last, and the dancing was kept up with spirit till two in the morning. Yet everyone bemoans the very inferior style of the music, and so perhaps some energetic people may exert themselves to procure better dance music some day soon. The cricket-match was decided in favour of Simla, though the All Hill station champions made a better fight the second day. The Gymkhana yesterday was well attended, and Annandale, pretty as it is, never looks so well as on these festive occasions, for we like a landscape with figures to give it life. Much disappointment was felt that none of the many ladies who graced the scene were venturesome enough to enter the lists for the tilting of the ring. It is a pretty sport, but naturally requires practice ere a public performance is ventured on. To-day the levee in the morning and the State dinner party in the evening are the grand events by which her Majesty's birthday is being kept up. On Wednesday morning the grand salute reminded everyone of the answering echoes which would sound in every corner of the British dominions on that day. In the evening another salute announced the arrival of the Maharajah of Jeypore, accompanied by Captain C. Bayley, who is acting for Colonel Beynon, during the absence of the latter on leave in England. Clouds seem to tell of coming rain, and as the Chor had a black cap on yesterday, all excursions, picnics, and outdoor amusements are doomed, for a cloud on the Chor means rain within forty-eight hours. The skates have not yet arrived from England, and as those used were made in the bazaar here, and are minus their gutta-percha fittings, aspiring rinkers anxiously await the coming skates. There is to be a bazaar for the benefit of the Delhi Mission, and there is to be another later on, with wider aims, fewer supporters, and less chance of success, as its chief promoters do not belong to the Established Church. So if we go on the principle of helping the weak, the latter demands our attention.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. RIVERS THOMPSON.—Mr. Rivers Thompson's many friends will be glad to hear that the last mail from Burmah has brought accounts of his health which are quite reassuring. He has not for years been so well as he was when the mail left, and, as he finds Burmah suits him far better than Bengal, there is at present no likelihood of his vacating the Chief Commissionership.—Englishman, May 27.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.—(ALLAHABAD, June 1.)—Mr. Peacock, Officiating Commissioner, with Mr. Inglis, of Cherrapoonjee, and his wife were out after tigers. The elephant upon which the party was mounted becoming frightened, threw the lady and her husband out of the howdah. The latter thereupon severely assaulted the mahout, and finally speared him. The man was reported to be lying in a dangerous state at Lall Bagh.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—Rumours have been circulated about the prevalence of discontent among the engine drivers of the East Indian Railway, but an up-country contemporary states very confidently that it is asserted on the best authority that the drivers are perfectly contented, being tried men, in whom complete reliance is placed by their employers. And they have justified this confidence by showing themselves willing and ready in recently working away an unusually heavy traffic of seeds, wheat, and other grains from Cawnpore and its neighbourhood.

THE EMPRESS PROCLAMATION.—There are one or two noteworthy points about the "Empress" proclamation. One is, that it seems to consist chiefly of exceptions—occasions on which and documents in which the new title shall not be used. Another is, that while it very properly provides a Latin and an English style, it says nothing of any Indian language. This is a curious omission, considering that the title is mainly intended for India. We suppose the Cabinet at home did not like dictating to the Viceroy in so purely local a matter as translation. If they would only be equally modest in other things!—Pioneer.

HORRIBLE ATTEMPT AT RAPE.—A European, named John Fraser, residing at No. 3, Waterloo-street, was charged with an attempt to commit a rape on his child, Elizabeth Jane Fraser, eight years of age. It appeared from the evidence that on the night of the 22nd May, the defendant, who was under the influence of liquor, maltreated his wife, and on her leaving the apartment, where they were residing, he attempted to commit the offence in question. The magistrate, after taking down the depositions of the witnesses present, adjourned the case to Monday for the evidence of Dr. Woodford, who examined the person of the child.

THE LATE COLONEL MEADOWS TAYLOR.—Last year Colonel Taylor's strength and eyesight began to fail, and in the hope that the climate of the Deccan might do something towards restoring his enfeebled health, his medical advisers sent him to this country to pass the winter. He found himself, however, but little benefited by the change, and in the month of March returned home, still far from well. His decease will be lamented by all, but especially by the surviving Anglo-Indians of the older generation, the men of the times before the Mutiny, in whose now fast thinning ranks his disappearance leaves another gap which in the nature of things can never be filled.—Friend of India.

ACCIDENT AT INDOR.—(INDOR, May 28).—A very serious accident occurred at Futtiabad (the principal station between Indor and Oojein) last Friday, by which a guard, named Harris, lost his life. In consequence of there being no means of turning the train on the line the engine on its return trip to Indor works backwards, with the brake-van in front. It appears that he had got into the van waiting for the train to start, and that he had seated himself on the edge of the van with his face towards the engine; the driver, instead of starting the train gently, gave the engine full steam, which jerked it forward. Poor Harris was thus thrown violently from the brake-van on to the line, the entire train passing over him, cutting his body into bits, which were then and there collected and thrown into the ground. He leaves a wife and child.—Times of India Correspondent.

SIRDAR NARAIN SINGH.—Government officials in the Punjab say they have never heard of Sirdar Narain Singh, about whom the Marquis of Salisbury in the House of Lords on May 16 said that he promised to submit to the House the petition to return to the Punjab. The person alluded to is believed to be the Ram Sing, the Kuka high priest, an expatriated Sikh Sirdar, whose return from Burmah is not considered to be all conducive to the peace and quietude of the province.

THE ITALIAN CONSULSHIP.—The writer of "The Week" in the Englishman's Weekly Journal remarks that dead men's shoes would seem to be objects of eager competition in Calcutta in these hard times. Within a few hours of the announcement of M. Lamouroux's (the late Italian Consul at Calcutta) unexpected decease, I hear, no less than a hundred and fifty telegrams were sent to France or Italy, by aspirants after one or other of his appointments. Yet the Bishopric of Calcutta is going a begging, and, at least, one man on the spot is said to have refused the over-onerous post.

RAILWAY TELEGRAPHS.—It is said that Colonel Robinson, Director-General of Telegraphs, who is now at home, is making arrangements for transferring the telegraphs on the Indian Railways to the Government of India. This plan has already been adopted on the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi, and the G. I. P. Railways, and it seems probable that the other lines of railway will also soon adopt it. The carrying out of these arrangements will be merely a question of account between the companies and the Government, and will not involve any serious reorganisation of the Telegraph Department.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE.—Some excitement has been caused in Calcutta by the Commissioner of Police prohibiting a Christian missionary from preaching by the side of the Course. It appears to be considered an interference with the liberty of the subject. It is quite a mistake, however, says the Englishman's Weekly Journal, to suppose that public thoroughfares may be used for any purpose; and there is nothing unreasonable in requiring a man, whose vocation is to collect a crowd, to follow it at such a distance from a common thoroughfare as shall remove all risk of its producing inconvenience to passers-by. Had a Mohammedan missionary selected the same place for his exhortation, Christians would, probably, have considered that it was Sir Stuart Hogg's duty to send him to a quieter place.

PROJECTED RAILWAYS.—There is a probability of a railway line being constructed from Moradabad to Rampore in the North-Western Provinces, the Nawab of Rampore having undertaken to defray the cost. Another line, and one, the Englishman thinks, of greater commercial importance, has been under contemplation for some time, but hangs fire for want of assistance from native capitalists—we refer to the line from Furuckabad to Cawnpore. A third line connecting Ghazeepore with the Zamania station of the E.I. Railway appears to have been abandoned for the same reason. Sir John Strachey's views regarding light railways as feeders for the main line, however, are the same as those of his predecessors, and it will not be long before we see a net-work of them in the province he governs.

A SOLDIER DROWNED AT RAWAL PINDI.—A letter from Rawal Pindi, in the Times of India, says:—A melancholy accident has occurred here, resulting in the death of a young soldier of H.M.'s 9th Regiment, named Roofey. It appears Roofey and three of his comrades went out fishing in the river behind the park; Roofey separated from the others and strolled up the bank for about half-a-mile, and, it is supposed, feeling it hot, went in for a bath; he evidently got beyond his depth, and not knowing how to swim, was drowned, no assistance being at hand. A native who was passing by, seeing the body floating, informed his comrades of the fact, who, proceeding to the spot, got the unfortunate man's body out, and found that life was extinct. A post mortem examination was held on the body, and a verdict of death from accidental drowning recorded.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The reference we made on Thursday to a rumour that the chairman of the B.I.S.N. Company had made an offer to the directors of the P. and O. Company to take over the stock of the latter under a guarantee, not unnaturally excited some interest in the city, especially amongst parties interested in either. There is reason to believe that if such an idea has ever been entertained, no knowledge of it has reached the parties interested in the former company, as would probably have been the case had there been good grounds for the rumour. We mentioned it under due reserve, and presumed that it would be so received. There can be no harm, however, in making an explicit declaration that whatever may have taken place in England, nothing is known in Calcutta of any such offer or arrangement as that indicated.—Indian Daily News, May 27.

A HOT-HEADED BRITON.—The Calcutta Statesman gives some particulars of an occurrence near Dacca of which we have received a special telegram:—"A very unpleasant matter reaches us from Dacca. We are told that on Sunday last Mr. Peacock, the Commissioner, in company with Mr. Inglis, of Cherrapoonjee, were out after a tiger on elephants, Mrs. Inglis being one of the party. The elephant on which the latter was mounted got frightened and became unmanageable, throwing the lady and her husband out of the howdah, upon which the latter severely assaulted the mahout and finally speared him. The man lies, we are told, in a precarious state at the Lall Bagh, and the town is in excitement from the belief that the matter will be hushed up instead of being brought into Court. It was rumoured on Friday that the man was dead, but the report seems to have been contradicted in the afternoon. Our informant adds that Mr. Inglis is unfavourably known for his treatment of the people; and though we do not for a moment vouch for the truth of the statement, it is our clear duty, we think, to bring the matter to the notice of Government. Every allowance must of course be made for the excitement under which the assault was made, but men must learn to govern themselves even when excited; and an attempt to hush up a charge of this serious nature cannot be permitted."

THE CROPS.—The following are the remarks of the Agricultural Department on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ended May 18:—"In Madras the rain has been slight, and none has fallen in Kurnool and Malabar; in the latter district the want of rain is retarding agricultural operations. From Bombay the only rainfall reported is a shower at Kaira, and slight rain in Sattara and Sind; in the latter province the river is at present lower than at this time last year; rain is wanted for sowings in the South Mahratta country. In Berar and the Central Provinces there has been no rain; preparations for the kharif are progressing. There has been no rain in Central India; in Rajputana showers are reported from Jeypore and Bhurtpore. In Bengal the weather has been stormy and rainy in the North, Central, and Eastern districts; in the Southern districts of the Delta and in Chota Nagpore and Orissa the fall has been insufficient; in the Bhagalpur and Patna divisions the rain has been very partial and scanty, and in some districts none has fallen. Ploughing and sowing are going on where the rainfall has permitted. No rain has fallen in Oudh. In the North-Western Provinces rain is reported from Agra, Meerut, Bareilly, and Almora. In the Punjab there have been showers throughout the province, except in Peshawar and Rawulpindi. Good rain has fallen in Assam. In Mysore there has been an abundant fall, and prospects are now good. None has fallen in British Burmah."

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY BALL.—The ball in commemoration of the Queen's birthday, which was held at the Town Hall on Friday last, was a complete success. The Hall looked very well, though nothing special in the way of decoration had been attempted. But why paint the lily? It was not crowded, but well filled, there being more than 150 people present; and it was evident that all were bent on enjoying themselves, and succeeded. Whitaker's "Almanac" says that, in India, May is the most trying month in the year, the heat being most oppressive, and at times almost unbearable, which is a useful extract for a home letter for an exile wishing to elicit sympathy from his relatives; but, if "Whitaker" was at the ball, the gloss would be removed if he should add, as he might justly do, that nevertheless, there is "life in the old (Anglo-Indian) dog yet." For dancing can be be carried on from 9.30 P.M. until 2.30 A.M. with an amount of go and vigour which is not always seen even in November and December which (to quote our good friend "Whitaker" again) are the most pleasant months in the year for Europeans. A good deal of this was no doubt owing to the refreshing showers [tropical Queen's weather] in the day-time, which had reduced the temperature to comparative coolness, much more to the melodious strains of the band of the gallant 12th Regiment, which "discoursed" a capital selection of music, in a style which gained them the well-merited thanks of the community; but most of all to the chaperones, with whom it lay to make or mar the ball's success. By their unfailing kindness they made it so, and, having a crown of honour at our disposal, we offer it to them with profound respect, and we are sure we may add expressions of the deepest gratitude from the younger generation.—Englishman, May 29.

THE LATE FAMINE.—It has been thought advisable to postpone the public meeting that was to have taken place this afternoon. We have heard of a native combination to attend this meeting, and swamp the voters for the Resolutions. Whether this has had anything to do with the postponement, we are not in a position to say. We may not inappropriately reprint in this place what the writer of the "Week" in our last Saturday evening's issue says, regarding the arguments urged against the meeting:—"Some of the arguments that have been urged against the meeting are strangely fallacious, or inadequate. One writer argues that it would be alike ungenerous and impolitic to complain of waste in a good cause—ungenerous because of the kindness of the motive; impolitic because Government might, in future, think twice before helping people who ungratefully insisted on examining the bill. With reference to the first of these arguments, it involves two fallacies. First, that, because charity is kind, therefore waste, under the cover of charity, is also kind; and, secondly, the fallacy of treating Government as an entity, distinct from, and independent of, the people. The writer forgets that Government has no money, either to spend, or to throw away; but that, when it relieves a famine, it is spending the people's money, and that it is, an essential condition of its trust that it should exercise proper thrift and care. With reference to the second argument, that to complain of the waste would be impolitic, because it might disincline the Government to be charitable in future, I would point out to the writer that one of the weightiest reasons for insisting on economy is, that waste like that of 1873-74 must ultimately, if repeated, render it simply impossible for the Government to relieve famines at all. It must end in financial bankruptcy; and, in a bankrupt State, a famine-stricken population must, from the nature of things, as far as State help is concerned, be left to die.—Englishman, May 29.

A LOVE STORY.—The Lahor paper publishes the following:—"A tale of real love comes from our law courts. A proud Mussalman, calling himself a Rajput, although no true Mohammedan dare have a caste, had a daughter for whom nobody was worthy in his opinion. She burst into full womanhood, wasting her sweetness on the desert air, when she fell in love and eloped with a gardener's son. The happy pair were married somewhat informally before a friendly Lumberdar and his 'Bhai,' and it is also said that they appealed to the moon and stars as witnesses. These cannot be now called into court, for the course of true love, which never did run smooth, was in this case also not untrue to its tradition. They lived in perfect happiness and never quarrelled, although they had been married fully six months, when the enraged parent accused the gay Lothario of abduction, took away his daughter from him, and engaged her to a boy twelve years old. Now it seems to us that the whole thing is a farce. In the first place, there is no caste among Mohammedans, and in no other respect can the marriage in question be called a mésalliance. In the second place, in a country where 'Chadar dalna' is a sufficiently formal recognition of the sacred tie, the living together for so many months of the happy pair within the knowledge of the husband's acquaintances, at all events, ought to be at least as valid as a Scotch marriage; and, lastly, the absurdity of the parent's claim is sufficiently shown by the betrothal of a woman of three and twenty (ladies are said not to overstate their age) to a boy of twelve. In the meanwhile, the disconsolate Rajput beauty yearns for the deserted gardener, who in dire distress calls on heaven, the 'hakims' and sympathetic souls for redress, and enacts for their edification the story of 'Leila and Majnun.' Will the courts have mercy and restore her to him, or will they give her to the boy of twelve years of age?"

DESPERATE ENCOUNTER WITH DACOITS.—On the night of the 9th May a band of dacoits or professional thieves, consisting of forty men, mounted on twenty camels and ten on horses, made their way into Oodeypore, near the Meywar State, where they surrounded and took possession of seven camels loaded with opium, belonging to merchants on their way to Agra. The dacoits got clear off with the booty, but the bipárees, who escaped, ran and reported the matter to the Raj Hakim, Jussraj, who lost no time in acting on the information. He collected twelve sowars, picked men, and started in pursuit, leaving others to alarm the villagers and send help after his party. The robbers were traced to a spot about sixteen miles off, where they had concealed themselves in the jungle, taking advantage of a ravine for protection. On reconnoitring the position, the Hakim was of opinion that with his small force he was at too great a disadvantage to warrant an attack, so he retired his party into a deserted chowkey hard by, and waited for the villagers whom he expected were on the road, but finding they did not come he determined on attempting something unsupported in the way of a surprise. He arranged his plans well, and contrived to let three volleys from different points simultaneously amongst the gang, but the thieves were on the alert, and directly returned the fire without attempting to escape. They had not all muskets, but those who had none were armed with swords, so that the Hakim considered it advisable to avoid a hand-to-hand combat until he succeeded in equalising the numbers by killing or wounding as many of the thieves as possible. This desultory fighting continued for about three hours, when the Hakim was made aware of the approach of the villagers: he sent instructions to them to surround the spot, so that none might escape; he collected his sowars and charged into the midst of the foe; the fight then became desperate; the Hakim and his men fought like lions, and the robbers, knowing their lives were at stake, refused to surrender, but the cordon of villagers soon closed in, and the whole of the gang was captured, not a man escaping. The casualties were fifteen dacoits killed and nine wounded. On the Hakim's side, two sowars killed, four wounded, and the Hakim himself with one sword-cut and two bullet wounds in his body. The opium was recovered, with much valuable property, with camels and horses, which were all brought into Oodeypore, and thirty-five prisoners, who were all safely lodged in jail with the captain of the gang, who was severely wounded. We have not been able to ascertain his name. On the following day the Maharajah of Oodeypore held a Durbar, and presented Hakim Jussraj with a handsome khillut, including a valuable jewelled turban, also a large piece of land for himself and his children for ever. Each of the sowars received a nuzzu of five gold mohurs, and sixty beegahs of land, and the families of the two deceased are specially provided for, the children being adopted by the State as particular favourites. This gang of dacoits or borees, so called, is said to have been for some time past the terror of the district. Its race is run, and we are of opinion that so long as the Maharajah of Oodeypore gives such substantial proofs of his admiration for pluck, he will never want for brave men to fight his battles.—Star of India.

STATION TALK.

GUNTUR, May 16.—The proceedings of a recent meeting of the Guntur Circle Local Fund Board contain a few items that deserve notice. The Board appointed a superintendent of vaccination for their circle. Before the appointment was made, the president of the Local Fund Boards of this district sent up a letter to make known his decided disapproval of appointing an East Indian to this important office, on the ground that Natives have difficulties enough to contend with in this department, ergo, East Indians have many more to overcome in such a capacity. I must confess that, so far as I can see, this letter ought never to have been sent up to this Local Board; for it taboos a whole class of men, many of whom are far more fit to hold the office of superintendent of vaccination than natives are, for various reasons, among which are (1), The present class of natives, from whom a superintendent of vaccination must be selected, are high caste, and no high caste native will give his consent to having a low caste native vaccinator under him, except by compulsion. The consequence is, the Pariah and Chuckler quarters of a village or town are neglected or avoided altogether by himself or his caste vaccinators. (2), It is only a matter of opinion that East Indians have more opposition to overcome among the natives in the matter of vaccination than natives have. I do not say that a native cannot succeed equally as well as an East Indian in persuading people to be vaccinated; but then his caste prejudices confine him only to the caste community, while the non-caste people are deliberately overlooked. (3), An East Indian or any non-caste man who is qualified for the office of Superintendent of Vaccination has as much right to be appointed as a native has, i.e., if the terms of the Queen's Proclamation and the law of equity are worth anything. It is, therefore, most unfair to taboo an East Indian, or any non-caste man, and thus prevent him from being appointed to a position for which he is in every respect qualified. A letter from the Deputy Inspector of Schools was read, which strongly urged that the Inspecting Schoolmaster who is under him be heavily fined because he had not visited a school for a period of seven months. In reply, the Inspecting Schoolmaster states that there are 140 schools to be visited by him twice during the year, which, according to his showing, has but 240 work days, and moreover he is not permitted to visit more than one school a day. Hence, it would be impossible for him to visit all these schools as required. The Board did not impose the fine recommended, but referred the matter to the Inspector of Schools for further information as to the rules and regulations under which these subordinate Inspectors are required to work. Owing to the difficulty expressed in the Inspecting Schoolmaster's reply, a goodly number are of opinion that more Inspectors ought to be appointed for this Circle, in order to ensure a more thorough and more frequent inspection and examination of the schools now under the care of the Board.—Madras Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

LEGAL.—Mr. H. H. Shephard, Barrister-at-Law, has been appointed to officiate as Reporter in the High Court of Madras, for the Indian Law Reports, from the date of receiving charge from Mr. J. H. S. Branson.

MANDALAY NEWS.—Mandalay city is reported quiet. Small-pox is said to be raging among Europeans and natives. Cholera has also made its appearance in the city; on an average there are said to be nine deaths a day. A heavy storm burst over the place on the night of the 1st instant, causing much damage to native houses. The thermometer stood at 93 deg. Fahrenheit when last our correspondent wrote.—Rangoon Times, May 16.

REMOUNTS FOR THE SILLADAR FORCE.—Thirty horses have been purchased from Bombay for the use of the local Silladars, and we learn that about sixty more are wanted, and that the supply will be indented from Madras The breeding establishment at Coongul, where there is an extensive farm, is progressing favourably, and it is reported that the colts bred there will, in future, be drafted to the different regiments.—Bangalor Spectator, May 27.

EMBEZZLEMENT.—A Madras paper publishes news from Trichinopoly that Mr. Scaife, the jailor of the District Jail at that station, was, on the 16th instant, convicted by the District Magistrate, under Section 409 of the I. P. Code, of having embezzled Rs. 800, public money, entrusted to him in the capacity of jailor. In consideration of his previous good character the magistrate dealt with the prisoner leniently, and sentenced him to two years' simple imprisonment, and a fine of Rs. 500; in default to undergo six months' further simple imprisonment.

LAND IN KURG.—The land exchange question is the most vexatious Government have had to deal with in Kurg, the value of land in that province having considerably risen of late years. A Bangalor paper states that the extensive forests there are for the greater part reserved for Government purposes, and the supreme authorities in Bengal wish that such portions of the reserves should be strictly guarded from encroachments. The planters in several cases apply for lands for coffee cultivation, which the Government cannot, without prejudice to their interests, grant, and this leads to considerable dissatisfaction.

FIRE AT KADAPAH.—Intimation has been received at Madras from Kadapah to the effect that a good portion of the railway station house has been burnt down. The fire is reported to have originated at the lamp-room of the station, and extended to the station master's room and the refreshment store-rooms. Much valuable property has been lost, the station books have, to some extent, been burnt, and the necessary inquiries are being made. Some of the officers of the company have been sent up from Madras to make particular inquiries as to the origin and extent of the accident.—Madras Standard, May 29.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Saturday last a peon was accidentally shot by one of the railway employés out in the jungles about forty-five miles from town. It would appear that several of the overseers or workmen had obtained for purposes of self-defence, against bad characters, we presume, a box containing five or six revolvers. One of these was taken out and loaded, and then replaced in the box by one of the men, who in shutting it accidentally slammed the lid against the loaded revolver, which went off, the bullet passing through the box and hitting the peon who was standing close by. We understand the man was shot through the spine; he was immediately carried into town and conveyed to the hospital, but died next day from the injuries he sustained.—Rangoon Times.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.—The Governor and his Council are hard at work, and "Council days," which hitherto came at the offenest but once a week, have lately come more frequently, and public business is being pushed forward. The latest news from Ootacamund is to the effect that the question of the re-organisation of the Public Works Department is said to be again on the tapis. An officer from Bengal lately visited this Presidency in order to report on our Department of Public Works; and he is said to have drawn up a memorandum of a scathing description, tending to show that the Department is a century or so behind the age, and that reform to be effective should commence at the top of the tree. It is also reported that the Account Branch of the Madras Public Works Department is, with the Bombay Branch also to be assimilated to that of Bengal.—Madras Athenæum.

DEATH OF SIGNOR HILLIER.—The death of this celebrated equestrian at Secunderabad is announced. Mr. Hillier arrived in Madras with an equestrian troupe in, we believe, the year 1845, and gave some lively entertainments in this city in the compound of the Polytechnic Institution, which were well attended by all classes of society. Such exhibitions were a novelty in Madras at the time, and the troupe accordingly did a good business. After leaving Madras the troupe made a tour in the north, visiting various parts of India. Some eight years later Signor Hillier settled down in Bangalor, where, a ter training some Mohammedan youths in the mysteries of the circus, he gave several entertainments. The late Rajah of Mysor having engaged his services permanently, Mr. Hillier removed with his trained performers to Mysor, where he resided for many years, enjoying the friendship of the Rajah. The complete mastery attained by Mr. Hillier over the horse was astonishing. On the death of the Rajah he seems to have been engaged by the Nizam, where he spent the latter years of his life in comparative retirement. He was a short thick-set man, full of vigour and possessing an indomitable will.

LOSS OF THE BARQUE "MEERA SAIB."—The native barque Meera Saib, of 416 tons, belonging to this port, got on shore on the night of the 15th May, and by daylight became a total wreck. The vessel left Moulmein on the 18th April last, laden with a cargo of teak timber, and was bound to Madras. After being out to sea about sixteen days she encountered heavy weather, and the vessel made some water, but nothing to endanger the safety of the vessel. Not being able to fetch their destination, they bore away for Cocoonada, and sighted Hope Island Lighthouse at five P.M. on the 15th May, and while steering for Coconada-roads, and in consequence, we hear, of neglecting the lead, which is the only guide at night in approaching this anchorage, they unexpectedly sighted breakers a-head, and let go both anchors; but the vessel had already run into inextricable danger, which was not long in closing her existence. She bumped away during the whole night, sending all her three masts over the side, and by daylight of the 16th May she broke in two. The crew made a raft of the floating timber, and was ultimately rescued by two boats, and brought to the Master Attendant's office, who, we hear, has inquired into the case. Now, we would ask, is this loss to be passed over without an official inquiry? Had the vessel been under the command of a European, an investigation would have been immediately held, and if the loss had occurred through the default of the commander, he would be punished, so that he could not earn his bread, perhaps, for a twelvemonth, which is a very heavy penalty. If such be the state of the law with reference to European commanders, surely something should be done to protect life and property from ignorance and inefficiency when entrusted into the hands of native commanders. No notice is taken of these losses when they occur under native commanders, and yet we think that a careful perusal of the Statute under which these cases are inquired into will show that native commanders are not exempted from its provisions. We would call the attention of Government to this anomalous state of things. Fortunately there were no lives lost, excepting a poor lad of thirteen years of age. The vessel is breaking up fast, and her cargo of timber is floating about in all directions, and inviting salvors to secure it.—Coconada Advertiser.

REPORTED TRANSFER OF SIND.—The Karachi paper learns from a highly trustworthy source that a telegram passed through that station on Friday last to Bombay, intimating that Sind had been annexed to the Punjab. The telegram had been despatched from England.

THE SABARMATTI BRIDGE.—One of the most marked traces of the late floods at Ahmadabad—the destruction of the great bridge over the Sabarmatti—has been erased, for we learn that the new railway bridge over the Sabarmatti River, near Ahmadabad, which was commenced in December last, was on Friday last inspected and passed for traffic. The bridge consists of twenty-two spans of sixty feet clear each, and is from seventy-two to ninety feet high from the foundation. This work is an excellent example of rapid construction.—Bombay Gazette, May 29.

DEATH OF MR. CAPSTICK, OF KARACHI.—Mr. Capstick, the European Preventive Officer at Keamari, died last Saturday morning, rather suddenly. He had been ailing for some time, but nothing serious was thought to be the matter with him. The evening previously he was walking about and conversing with his friends. It is believed that an accident which befel him a short time ago, while he was going up the side of a vessel in the harbour, caused some internal injuries. Mr. Capstick had been for some years employed as preventive officer, and was always considered to be a quiet, well-disposed man. He has left a widow and family wholly unprovided for.—Sind News, May 22.

MEETING OF THE BOMBAY CORPORATION.—The Bombay Corporation met on Wednesday last, and adopted an address of congratulation to her Majesty the Queen on her assumption of the title of Empress of India. The meeting was attended by the Parsee and other native members of the Corporation, numbering some thirty persons, but only six European members were present. The speeches on the occasion were set, and had evidently been greatly studied beforehand; they are filled with Oriental imagery toned down to suit Western ideas, and express fervent loyalty and attachment to the throne, and pleasure at the assumption of the title of Empress of India. Considerable political advantages are anticipated from this new title, more particularly in the effects expected to be produced on the princes of India, who, it is thought, will in future look upon the Queen as representing the paramount power really and truly, and pay greater regard to the internal Government of their several territories.—Bombay Gazette, May 29.

THE KAFILAS FROM KHELAT.—A letter in the Pioneer says:—The progress of the mission up to the present has shown that no hostile demonstration will be made in Khelat, notwithstanding the presence of an escort. The immense kafilas, worth six lakhs of rupees, which accompanied the mission, are now safe at Candahar. Another caravan of 650 laden camels has since passed through the Bolan Pass in safety, whilst a large kafila, which had been detained at Gandava, has been conveyed to Khelat at the request of his Highness the Khan himself. All these kafilas have been escorted, under arrangements made by Major Sandeman, by men of the Brahoi and Biloch tribes, and not by the escort, as it was not considered desirable to expose the troops to any fresh risk of cholera. These matters, of no small importance in themselves, augur well for the ultimate success of the mission; and I think that the eventual attainment of the ends of Government may be considered as secured, if the Government continues to support its officers in carrying out the policy which it has prescribed; and this I see no reason to doubt that it will do cordially and thoroughly.

ACCIDENT AT EGATPURA.—EGATPURA, May 26.—Another accident has occurred on the Thull Ghaut, near Egatpura through the foolhardy habit which drivers and firemen have acquired of laying down for forty winks on the line when detained for line clear. All up goods trains have to pull up at the scene of accident to pin the brakes down. At about half-past three this morning a goods train stopped for this purpose, and the native fireman is supposed to have slipped off the engine and laid down on the down line, probably worn out for want of rest, as the men have been very hard worked of late. A down train shortly after cut his right arm clean off by the shoulder; the poor fellow was brought into Egatpura and attended to by Dr. O'Sullivan, and remains at present in a very low state. This foolish practice should be at once abandoned. A driver lost his life the other day on the East Indian Railway under similar circumstances. The hard ballast, though far from comfortable, is cool; and exhausted nature tempted to rest often gives way to sleep. A very slight roll over will place a limb in jeopardy, about the least unfortunate result to be anticipated.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE AHMADABAD AND AJMIR RAILWAY ON THE NARROW GAUGE.—We understand that the Government of India has received a thority from the Secretary of State to proceed at once with the Ahmadabad and Ajmir extension of railway, and also with the extension from Nagpore to Chutteesgurh. This would have been very good news indeed to the citizens of Bombay, who are naturally looking gloomily at the present depressed state of trade and thinking that railway communications between Bombay and Rajpootana and Bombay and the heat of the Central Provinces cannot be made too soon, were it not that our information is accompanied with the intimation that the extension from Ahmadabad to Ajmir is to be constructed on the narrow gauge. We confess that this information surprises us, for we thought it would have been patent to Lord Salisbury that the extension in question had political and commercial claims to be connected with Bombay on the broad gauge which could not be overlooked. We have always held the opinion that now, since General Strachey's unfortunate policy of making narrow gauge lines in connection with broad gauge trunk lines has been already carried out in Central India and Rajpootana to a considerable extent, the best thing that can be done is to make the narrow gauge system of Rajpootana and Central India concentrate in Ajmir, and to connect Ajmir and Ahmadabad by a broad gauge line. This would ensure a tolerable degree of completeness and symmetry to these systems, as may be seen by a glance at the map. Khandwa, Mhow, Indor, and Nasirabad would be connected with Ajmir by a narrow gauge line, and Ajmir would have unbroken communication on the same gauge with Jaipur and Agra.—Bombay Gazette.

THE QUEEN'S NEW TITLE.—According to announcement, a very large and influential gathering of the native inhabitants of the City and Camp of Poona took place last evening at Bhow Munsaram's house, in Vitail Peit, for the purpose of adopting a congratulatory address to her most gracious Majesty the Queen on her assumption of the title of Empress of India. The spacious hall was crush-full, and there was a very fair sprinkling of the Parsee inhabitants: but only two Christians. Owing to the very late hour at which the proceedings were brought to a close, we are only able to publish a succinct account, and are compelled to leave out the address, a very lengthy and clever production. The chair was occupied by Shett Nana Furnawees; Rao Bahadoor Sadashew Govind Bullal, the Secretary to the Poona Sarvajanick Sabha, read the proposed prolix congratulatory address, the Maharathi translation being read by Mr. Antoba. Dorabjee Puddumjee, Esq., in a short speech, moved that the proposed address be curtailed, as a congratulatory address was only intended. He said that the grievances and political allusions embodied in the very able document were out of place, and that he did not clearly see of what utility they were, embodied as they are with a subject of a far different nature. Mr. Bomanjee Sorabjee, a solicitor of Bombay, in supporting Mr. Dorabjee Puddumjee's motion, made a capital speech in a loud and clear voice. Amongst other arguments for the curtailment of the congratulatory address, he said that our grievances, which are manifold, ought to be made to Parliament, through the Secretary of State for India. Mr. Shastri Apte also concurred with the views expressed by the two preceding gentlemen. Mr. Cassinath Trimbuck Telang, barrister-at-law, next addressed the assembly, and spoke in a very pleasing voice and in a very able manner. He differed as to the curtailment of the congratulatory address, and his ratiocinations and arguments were decidedly most cogent. He was supported by several other native gentlemen, whose names our reporter was unable to obtain. One of the native gentlemen present proposed that if the meeting was to be continued with statements and arguments for and against the curtailment, the congratulatory address had better be dropped. It was subsequently proposed that the question whether the proposed congratulatory address be curtailed or forwarded in its present form be decided by a show of hands, and when the proposition was put to the meeting there were eight for the curtailment, and the remainder—about five hundred—against it. The congratulatory address, which it is intended should be printed on parchment, was hereupon adopted. We would mention that great credit is due to Mr. Ganesh Wassadew Joshee, pleader and founder of the Poona Sarwajanick Sabha, and to Rao Bahadoor Sadashew, Govind Bullal, the Secretary, for the arrangements made for the carrying out of the very laudable object for which this public meeting had been convened.—Puna Observer, May 30.

BARODA.—Writing about the affairs of Baroda, the Englishman remarks that they are outwardly placid and prosperous, but it is scarcely likely that they can as yet be settled on a sound basis. Sir T. Madhava Rao, the skilful and politic Dewan, keeps the Government of India well posted up, we understand, as to the state of the cash balances. These are said to be very flourishing, and it is significant of the measure taken by this astute politician of the Government of India's political capacity, that he relies on a full treasury to answer all doubts, and prove to remote Simla beyond dispute the striking success of his administration. Full coffers are precious in the eyes of thrifty statesmen, and Sir Madhava Rao deserves full credit for the revenue side of his operations. On the other hand, there are such things as unsatisfied claims and quasi-State obligations, which ought, in some shape, to appear to the debit of overflowing cash balances. These liabilities may, many of them, be vague, and the claims ill-defined; but they are, nevertheless, a great fact in the Baroda situation. Doubtless, they are tangled enough; some of them rest on tradition and custom; some on the verbal promise of former Gaikwars, ratified by more or less of recorded enjoyment; others are family claims, about which the chief dispute is as to the amount; while others, again, are based on feudal or political compromises, and have been more or less acknowledged by Sir Richard Meade's commission, or by British Residents. But this jungle of conflicting claims is just the field for the exercise of Sir Madhava Rao's special talent for close investigation and prompt discrimination. Yet we believe that not only are the great bulk of these claims on the Baroda treasury still undisposed of, but some which, in spite of the worry of Colonel Phayre on one side, and the corrupt darbarees on the other, had been put into shape by Mr. Dadabhai Naorojee and his colleagues before the catastrophe still remain unsettled. These claims are chiefly made by jewellers of Baroda who were in the habit of leaving parcels of jewels "for approval" with Mulharao and even with his predecessor Khunderao, upon which advances had occasionally been made. These jewellers are now told to take back their pearls and diamonds, but the market is flat now, as Mulharao has disappeared. The Englishman concludes by remarking that—"Perhaps, in these particular essays of sharp practice, the Dewan will be considered to have the best of it; but these exceptional cases are inconsiderable sets off to the protracted, if not systematic, procrastination which many bonâ fide claimants have to endure whilst the present master of Baroda leisurely counts the young Gaikwar's money. It will be said that this dead-lock could not obtain without the British Resident's consent or oversight. There is force in this observation, and we cannot but fear that the lack of previous political experience is making itself felt in Mr. P. S. Melvill's case. Had he been appointed to the charge of one of the small Sikh States of the Punjab he would have felt comparatively at home, and have been more or less familiar with the intrigues and personnel pertaining to such State. At Baroda he is quite in a foreign land, and those with whom he has to work make him feel this at some points, and at others take advantage of his inaptitude or oversight."

GOVERNMENT PROCTOR.—Mr. Hector Van Cuylenburg has, we hear, been appointed Government Proctor in succession to the late Mr. C. P. Morgan. A better appointment could not have been made.

DEATH OF A COFFEE PLANTER.—Mr. E. Hill, coffee planter, who was for some years a planter in Ceylon, in the employ of the Ceylon Company, and Messrs. Carey, Strachan, and Co., was found dead in his bed at Athirmaly, in Southern India, on the morning of the 3rd inst. His body was conveyed to Trevandrum, and a post mortem examination was held over it, which resulted in a verdict of death by poisoning. Mr. Hill's servants are all non est, and it remains to be seen whether they will ever be found by the police. Mr. T. H. Hill, of Beredewella, Matale, who is a brother of deceased, went over to Travancore by the last B.I. steamer.—Ceylon Times, May 23.

LAGGALA WONDER-WORKERS.—The people of Laggala, who have been prevented from working their rice fields from want of rain, assembled in a body and came to a resolution to obtain the rain they wanted by the aid of devil dancers. These last-mentioned impostors, having promised to give as much rain as was wanted, desired that preparations should be made for a bali offering, which should be continued for seven days. The people accordingly collected a sum of money and the necessary articles, upon which the devil priests made a huge and monstrous image of mud, with several smaller figures, and commenced the dance, and closed it on the 21st of last month, on which day all the village people assembled, and with loud acclamations dragged down and threw the images into a neighbouring stream, when the dancers predicted there would be heavy showers of rain; but unfortunately for the stupid devotees not a drop of rain came, and the people, who spent large sums of money on this foolish ceremony, returned to their homes much disappointed, while the devil dancers disappeared very much ashamed.

MINT AND CURRENCY.

Read a despatch from her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, No. 81 (Financial), dated 2nd March, 1876.

RESOLUTION.—Since the abolition of the Madras Mint, the duty of providing the entire coinage of British India has been left to the Mints at Bombay and Calcutta, and the importance of the Bombay Mint relatively to that at Calcutta has been much increased by the opening of the Suez Canal.

2. The Mint at Bombay has hitherto been under the immediate supervision of the Government of Bombay, while the Calcutta Mint is under the Government of India. The management of the Mints is intimately connected with the administration of the finances, the distribution of the cash balances and the currency reserve, and the movement of the public fund generally. Occasions arise when it is important for the Government of India to be in a position to issue prompt orders to either Mint. It is also expedient that the two Mints should be brought into closer relations with each other, so as to benefit to the utmost by each other's experience : but this cannot be fully accomplished while they are under different administrations.

3. Moreover, whatever of local character the Bombay Mint may formerly have had has long ago ceased ; its functions are now imperial, and affect the interests of all India. There does not, therefore, seem any advantage in the interposition of the local Government between the Master of the Bombay Mint and the Government of India to compensate for the disadvantages involved in the delays and other inconveniences inseparable from such interposition.

4. Upon these considerations, and on the motion of the Government of India, with the concurrence of the Government of Bombay, her Majesty's Secretary of State has now sanctioned the administration of the Bombay Mint being brought under the direct management of the Government of India, like the Mint at Calcutta, the Masters of the two Mints being placed on an equal footing.

5. The pay of the Master of the Mint at Calcutta has recently been Rs. 3,000, and that of the Master of the Mint at Bombay Rs. 2,000 a month. The Secretary of State has sanctioned the recommendation of the Government of India, that hereafter the senior of the two masters shall receive the higher, and the junior the lower pay, of whichever Mint he may have charge, it being understood that a Junior Master promoted to the pay of Senior Master may, at the option of the Governor General in Council, be transferred to Bombay or Calcutta, as the case may be.

6. The Governor General in Council is accordingly pleased to declare that the Bombay Mint shall be henceforth under the direct administration of the Government of India. In making this declaration the Governor General in Council desires cordially to acknowledge the success with which the administration of the Mint at Bombay has been uniformly conducted by his Excellency the Governor in Council at Bombay.

R. B. CHAPMAN, Secretary to the Government of India.

THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE AND THE ARMY.—The London Gazette of Tuesday night, under the War-office date of the previous day, says that her Majesty has approved of the 17th Lancers being in future designated "The 17th (Duke of Cambridge's Own) Lancers." Her Majesty has also approved of the 77th Foot being in future designated "The 77th (East Middlesex) or the Duke of Cambridge's Own Regiment of Foot." 17th Lancers—Field Marshal his Royal Highness George William Frederick Charles, Duke of Cambridge, K.G., G.C.B., K.P., G.C.M.G., to be Colonel-in-Chief. Dated June, 1876.

EAST INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—It is announced by the directors of the East India Railway Company that at the ensuing annual meeting they will recommend a dividend of 1s. 4d. per cent. on the consolidated stock of the company, in addition to the guaranteed interest.

LEBONG TEA COMPANY.—The annual report of the Lebong Tea Company shows a net profit of £6,320, out of which a further dividend of 5 per cent. is recommended, making 8 per cent. for the year, but in order to pay this dividend £245 has to be taken from the reserve fund.

THE PROPOSED INDIAN AND COLONIAL MUSEUM.—It was decided on Monday at the sitting of the joint committee of the Royal Asiatic Society and the Royal Colonial Institute, to call, on Monday next, at the Cannon-street Hotel, a preliminary meeting of the City friends of the scheme for founding upon the Thames Embankment an Imperial Museum for India and the Colonies.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £700,000 in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday, the 21st inst. The amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta, £387,500; to Bombay, £300,000; and to Madras, £12,500. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 7½d. will receive about 15 per cent., on Bombay at that price about 6 per cent., above in full.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The Eastern Telegraph Company announce that, subject to the final audit, the accounts show an available balance which will enable the directors to recommend the declaration of a final dividend of 2s. 6d. per share, making with previous payments on account a distribution for the year ending March 31 last of 5 per cent., carrying to reserve a balance of about £20,000.

PROPOSED BANQUET TO THE LATE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The friends of the Earl of Northbrook intend to celebrate his return home from India by a banquet and reception on the 28th inst. His Lordship has received the congratulations of his late constituents at Penrhyn and Falmouth on his safe return from India, and has promised to visit Falmouth in August, when a banquet and demonstration will be given in his honour.

THE OXFORD COMMEMORATION.—HONORARY DEGREES.—In a Convocation holden on Wednesday, June 21, in the Sheldonian Theatre, the degree of D.C.L. honoris causa was conferred on the following distinguished persons connected with the Indian services, &c. :—The Right Hon. the Earl of Northbrook, G.C.S.I., late Viceroy and Governor-General of India; Sir Salar Jung, G.C.S.I.; Sir John Francis Davis, Bart., K.C.B., formerly her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary in China; Samuel Birch, LL.D., Keeper of Oriental Antiquities in the British Museum. Sir Salar Jung, whose name appeared in the official programme, was not present to have his degree conferred.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S INDIAN PRESENTS.—On Monday the Prince and Princess of Wales and Royal children, accompanied by Lord Suffield, Sir Bartle Frere, Sir Joseph Fayrer, and a select number of friends, visited the India Museum, South Kensington, for the purpose of inspecting the presents made to his Royal Highness by the Rajahs of India. Dr. Birdwood met the Royal party at the entrance, and conducted them over the exhibition. At the conclusion of the visit the Prince signified his pleasure at the taste displayed by Dr. Birdwood in the arrangement of the various costly articles. There was a private view on Tuesday, and the public was admitted free from Thursday.

PAINTINGS ON CHINA, &c.—An interesting exhibition of paintings on China, plates, and plaques, of original designs, by artists and amateurs, has been opened at Messrs. Howell and James's New Art Potteries Galleries, 5, Regent-street. The exhibits include works to which prizes and medals have been awarded. The works are original ; with few exceptions they are exhibited by the artists themselves, and are for sale at the net prices named in the catalogue. Among the amateurs the prize of ten guineas was gained by Mrs. George Stapleton, for an arbutus on monochrone, and another work, yellow azaleas on brown ground, both being admirable specimens of flower painting. In the professional class, the prize of fifteen guineas was secured by Miss Linnie Watt, who shows four pictures of exquisite beauty, illustrative of the four seasons. The admission of ceramic works of art to the Royal Academy being precluded, hence the present exhibition. The number of the ceramic paintings is 548 ; and amongst these are many very beautiful specimens. It is understood that the artists will make replicas of their designs in ceramic art for those who desire duplicate productions ; so that the most elegant services can be provided for the dining-table or the sideboard. We recommend an early visit to this splendid collection of china-ware, now on view at Messrs. Howell and James's.

SIR SALAR JUNG.—Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales gave a dinner at Marlborough House on Tuesday evening to his Excellency Sir Salar Jung, G.C.S.I., at which the following were present :—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke and Duchess of Manchester, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, the Marquis and Marchioness of Salisbury, the Earl Granville, the Earl of Northbrook and Lady Emma Baring, Lord and Lady Suffield, General Lord Strathnairn, General Lord Napier of Magdala, Lord and Lady Lawrence, the Right Hon. Sir Bartle and Lady Frere, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Lady Northcote, the Right Hon. Sir Seymour FitzGerald, the Hon. B. Disraeli, Major-General Sir D. and Lady Probyn, Sir Joseph and Lady Fayrer, Sir Louis and Lady Mallet, the Rev. W. L. Onslow, Capt. FitzGerald (in attendance on the Duke of Connaught), Colonel Tyrwhitt (in attendance on the Duke of Cambridge), Nizam Yar Jung Bahadoor and Captain Clerk (in attendance on Sir Salar Jung), the Hon. Mrs. Coke, General Right Hon. Sir W. Knollys, Lieut.-Colonel Teesdale, and Mr. F. Knollys. The following had the honour of being invited in the evening:—Mir Regazath Ali, Syed Hoossein, Kamkamood Dowlah, Ghalib Jung Bahadoor, Mukaddum Jung Bahadoor, Moosallum Jung Bahadoor, Mir Tahavoor Ali Azim Ali Kham, Syed Ali Khan Bahadoor, Yasin Ali, and Mr. Arthur Oliphant. A selection of music was performed by the band of the Grenadier Guards, under the direction of Mr. Dan Godfrey.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, June 19.—THE SLAVE CIRCULAR.—Mr. FORSYTH asked the First Lord of the Admiralty whether, considering the report of the Royal Commission on Fugitive Slaves, it was intended to withdraw the second Admiralty Circular on the subject, and to issue fresh instructions based on the recommendations of the Royal Commission.—Mr. W. HUNT: The report has not yet been circulated among members, and when it has been so circulated, and members have had sufficient time to consider its contents, her Majesty's Government will take an opportunity of stating what course it is intended to pursue.

THE INDIAN TARIFF.—Lord G. HAMILTON, in reply to Mr. FAWCETT, said that papers were distributed on Saturday containing the despatch in which Lord Northbrook replied to Lord Salisbury's despatch of Nov. 11 on the subject of the Indian tariff.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, June 22.—THE SLAVE TRADE.—The Marquis of SALISBURY called attention to the expediency of making provision for the more effectual punishment of the subjects of native princes in India who are guilty of the offence of slave-trading. It had been pointed out by Dr. Livingstone that the slave trade on the coast of Africa was mainly in the hands of, as he phrased it, British Indian subjects. This was not exactly accurate. In some degree no doubt it was in the hands of those under British rule, but it was chiefly managed by the subjects of the native princes. Until lately it was believed that the laws against slave trading could be enforced at Mozambique, Zanzibar, and other places in those parts, as much against the subjects of native princes in alliance with the Queen as against those directly under her Majesty's rule; but in 1874 a subject of the Rao of Cutch was brought before the High Court of Bombay, at the instance of the consul at Zanzibar, on a charge of slave-trading, and it was then decided by Chief Justice Gibbs that there was no legal power of trying the subject of a native prince for offences against English law. The result was that the man had to be released, and there was an obvious failure of justice. Therefore he had now to present a Bill designed to remedy that defect, and it would provide that the laws against slave-trading on the African coasts should be enforceable in the High Court of Bombay against the subjects of independent princes in alliance with her Majesty as well as against British Indian subjects proper. The Bill would also enable the Court to take evidence by commission, and would enact that all classes of Indian subjects should be tried under the same code, instead of, as now, under two different laws. These might appear insignificant proposals, but they were really necessary in order to get at those men of superior skill and civilisation who were the chief offenders in the matter of making victims of the population of African villages. If they could reach by penalties those men they would do more to stop the slave trade than in any other way. The subjects of the Rao of Cutch had gained an unenviable notoriety in this matter, and if the Bill passed a considerable check would be put on their operations.—Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY thought the consent of the Rao of Cutch to the proposals of the Bill should be procured.—Earl GRANVILLE said that certain powers of an extraordinary character were required to meet an extraordinary evil, and he was sure the House would support the noble marquis in doing whatever was necessary.—The Bill was read a first time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 22.—THE SLAVE TRADE.—Sir H. D. WOOLF gave notice of his intention to ask whether her Majesty's Government had received any reports bearing upon the subject of the Slave trade in the Red Sea.

PROMOTION AND RETIREMENT.—Mr. G. HARDY informed Mr. PRICE that the Royal Commission on Promotion and Retirement in the Army were sitting as often as possible, and he hoped their report would soon be ready, but he could not tell when it would be laid upon the table.

SLAVE TRADE IN ZANZIBAR.—Mr. BOURKE stated, in reply to Sir JOHN KENNAWAY, that two proclamations had lately been issued by the Sultan of Zanzibar with the view of checking the slave trade. It was not usual to issue more than one annual paper on slavery, but in consequence of the interest felt in the subject, some special papers would shortly be issued.

THE INDIAN MUSEUM.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in answer to Mr. FAWCETT, said he had heard from time to time suggestions for the erection of an Indian and Colonial Museum, and he had heard it suggested among other plans that the museum should be erected on the Victoria Embankment, but no definite proposal had been made to the Government.—Mr. FAWCETT further asked whether the Government would undertake to inform the House from what source such museum would be supported before agreeing to any proposal.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER: The hon. gentleman had better ask that question again.—Mr. FAWCETT: I shall.

BY

ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery.

Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, A.D. 1858; with the date of each historical event according to the various eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Offices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asia, and Europe.

A RELIEVO MAP OF INDIA.
BY HENRY F. BRION.

In Frame, 21s.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefly of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indian geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of interm ngled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the sea-level. To the historical as well as the geograph cal student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a neat frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily coloured picture, and its price, a guinea, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON.

At the Paris Exhibition of 1867, THREE Prize Medals were awarded to CROSSE and BLACKWELL, for the marked superiority of their productions.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

COCKLE'S PILLS,

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 70 years for
INDIGESTION.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 76 years for
BILIOUS AFFECTIONS.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 76 years for
LIVER COMPLAINTS.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 14s. each; postage, free.

LAMPLOUGH'S

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,
Second door from Hatton-garden, London, and of all respectable Chemists. In Bottles, 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 21s.

EPPS'S COCOA.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See article in the Civil Service Gazette.
